NLRB Orders Union Vote At Harvester, Steel Plants

Election Also Decreed For River Rouge, Lincoln Factories Of Ford Company

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

In a speedy move of cooperation with the new National Defense Mediation Board and the OPM, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday acted on the agencies' recent requests by ordering collective bargaining elections in five International Harvester Co. factories and the Lackawanna, N. Y., plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

At the same time, the board issued its anticipated order for similar elections at the River Rouge and Lincoln plants of the Ford Motor Co., where C. I. O. employes, now on strike, are seeking collective bargaining rights.

One of the terms on which the two-day strike in February at the Bethlehem company plant was settled was the "exploration" by the OPM of the possibility of an NLRB election. An issue of the dispute was the company's refusal to give sole bargaining rights to the striking C. I. O. Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, which petitioned for an election five days after concluding the strike. The unusual speed with which the Labor Board issued the election order, it was assumed, was in part the result of defense officials' pleas for action.

One Union at Lackawanna

A similar promise, this time by the Mediation Board, was included in an agreement among striking C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee members to return to work two weeks ago in four Harvester plants after six and seven-week strikes.

In the Lackawanna election, the 14,000 workers will vote on whether or not they wish to be represented in collective bargaining by the SWOC. In the five Harvester plants—those at East Moline, Rock Falls and Rock Island, Ill., and the West Pullman and McCormick works in Chicago—workers will elect the FEWOC, an A. F. of L. Federal Labor Union, or neither.

In the Ford elections, where an anticipated force of 85,000 production, maintenance and clerical employes will cast their ballots, they will choose between the C. I. O. United Auto Workers union and an A. F. of L. Federal Labor Union, or neither.

In the River Rouge plant, the board gave workers the same choice, with the addition that some 300 wood and metal pattern makers can select either the U. A. W. or the Pattern Makers League, an A. F. of L. organization.

Not given a place on the ballot was the Ford Brotherhood of America, Inc., despite claims of the union's attorney, at a hearing before the NLRB last Saturday, that the

Navy Patrol Plane Missing With 10 Men

Ship Long Overdue On Trip From Norfolk To Quonsett Point, R. I.

By the Associated Press

The Navy Department said last night a patrol plane, carrying 10 men, was long overdue on a trip from Norfolk Naval Air Station to Quonsett Point, R. I.

The only clew to the missing ship reported by the Navy was this:

About 4 p. m. (eight hours after the plane took off) the naval air station, in an attempt to communicate by radio with the plane, picked up an unidentified message "about a plane being down at sea and putting a lifeboat over."

The department said the missing patrol plane was equipped with rubber boats and flares and carried a radio transmitter and receivers.

The search, extending from Norfolk to Narragansett, was being directed by Admiral E. J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic fleet. Coast Guard stations all the way north from Cape Henry, Va., likewise were engaged in the hunt.

In addition to the planes and surface ships already ordered out by the Navy, the department said, the Lakehurst Naval Air station would send out a non-rigid airship and several other lighter-than-aircraft at daylight. These ships were designated as the non-rigid airship TC-14 and the others as the K2, G1, L1 and L2.

The patrol plane took off on a course which would cross the eastern shore of Maryland. The plans were to cruise along the coast enroute to Quonsett Point.

Five planes from the Norfolk base combed the coastline during the afternoon and returned at 9 p. m. without sighting the bomber, which was piloted by Ensign G. N. Blackburn, U. S. Naval Reserve, of Lenni Mills, Pa.

Mountain War Won't Be Like That in France, Berlin Admits

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), April 8.—Germany's air force continued to clear the way for the Reich's mechanized divisions fighting on a double Balkan front, and the German ground troops apparently were more than 30 miles inside Yugoslavia today, it was reported here.

On the Greek front, authorized sources reported, the Germans were driving down the Struma River Valley, but there were no late reports from that area.

Correspondents were told "To expect little now—tomorrow you may learn considerable more."

An American-made Martin bomber was reported to have wounded several German workers when its guns opened fire in a low-flying attack over German territory on the southeast front.

Airports Blasted

German bombers operating over Yugoslavia were said to have destroyed airports, railway junctions and lines.

Meanwhile, Belgrade suffered yesterday afternoon its fifth air attack. New fires were started and barracks destroyed.

Nine "enemy" planes were claimed shot down in that area. The radio, telegraph and telephone facilities of Belgrade were crippled. Telephone connections betwen Belgrade and the front were reported cut off.

Germans thought the bombardment of rail junctions interrupted movement of troops and materials in Yugoslavia, which they pointed out has comparatively few transit lines and they are very vulnerable ot air attacks.

Nazis Issue White Book

As in the Polish and Scandinavian phases of the war, Germany issued a White Book in an effort to justify her action in the Balkans. The book charged Yugoslav and Greek policies in 1939 were "contrary to neutrality."

The Germans claimed to have discovered so-called secret documents at La Charite, France, purporting to outline allied plans for opening a these documents was published to-Balkan front. The first of nine of Frederic G. Rita, jr., 20, West Point cadet and son of a special assistant to the Attorney General, yesterday died at his home in Chevy Chase, Md., of a bullet wound in the temple. Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Police said the youth was found by his father in the bedroom of his home at 6 Lenox Street, with a .22-caliber rifle beside him. The shooting occurred while the youth's parents were waiting downstairs to take him for a ride.

The young cadet had been under treatment for a nervous condition.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, 37-year-old Vermont State legislator, author, lawyer and former newspaperman, was elected president of American University last night at a special meeting of the board of trustees.

He will take office May 1, succeeding Dr. Edward W. Engel, who has been acting president since November.

Dr. Douglass received his Ph. D. at the University of Cincinnati in 1931 as a Taft fellow in government and public law and attended the University of Berlin from 1931 to 1933 as a fellow in economics and jurisprudence.

He served as a reporter on the Cincinnati Post for two years after getting his A. Greek Division Is Wiped Out, Italy Claims

Yugoslavs Bombed By Fascist Planes, Communique Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 7.—Premier Mussolini's hard-pressed legions developed a new war today with Yugoslavia and after a counterattack on their old enemies, the Greeks, reported a Greek division virtually wiped out.

Greeks trying to drive through to a junction with Yugoslav forces near Lake Ochrid in Albania were turned back in a two-day battle which started even before the Axis war with Yugoslavia opened, said Stefani, official Italian news agency.

The Greek division which launched the offensive was so shattered it had to be withdrawn from the line, Stefani added.

Violent bombing attacks against Yugoslav bases on the Adriatic marked the direct hostilities against Yugoslavia, Stefani said, while Italian dive-bombers were reported to have hit hard several British mechanized formations in Yugoslav and Greek territory.

The air force's onslaught followed up attacks yesterday in which the high command said the naval bases at Split and Kotor, an arsenal at Theodo, near Kotor, and an air base at Mostar were pounded.

Two steamers at Split and one at Kotor were declared sunk, while two destroyers, one at Theodo and

Turkey Gets 'Considerable' British Arms

May Declare War And Let English Use Bases, Istanbul Says

By the United Press

Istanbul, April 7. — Informed sources said tonight that a "considerable quantity" of British war material had arrived in Turkey recently and British quarters hinted that the Turks might declare war soon.

Any such declaration was explained as designed to permit Britain to use Turkish soil, at least for air bases, and to enable the British to use the Dardanelle as a route to the Black Sea.

If Turkey made possible such operations by a formal declaration, she would maintain a military defense without taking any initiative, informants said.

The new urgency for British freedom of action in Turkey and the Dardanelles arose from the German attack on Greece and Yugoslavia. As the ally of the two and an active combatant on the new war front, Britain's strategic position would be enhanced greatly by the opportunity of sending warships into the Black Sea to harass the enemy-occupied coast and of operating air fleets from secure bases.

The British war material said to have been sent into Turkey reportedly included mechanized equipment captured from the Italians in

Inquiry Opens

Next 100 Days Are Crucial In U. S. Defense, Biggers Says

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The first of three new congressional inquiries into the defense program was told at its opening session yesterday by the production chief of the Office of Production Management that "every citizen of the United States should realize that the safety of the Nation may depend on what we all do in the next 100 days."

John D. Biggers, the witness, said that "some manufacturers" are unwittingly tending to impede the armament effort by creation of "artificial shortages." And some union leaders, he added, are slowing down the program by sponsoring "unnecessary strikes."

Both groups, he informed the House Military Affairs Committee, are "prompted by selfishness."

He revealed that in about 100 days, "real mass production" will begin for "many vital items" in the defense program. Although he did not say so, it is understood that he was referring particularly to planes, guns, tanks and powder.

Biggers, who heads the division of OPM directly responsible for producing armaments to make America "the arsenal of democracy," declared that "some manufacturers are accumulating unwarranted stocks of critical materials" and thus are "unconsciously creating" shortages which are "bound to slow down the defense program and force priorities."

While observing that "public disapproval" of defense strikes might result in Government restrictions of the rights of labor, Biggers strongly indicated that he felt legislation would be undesirable except as a last resort.

The committee opened its hearings with a statement by Secretary of Labor Perkins; but on her plea that she had pressing engagements connected with the strike situation, questioning of her was put off until tomorrow.

William H. Davis, vice chairman of the National Mediation Board and chairman of the panel that settled the Allis-Chalmers strike, will testify this morning, and Sidney Hillman, associate director of OPM,

Struma Valley Forces Check Blitz, Destroy Many Tanks

By Ben Ames.
United Press Staff Writer

Athens (Tuesday), April 8. Greek forces on the Struma Valley front have hurled back "vicious German onslaughts" and destroyed many Nazi tanks, the high command reported early today as the Greeks cheered news that their Yugoslav allies have invaded both Hungary and Albania.

The Greek high command announced that it had abandoned western Thrace, near the Turkish frontier, in order to "avoid bloodshed," but that two Greek forts there still were holding out to prevent the Germans from moving heavy materials across the territory.

The forts called Echinos and Numphea, are holding out under firce German assaults and "preventing thep assage of heavy enemy materials," the communique said.

Two Greek forts in the Struma Valley fell to the Germans "after fighting to the last man," and in another fort the Germans were wiped out in hand-to-hand combat in its underground passages, it was stated.

(Turkish reports indicated that the Germans had cut Greece off from Turkey by sweeping down to the Aegean Sea at several points.)

Nazis Dropping Parachutists

Greek troops at the Greek-Bulgarian frontier met the full force of Germany's blitz assaults Monday as "scores of thousands" of British troops took over battle positions facing the Germans.

Formations of British planes struck deep into Nazi-occupied Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania in bombing attacks on the vitals of the German invasion, including the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, and shot down five Nazi Messerschmitt planes in air battles above the Struma Valley.

The Germans were said in Greek radio reports to be dropping parachute troops. Many were captured, a Greek spokesman said.

R. A. F. Batters Nazis in Sofia, Sets Big Fires

Bombers Lay Waste Railway Yards And German Factories

By the Associated Press

London, April 7.—The Royal Air Force has delivered a savage open blow by bomb and machine gun at the German army and arsenal in Sofia, capital of Bulgaria and major base for the attempted Nazi Balkan blitzkrieg, the British announced tonight.

Official announcements issued here and from the middle-east R. A. F. general headquarters in Cairo described a raid in force last night on the German military concentrations in the city. They told of thunderous explosions and big fires at the main railway station, railway junctions and yards, warehouse and motor-transport shops and a devastating assault on a big Nazi-controlled factory.

Moreover, every one of the raiders came home to base—presumably in Greece, it was announced.

Troops Machine-Gunned

(The Sofia radio reported several persons killed when a score of bombs were dropped on a school and several buildings.)

The British government simultaneously laid the groundwork for similar attacks on the German troops who are pouring through Hungary into Yugoslavia, breaking off diplomatic relations with Hungary.

The official report of the raid on Sofia, barely 150 miles by airline from Greek Salonika, said:

"Many explosions occurred and one very large fire and several smaller fires were caused.

"In one case trucks were seen to be hurled into the air."

Then, turning home, the British planes dived low to machine-gun German troops which are pouring into the Struma Valley.

"Considerable damage was caused," said a communique.

The German army entered Sofia only last March 1, when Bulgaria

Hull Indicates Belief Russian Break With Nazis Is Near

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Hull indicated the belief yesterday that Soviet policy was shifting as a result of dawning comprehension of the Nazi menace and again charged that Germany seeks world dominance. Coincidentally, moves reportedly were under way to implement the announced policy of shipping American arms to Yugoslavia.

The secretary said at his press conference he thought the new Soviet-Yugoslav nonaggression pact makes clearer that virtually all nations have become acutely aware of the nature of this movement of conquest. Its purposes, he stated, were to dominate peoples everywhere by military force.

Insofar as the pact demonstrates this growing Russian realization, he emphasized, it was encouraging. The agreement, he thought, spoke for itself and he did not care to discuss its clauses.

In some quarters it was thought that, in making his comment, Hull sought to remind the Stalin government of the danger to Russia that would be amplified if Germany, already in contact with Soviet forces

Serbs Capture Scutari, Drive Toward Magyar Town of Szeged

By the United Press

London (Tuesday), April 8. Yugoslav forces were reported early today to have invaded both Hungary and northern Albania in swift counteroffensives against Germany and Italy.

The Yugoslav radio at Ljubljana, capital of Slovenia, announced that the Yugoslav army, smashing down upon Benito Mussolini's army in Albania, had driven 5 miles across the frontier and captured the town of Scutari, 20 miles from the Adriatic coast.

The Italian forces in Albania thus came under a huge pincers assault of Greek forces in southern Albania, the Yugoslavs in the north, and British submarines and light naval forces menacing Italy's sea communications off the Albanian Adriatic coast.

Another radio report said the Yugoslavs, striking back at the German invaders, had invaded Hungary and were driving toward the town of Szeged, 100 miles north of Belgrade where the Yugoslav, Hungarian and Rumanian frontiers meet.

Nazi Losses "Appalling"

(The German radio heard in New York admitted that the Yugoslavs with support of British planes, were "continuing to hold a small section of Hungarian territory" where a number of British bombers and fighters had been shot down.

(A British broadcast, heard by N. B. C., said that German attacks on Yugoslavia had been repulsed and that in one sector "the German losses in dead and wounded were appalling."

(The British "reports from the fighting front" said that 12 more heavy German tanks and the crews had been captured by the Yugoslavs as well as "a large number of additional Germans." The tanks were said to have been captured in the course of a heavy Nazi attack on Yugoslav entrenchments.

(Another radio report said the Yugoslavs had occupied the Italian port of Zara on the Yugoslav Dalmatian coast. Zara is a tiny bit of Italian-owned territory on the Yugoslav coastline 100 miles south of Fiume.)

[Reuters, British news agency, reported an unconfirmed Athens dispatch to an independent French agency which said Yugoslav troops have penetrated Bulgarian territory, capturing several tanks and taking prisoners, according to the Associated Press.]

Artillery Prepares Way

The Yugoslav army drove into Albania in a strong offensive after heavy artillery preparations, it was reported.

The Italian forces in Albania, estimated at about 350,000, are dependent upon uncertain air and sea communications across the Adriatic, where British submarines and presumably other naval forces are operating.

Hungary Bombed, Threatens War

Budapest, April 7 (U.P.).—British and Yugoslav warplanes today brought the war to Hungary with heavy bombing of militarily important railroads, airdromes and at least six towns where ten of the raiders, all identified as Yugoslav army planes, were said to have been shot down.

The Hungarian government threatened to enter the war openly on the side of Germany and Italy and sent a stiff official protest to Yugoslavia saying that the "widest possible" precautionary steps were being taken as result of the aerial bombardments.

[Great Britain notified the Hungarian government today that it had decided to break off diplomatic relations, the Associated Press reported.

[The British minister, Owen St. Clair O'Malley, called on Foreign Minister Laszlo de Bardossy and informed him of London's decision.]

Hungary Not at War

The Hungarian foreign office in its protest handed to the Yugoslav minister, who remains in Budapest along with the Greek envoy, asserted that Hungary was not at war with Yugoslavia and had done everything in her power to prevent such incidents as the bombings.

"Hungary has been strong when she cooperated with Germany or Italy, or both," the foreign office statement said.

"'At the side of these friends, Hungary never has been disappointed. On the other hand, she repeatedly has found herself in trouble when she believed in the promises of British and French rulers."

Two bombs hit a passenger train at Szentgottard, killing a woman and a 5-year-old boy, the official's newspaper, Magyar Orszag said.

Pecs Airdrome Bombed

Six bombs were dropped on the Hungarian airdrome at Pecs, 30 miles north of the Yugoslav border, where there were two separate raids. Two Yugoslav planes were said to have been shot down at Pecs, where several persons were reported wounded.

Several attacks were made in the region just east of Gratz. Both Zormend and Szentgottard, east of Gratz, reported attacks and a Yugoslav bomber was said to have attacked oil transport at Szentgottard.

Hungarian fighter planes were reported to have shot down a Yugoslav bomber at Villany. Another Yugoslav bomber was said to have crashed at Siklos.

Casualties were reported in Pecs, Kormend, Villany and Siklos, according to newspaper accounts.

Air raid sirens screeched in Budapest at 10:45 a. m. today. No planes could be seen over the capital and the all-clear came 15 minutes later.

The morning's air raid alarm came shortly after 200,000 Hungarians had gathered in the streets of Budapest for the funeral procession of Count Paul Teleki, Hungarian premier who committed suicide last week because he could not "face the specter of war."

The Teleki funeral was attended by representatives of all classes as well as foreign diplomats. Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, led the cortege and Premier de Bardossy delivered a eulogy.

Premier Bardossy sent a telegram to Premier Mussolini stressing Hungary's friendship for Italy.

Libya.

The first effect of the Balkan war on Turkey was the breaking of telephone communications with all European counties. The lines cross Bulgaria, from which German forces are operating.

Most members of the German colony were remaining in Istanbul.

Turkish policy is predicated on the the nation's alliance with Britain. Should the German drive veer eastward it almost certainly would plunge Turkey into the war. Responible observers believed that if the country's statesmen should decide that Turkey was next on the German list they would enter the war while Yugoslavia and Greece still are in the field.

The Turkish cabinet held a three-hour meeting today with Dr. Refik Saydam, the premier, presiding. It carried on discussion, begun earlier, of the effect the Balkan developments would have on Turkey.

Pleased by Soviet Attitude

Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu will address the People's Party tomorrow in secret session. The National Assembly will meet Wednesday.

The Turks were said to have found great satisfaction in what was described as indications of growing enmity between Russia and Germany.

Responsible sources viewed the Russian Yugoslav alliance as a sign that the Soviets bitterly resented Nazi aggression and that the resentment ultimately might array Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin against each other.

British sources said British generals were continuing a scheduled program of conferences with the Turkish general staff.

Darwin Here to Coordinate U. S.-British War Research

Heads Central Scientific Office of Purchasing Commission in Capital

Dr. Charles Darwin, grandson and namesake of the author of the Darwin theory of evolution, arrived in Washington from London yesterday.

Dr. Darwin, a physicist who heads Britain's bureau of standards, is here as liaison man between British and American scientists who are seeking new weapons of war. He will be director of the Central Scientific office of the British Purchasing Commission.

The scientific developments he will study are war secrets and he cannot discuss them, he said, in an interview at the Willard Hotel. But he made it clear that the two countries are exchanging with complete freedom all the fruits of their scientific delving.

His own field is atomic physics. Research in this and other theoretical matters has come to a standstill in Britain, he revealed. The theories have been put aside, unless they can be applied to the immediate and pressing needs of the war machine.

"Nearly all the scientists are doing war work," he said. "They are continuing with research, but for a different purpose.

"We'll come back to the long term, theoretical research, as soon as it is any use. It isn't any use at present. Nobody would have his heart in it now, you know. Most of us are awfully pleased to be able to help where we can."

CHARLES DARWIN

capitulated formally to the Axis, and since the dawn of Sunday morning it has been the military reservoir for the drive of Panzer divisions toward the Yugoslavian Vardar Valley.

This is Germany's intended pathway to Salonika and the Aegean Sea.

It was not the first evidence that Britain is backing her promises of Balkan aid with steel; indeed, an earlier Middle Eastern R. A. F. communique told tersely how a small force of British fighters tore into a big formation of German planes over Bulgaria, downed five and damaged others, getting away unscathed.

Another R. A. F. bomber formation pounded away in Albania.

From the meager reports available, Britons deduced that Allied and Axis forces were locked in a fierce struggle. They got this impression mainly from Berlin's insistence that no swift German victory could be expected and from Athens reports of successful resistance by the British-backed Greeks.

There was an impression that the first aim of the imperial army will be to push the Italians out of Albania and then to defend Greece, Albania and much of Yugoslavia until Britain is ready to start a final offensive into German territory, possibly in combination with a spring across the English Channel from the home front.

With this in mind, the British press carried an undercurrent of warning that a long, grim struggle is ahead. Dovetailed, too, with these hopes of ultimately carrying the war to the Reich was the assertion in the House of Commons today by Sir Kingsley Wood chancellor of the exchequer, that by another year Britain will have ordered more than $20,000,000,000 in materiel from the United States.

Typical of the informed comment was this from the Times:

"The gravity of the hour needs no emphasis. But though anxious and hazardous days are in store, comparison with the situation of a year ago gives ample grounds for reasoned and cautious hope."

The British decision to break off relations with Hungary and withdraw its mission from Budapest was communicated to the Hungarian foreign office this evening by the British minister, Owen St. Clair O'Malley. British-Allied Yugoslavia and Hungary already were engaged in an undeclared war, with Hungarians saying that ten Yugoslav planes had been shot down over Hungary with antiaircraft guns.

Hungary a Nazi Base

It was the outcome of knowledge that Hungary is now openly a base for German operations, chiefly against the area north of Belgrade. British missions already have left Bulgaria and Rumania, the other Balkan countries from which the German invasion is springing.

Hungarian Minister Barcza was informed of the decision at the Foreign Office this morning, it was stated, at about the same time that British department was issuing a formal statement welcoming Yugoslavia as "a resolute and powerful ally."

"We will conduct the war in common and we will make peace only when right has been vindicated and law and justice are again enthroned," said the statement.

the other at Kotor, were hit.

The most damaging return blow acknowledged by Italy in the new phase of hostilities was at Scutari, in northern Albania, which was bombed.

Stefani said the Yugoslav coup d'etat of March 27 had its "first manifestation" with a Greek attack against several strongholds of the Ninth Italian Army in which "the enemy hoped to make contact with the Serbian army."

Territorial Claims Revived

This offensive was halted, the dispatch said, and then "our troops in violent counterattarks unleached in two days of the most hard fighting captured numerous prisoners besides immense booty in arms, munitions and defensive implements. The drive of our troops was marvelous."

Political circles indicated Italy's long dormant but never abandoned claims to Yugoslavia's Dalmatian coast, which figured in the first World War, would be revived.

Yugoslav journalists and legation staff members were expected to leave Rome by a diplomatic train tomorrow night. They probably will return by way of Germany and Austria, but difficulties were being experienced in arranging safe passage through the battle lines.

Most of the Italian diplomatic staff had left Belgrade before hostilities started, but the Minister and a correspondent of Stefani were still there.

day in White Book No. 7.

It consisted mostly of letters and telegrams said to have been exchanged by Generalissimo Maurice Gamelin and Gen. Maurice Weygand, commander of the forces in Syria, and the French military attaches in Athens and Belgrade.

None of the documents thus far made public was signed by Yugoslav or Greek executives, but they purported to show that from the French viewpoint Prince Paul and the Yugoslav general staff desired a "closer connection" with the French military; that Greek leadership urged steamship operators "personally" to charter ships to England; that Greece with the cooperation of Yugoslavia would support a landing of an Allied expeditionary force at Salonika; that Serbia would permit passage of Allied war materials to Poland; that a new front in the Balkans was designed to curb Germany commercially and add a hundred divisions of Balkan troops to Allied strength.

Present German operations, it was stated emphatically before a "news blackout" was invoked until after midnight, were progressing according to schedule in both Yugoslavia and Greece, though the tempo must be slower than in the west last spring, and it was said that victory in the end was certain.

"Mountain warfare," observed the authoritative commentatory Dienst Aus Deutschland, "is no blitzkrieg."

"Operations corresponded to German expectations," it added. "Since the German movements still are in a stage of development, authorized military sources at present divulge only scant details regarding the direction and the space gained."

Greeks Hold Nazis to Standstill on Struma Valley Front

Salonika, had achieved more victories.

"With strong offensive action the Greeks captured important organized enemy positions in Albania, taking 500 prisoners and abundant war materials," today's communique said.

The high command said that the Germans had been held in check on the Struma Valley front despite "vicious attacks supported by concentrated artillery fire, aerial bombings and tank assaults.

The "most important regions" remain in Greek hands, it was said.

"Another enemy attack against Fort Lyse (in eastern Macedonia at the Greek-Bulgarian frontier) supported by tanks was repulsed and many tanks were destroyed by our artillery," the communique said.

Earlier Greek reports had told of "severe losses" inflicted upon the Germans on the northern front.

The Greeks took cheer from the British air force's attacks on Germany's invasion bases in Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania, the movement of British, Australian and New Zealand troops—tanned heroes of the British victories in North Africa—into the fighting lines and the reports of the Yugoslav successes.

Into their new battle positions the British troops are moving strong artillery batteries, light and heavy tanks and large air force units.

The British arrived early in March when the German Reichswehr pushed through Bulgaria to the Greek frontier and ever since have been pouring in from transports and warships at fantastic speed, without losses, although German and Italian planes repeatedly tried to attack the convoys at sea.

(The Yugoslav town of Sarajevo, the "birthplace" of the World War, was said by the German radio to lie almost in ruins after fierce Stuka dive-bombing attacks. Sarajevo is southwest of Belgrade.)

The official Greek spokesman said six German planes were shot down by the Greeks and some of their crews captured when the Luftwaffe carried out "pamphlet raids" on Salonika, Drama, Comotoni and the Island of Thasos. The leaflets told the Greeks that the Germans "come as friends and have no desire to harm you."

A half dozen Greek towns were said to have been bombed yesterday with civilian dead while other German planes carried out the leaflet raids.

The Greek radio jubilantly reported British air force attacks on Sofia and the Bulgarian frontier town of Kyustendul, 75 miles north of the Greek frontier and close by the Yugoslav border, as well as on objective in Rumania, including the Timisoara railroad station and military objectives in Hungary.

The Greek radio said, in describing the shooting down of the five Messerschmitt fighters and the damaging of several others over Bulgarian territory, that the "Royal Air Force has tasted first blood" in Germany's blitzkrieg against Greece. The British pilots, it was said, "went out looking for trouble."

The two Greek forts which fell were Istinbey and Kelkaya in the Struma valley "which fought to the last man" before they were "destroyed and gave way," the Greek high command said.

The heaviest fighting was in Rupel Pass of the Rhodope Mountains about 50 miles northeast of Salonika, where Greek positions were "repeatedly attacked by tanks and aviation and where heavy artillery fire repulsed the enemy," the high command said.

In the Nevrokop heights, it was added, the Germans "after intensive efforts, succeeded in entering Fort Perithori and after heavy fighting in the subterranean passages where the Germans entered they wese decimated and the fort remains in Greek hands."

(The Greek radio heard in London said that north of Nevrokop a Greek officer blew up a bridge while German tanks were crossing it, destroying the bridge and tanks.

At several points, it was stated officially, the Greeks staged successful counterattacks in order to straighten and improve their lines and positions.

Greek dispatches tonight told of the destruction of German tanks, the taking of some prisoners and a stone-wall defense along the rugged Struma valley front at the frontier with Bulgaria.

To the west the Yugoslav army was understood to be putting up the same fierce and stubborn resistance and to have captured a dozen German tanks.

"The situation is regarded as generally satisfactory," said a Greek military informant during the afternoon.

A communique of the British Royal Rir Force said that Hurricane fighter planes had launched a counterattack on the Germans in Bulgaria, springboard for Adolf Hitler's dawn attacks on Yugoslavia and Greece Sunday, and had shot down five Nazi planes and badly damaged others.

The R. A. F. attack was centered on the Rupel area of Bulgaria in an effort to slow up the Nazi air force and break German communications lines.

The Rupel sector is a key area at the head of the Struma Valley, where the Germans must move through a 6-mile pass in their attack on the Greeks in Macedonia.

Greece's land forces, backed by British troops and equipment, were said in front-line dispatches to have inflicted severe losses on the Germans in the first phase of the fighting, while the R. A. F. attacked the Germans in the air.

Meantime, an R. A. F. communique reported that "a formation of R. A. F. bombers carried out a successful raid on military objectives at Berati in Albania."

"A single enemy aircraft on reconnaissance in the Athens area was shot down in flames," it said, adding that "from all these operations all of our aircraft returned safely."

The Greek high command admitted that one Greek fortification had given way under terrific German artillery and dive-bombing attacks.

It was disclosed that Piraeus, port of Athens, had been bombed with slight damage to one cargo ship and a warehouse.

Massachusetts Avenue Bridge Opening Delayed

Recent heavy rains have forced postponement of the opening of the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge spanning Rock Creek, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst reported last night.

One section of the bridge was scheduled to have been opened yesterday.

"We were delayed by rains," said Whitehurst, "and I'm afraid we won't be able to finish up the first section until later this week."

Whitehurst said he could not specify the opening day, but promised that traffic would be crossing the span "by Easter Sunday." Concrete approaches remain to be laid, he added.

4 Fighter Plane Units to Guard U.S. Coast Cities

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Four new air combat units, specifically charged with defending important coastal cities and industrial areas against bombing attack, were set up by the Army yesterday.

The new "interceptor commands," officials said, will consist of strategically located groups of fast climbing fighters designed to shoot down enemy bombers before they can reach their targets. Closely coordinated with the planes of each of the four units will be an aircraft warning net and mobile antiaircraft batteries.

The development is part of a reorganization which divides the 17 Air Corps wings of continental United States into four air forces. They take the place of the former air districts.

Two on East Coast

Two of the new "interceptor commands" will be on the Atlantic seaboard—one with hearquarters at Mitchel Field, N. Y., and the other at Tampa, Fla.—and the other two on the West Coast, with headquarters at Riverside, Calif., and Fort George Wright, Wash.

While details of the revised setup were not made public, officials said that it results from the first hand study of Great Britain's air defenses made last fall by Maj. Gen. James E. Chaney. Chaney headed the Army's first experimental air defense command, embracing the Northeastern section of the United States.

Several weeks ago, this unit was placed under the General Headquarters Air Force, headed by Lieut. Col. Delos C. Emmons, of Bolling Field here. Ground signal units and antiaircraft batteries of the Coast Artillery, attached to the special command, were transferred along with the planes.

First disclosure of the new setup was orders assigning four brigadier generals to head the interceptor commands of the four new air forces.

Commands Assigned

Brig. Gen. Walter H. Frank was assigned to command the Third Air Force interceptor command at Tampa; Brig. Gen. John C. McDonnell, the interceptor command of the First Air Force at Mitchel Field, N. Y.; Brig. Gen. Millard F. Harmon takes the post with the Fourth Air Force at Riverside, Calif., and Brig. Gen. Carlyle H. Wash that with the Second Air Rorce, at Fort George Wright, Wash.

Maj. Gen. James E. Chaney was given command of the First Air Force, Maj. Gen. John F. Curry the Second, Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount the Third, and Maj. Gen. Jacob E. Fickel the Fourth.

Other defense developments of the day were:

The War Department announced that the new Third and Fourth Armored Divisions will become separate units operating directly under Armored Force Headquarters instead of forming a second armored corps as had been anticipated.

President Roosevelt signed the $4,393,221,174 fifth supplemental defense act, providing funds for 3,600 new bombers and new plants for an army of 4,000,000 men.

Yugoslav Women In D. C. Form Red Cross Unit

Wives and daughters of Yugoslavian officials here yesterday organized a special Red Cross sewing unit in the Yugoslav Legation, 5120 Sixteenth Street Northwest, to make war relief materials to be sent to the Balkan war area by the American Red Cross.

Mme. Constantin Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslavian Minister, is in charge of the new "production unit," which will make sewed garments and hospital supplies.

The group will be similar to the Greek unit, which meets Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at the Red Cross headquarters. Mme. Cimon P. Diamantopoulis, wife of the Minister from Greece, and Mme. De Pasta, wife of the counsellor of the Greek Legation, head the Grecian organization.

Meanwhile, Red Cross headquarters announced yesterday that voluntary contributions for war relief work in Yugoslavia and Greece will be accepted by the District of Columbia chapter, at Seventeenth and D Streets Northwest. More than $1,000,000 of aid materials will be shipped to Yugoslavia in the near future.

Italians Said To Be Wrecking Massaua Port

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 7.—Italian defenders of Massaua, caught between advancing British-French forces and the British fleet units in the Red Sea, were reported to be sabotaging harbor installations and scuttling ships tonight, preparatory to abandoning the Eritrean seaport.

The British and "Free French" forces have made contact with the city's outer defenses without meeting, however, any resistance, indicating that Massana like Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital, would be surrendered without a battle.

The British followed up their occupation of Addis Ababa with cleanup operations north, west and south of the city while on the North African front units of the Army of the Nile made new contact with Germans and Italians east of Bengasi, Libya.

Clash With Germans

Beyond locating the Libyan action in the Gebel Akhdar Mountains, British general headquarters refrained from comment. They emphasized again that the British withdrawals before Axis forces in Cyrenaica had been planned in an orderly manner to areas "chosen for operations in due course."

(Berlin reported that Axis forces were fanning out northeast and southeast of Bengasi, which would point them toward the Gebel Akhdar Range.)

A Fifth-Column technique directed personally by former Emperor Haile Selassie was credited by the British with the rout of Italians from Debra Markos, whose capture was announced earlier today.

The British said an Ethiopian chieftain, nominally siding with the Italians, was left in charge of the town when the Italian commander decided to withdraw his troops southward.

Chief Opens Gates

The chieftain was identified as Ras Hailu, former governor of Gojjam Province, who once was exiled by Haile Selassie but was granted amnesty shortly before Addis Ababa fell to the Italians in 1936.

Hailu opened the gates of Debra Markos to Haile Selassie's men, who pursued the retreating Italians and inflicted at least 100 casualties on them.

Of about 20,000 Italians originally manning Debra Markos, 10,000 were said to have been losses due to desertion and constant air raids.

Britain Levies Income Tax Of 50% to Pay for War

By the Associated Press

London, April 7.—The British government levied a 50 per cent income tax upon its people today to help meet a record wartime budget and disclosed that in the financial year ending March 31, 1942, supplies ordered in the United States would exceed $20,000,000,000.

The all-time high income tax was announced along with a budget estimate of £4,207,000,000 (about $16,828,000,000). It was accompanied by the introduction of a "save-as-you-pay" principle by which the taxpayer was promised part of the increase would be refunded after the war.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood called the budget one of "domestic expenditure" because the figures do not take into account material to come from the United States under the aid-to-democracies bill. The estimate also excluded payments to be made to the United States under existing orders.

Big Increase Over '18

"Amounts of payments in the United States under existing orders," Sir Kingsley Wood said, "before the end of the financial year will be far beyond the figure of £5,000,000,000 ($20,000,000,000) which I have seen mentioned in various quarters."

The new tax of 10 shillings ($2) to the pound ($4) compares with the last war's high of 6 shillings in 1918. It caused little surprise since many had expected an income tax increase in addition to new imposts on liquor and tobacco, which Sir Kingsley avoided on grounds that they would defeat the object of existing taxes on those commodities by reducing consumption.

The "save-as-you-pay" method also affects industry in the plan to repay 20 per cent of the 100 per cent excess profits tax to aid postwar "reconstruction." This was regarded as a concession to big business which long had campaigned against the 100 per cent levy.

Reduction of personal allowances and the exemption limit will sweep an additional 2,000,000 taxpayers into the treasury dragnet and the total effect of the changes is expected to increase revenue £250,000,000. Half of this sum will be credited to the taxpayers for refund.

The increase is expected to bring in more than a third above the record £524,000,000 of taxes collected in the 1040-41 financial year. The remainder of the budget will be financed by borrowing, as in the case of last year, when Sir Kingsley said £3,884,000,000 was spent with £2,462,000,000 of it borrowed.

Personal exemptions were lowered so that a married man must pay tax on all income above £140 annually instead of £170, and single persons on all over £80 instead of £100. Allowance for earned income was reduced from the present one-sixth to one-tenth, with a maximum of £150 permitted.

The income tax is increased from the present level of 42½ per cent, effective as of April 6.

The new taxation, Sir Kingsley explained, means that the "income tax and surtax will reach a maximum of 19 shillings 6 pence in the pound (roughly 20 shillings) on the highest incomes, a figure now approaching in that sphere to the limit of taxation.

"To enjoy a tax-free income of £5,000 ($20,000) a year, it will be necessary to have a gross income of £66,000 ($264,000)."

His reference to the "limit of taxation" prompted general laughter.

Colpoys Dismisses Daniel Haltigan As Deputy Marshal

United States Marshal John B. Colpoys said yesterday that Daniel G. Haltigan, deputy United States marshal at Municipal Court and son of the late Patrick J. Haltigan, reading clerk of the House, has been dismissed "for the good of the service."

Marshal Colpoys would make no further comment on the reason for Haltigan's resignation.

Haltigan claimed he was "summarily dismissed without being given an opportunity to explain."

His dismissal was based on the alleged illegal serving of two writs on a man and his wife, Haltigan said. He declared that his records showed there was valid service.

Petain Says Honor Forbids War on British

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, April 7.—Concluding a series of talks exposing the activities of Gaullists and dissidents in the empire, Marshal Petain in a radio address today said:

'Honor commands that we should undertake nothing against our former allies."

He asked all Frenchmen to give their full support to Admiral Darlan in France and General Weygand in Africa. Under all regimes, he said, the principle of national unity had been defended.

"But now there has appeared a subtle insidious propaganda inspired by Frenchmen which is threatening to break our national union. After a brief lull the work of my government is being attacked, deformed, and calumniated."

The marshal told the French that there could be no division of loyalty and that if France were to be preserved they must support his government. France must be France and to save herself she must preserve: First, the vital sources of supply; and, secondly, the essential centers of the empire. He appealed to Frenchmen in the colonies and abroad to realize this and not to favor anything which would tend to separate the empire from France.

"I am speaking now," he said, "in defense of my government. Five months ago I sent to Africa the most distinguished chief of our army. In Algiers, Tunis, Rabat, and Dakar Gen. Weygand has demonstrated proudly what French union can be. One month ago I entrusted the responsibilities of political power to the chief of our navy. I know his passionate devotion to the honor and integrity of France. Admiral Darlan enjoys my complete confidence.

"To Frenchmen who wonder and doubt, I only ask to consider the work that has been accomplished by my government in the last nine months. Between these achievements and the vague promises of the dissidents they can quickly choose. For a Frenchman there is no other cause to be defended than France. And there are not several different ways of being French.

"If everyone claims the right to devise his own particular method of being patriotic there can be neither fatherland nor nation. You cannot serve France and be against French unity or against the unity of France with the empire. There is today only one France—that which has confided me her hope of salvation. Serve that France with me with all your hearts."

Serb Queen, Ill In London, Cables Legation Here

The Yugoslav Legation announced last night receipt of a cable from Queen Marie of Yugoslavia, ill in London, expressing "full confidence in my son, King Peter, and in the outcome of the present struggle forced upon my people."

At the same time, legation sources said it was understood the Queen was preparing to leave London for home "as soon as her health permits."

"I am deeply moved to hear that Belgrade . . . has been bombed," her message said. "I express my sincere sympathy for poor civilians who might have fallen victims of this inhuman act.

"I am extremely sorry that, owing to my illness, for the time being I have to stay out of my country and be unable to share with my beloved people these critical hours of trial and suffering."

Doubling Merchant Marine School Facilities Studied as Step to Keep Up to Growing Fleet

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Doubling of merchant marine instruction facilities to provide a large reservoir of American cadet officers and crews for the Nation's expanding shipping program yesterday was under consideration by the Maritime Commission.

To assure "a trained and efficient citizen personnel" for ships now building or authorized, a general broadening in the scope of present training activities is expected to be asked. Surveys of needs have been completed and recommendations are pending.

Commission inquiries are said to have disclosed a threatened shortage in the present shipping personnel in addition to a greatly expanded future demand occasioned by increases in emergency and long-range shipbuilding plans.

Defense Drains Man Power

The selective service act and calling up of Naval reservists, in addition to the lure of better paying defense jobs ashore, are reported to have taken a toll of the existing trained American marine man power.

Entirely apart from present needs, it was pointed out that the new ship tonnage now on the way requires the commission to act now to assure an even larger supply of men adequately equipped to handle them.

Last week the President stepped up the emergency construction program another 212 ships by allotting $500,000,000 for vessels and shipways, in addition to the $315,000,000 already appropriated by Congress for an initial 200 "Ugly Ducklings."

This expansion on top of the normal program will present a personnel problem unless training facilities are increased, regardless of whether some of the ships are loaned to England, officials said.

The present three-phase training program calls for short courses for men with previous experience at sea, training of apprentices to fill a reasonable proportion of the vacancies in the unlicensed personnel, and a cadet and cadet officer program to equip men to join those who come up through the ranks in positions among the licensed personnel on merchant vessels.

In complying with the 1936 Merchant Marine Act requirement that ships be manned by an efficiently trained citizen personnel, the commission is believed considering some shortening of the instruction period as well as expansion of training facilities.

More Funds Needed

The present cadet and cadet officer course provides for three years training at sea aboard merchant marine vessels and one year ashore. The Maritime Commission last year assigned 265 cadets to instruction aboard ships after preliminary qualifying training. Recently it invited applications for a new group of enrollments, to be submitted before May 10.

For men with previous service at sea, the commission operates through the Coast Guard and the United States Maritime Service, providing a three-month training course and a one-month "freshening" course.

The commission's apprentice seamen training stations at St. Petersburg, Fla., and Hueneme, Calif., are expected to reduce the training period below the one year required for the first class of apprentice enrollees which completed its course last year at St. Petersburg.

An additional percentage of these trainees are expected to be retained for intensive courss in radio operation at Gallups Island, Boston.

Spokesmen for the commission indicated adequate legislative authority for a general personnel training expansion already exists, but additional funds will be required.

Church Federation Reports Progress In Fund Drive

More than $2,700 was reported last night at the third report meeting of the Federation of Churches' annual sustaining fund drive committee, bringing the total listed thus far in the week-old campaign to $8,000.

Three future meetings were announced by Chairman Walter W. Britt for April 14, 18 and 28. The drive will continue until the $25,000 goal is reached, he said.

Dr. Willia.mS. Abernathy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, asked committee members to strive for a larger number of small contributions instead of concentrating on a few large donations. Largest of the single amounts reported at last night's meeting was $600 from the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

U.S. Can Outdo All in Planes, Knudsen Says

Dallas, Tex., April 7.—William S. Knudsen, cochairman of the Office of Production Management at Washington, today declared that the United States is the greatest industrial producer in the world and can make twice as many planes as any other country. He spoke at dedication ceremonies for North American Aviation Corporation's $7,000,000 factory outside Dallas.

"It was only when Dunkerque opened the eyes of the world that we really began to make airplanes," Knudsen said.

"We have behind us now the greatest technical organization in the world, with management and skilled labor and the cooperation of the people who use it. All this was possible only because we had a great foundation of peacetime industrial training."

The 1,000,000-square-foot plant had its assembly line already moving, crowded with training ships for the Army, and three flight-tested ships were turned over to Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, assistant chief of the Air Corps, as part of the ceremonies.

Knudsen, in a nationally broadcast speech, disclosed that the lend-lease bill would mean a 60 per cent addition to the defense load. The country's resources will not be severely taxed by these demands, he said.

The question of man-hours is the most important part of the defense program, Knudsen added. American industrial skill and initiative will win in the end, he declared, and by preserving the principles of American democracy this country can meet any demand.

Other speakers at the ceremonies included Texas Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, who reported to the cheering crowd that the bill to outlaw violence in labor disputes is now a law of the State, and that he had sent copies of the legislation to the other 47 Governors and the Congressmen at Washington.

Mexico Condemns German Invasions

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, April 7.— Mexico tonight condemned the German invasion of Greece and Yugoslavia.

Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla declared the attack of the Nazi army should "serve as an example and an awakening" to persons who believed "neutrality is a guarantee of peace and salvation."

Central Union Asks Women's Hour Act

The Central Labor Union, representative body of District A. F. of L. locals, last night indorsed a bill to extend the women's 48-hour week law to cover beauty parlor and office workers and require posting of work schedules in establishments. Such a bill is now pending in Congress.

Nominated as delegates to the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor convention to be held at Hagerstown May 19, 20 and 21 were James A. Holden, Truck Drivers' Local No. 639; Frank W. Lee, Machinists No. 174; J. G. Bigelow, Streetcar Men No. 689, and B. C. Dow, Plumbers No. 5. Two delegates will be elected April 21.

Norway Still Pressing War, Envoy Says

Norwegian Minister Wilhelm Morgenstierne pledged yesterday, on the first anniversary of the Nazi invasion of Norway, that his countrymen will "stay in this great fight until victory has been won."

The envoy of exiled King Haakon stated Norway's "irreducible" war aims to be first "to clear Norwegian soil of every foreign invader, then to join with our friends and Allies in muzzling permanently the ruthless aggressors."

In a prepared statement, Morgenstierne said:

"A year ago today there was perpetrated an act which will go down as one of the most dastardly crimes of history. In the dark, early hours of April 9, Nazi Germany, without warning, without the least provocation on our part, attacked peaceful Norway.

"The central fact today on this solemn anniversary is that Norway is formally and actually at war with the country which fell upon us, our soldiers, sailors and pilots are training in Norwegian camps in Great Britain and Canada.

"Our warships are fighting side by side with our friends and allies, the British. Our great merchant marine of about 4,000,000 tons and 25,000 sailors is sailing the seven seas, carrying supplies to our common battle-front.

"Norway is definitely and prominently amongst the nations which did not submit, but challenged the aggressor and fought—and fights now—for freedom, popular government and international decency.

"We are on the right and winning side in this world war of liberty—the most momentous crusade in human history. As sure as day follows night men of good will in all lands shall repel the onslaught of the powers of barbarism and darkness against all that civilization means and is."

New York, April 7.—As an indication of Germany's difficulty in subjugating a democracy, even after the Nazi forces have defeated it on the field of battle, a report for the first year of Norway's existence under Hitler will be made public tomorrow. It is a 64-page pamphlet sponsored by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who was United States Minister to Norway when Germany attacked.

The author of the pamphlet is anonymous for the reason that he is still working against Germany inside Norway. The report is vouched for by Mrs. Harriman, however, in a foreword that says "it gives us a clear view of the flame of revolt burning in Norwegian hearts, of the brave and open acts of rebellion against the foreign tyrant, and the heroic sabotage which is practiced by all types and classes of Norwegians according to their various abilities."

In consequence, the report declares, Germany is forced to maintain an army of 250,000 soldiers in Norway, a ratio of one soldier to every ten Norwegians, and the Gestapo in Norway has been augmented to 10,000, a ratio of 1 of these secret political police to every 250 of population.

Siam May Join Axis, East Indies Hear

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Tuesday, April 8.—Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's "sudden" departure homeward from the European Axis capitals was coupled today with reports that Thailand may join the Axis and sharpen the crisis in the Pacific, centering on Singapore.

Bill Would Penalize Places Barring Soldiers

Legislation making it a Federal offense to debar soldiers and sailors from public carriers and meeting places solely because they might appear for admission wearing uniforms was introduced yesterday by Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhote Island.

His bill would provide a $500 fine for violation and would permit offended service personnel to sue for actual damages plus $100.

Jackson Tells Of Procedure For Objectors

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Jackson announced yesterday procedure for hearing appeals of conscientious objectors to the draft and about the same time Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asserted that there appeared to have been "invasion and violations" of civil liberties in several cases growing out of Selective Service.

At least one "hearing officer" is being appointed to each Federal judicial district, Jackson said. The Attorney Genral expained that the procedure would work this way:

Appeal boards will refer cases of conscientious objectors to the Federal Attorney for the district. If he decides it is one in which the Justice Department has jurisdiction, the Federal Bureau of Investigation will make a study, reporting its findings to the hearing officer who may hold a private hearing if he deems it necessary.

The hearing officer, Jackson said, will be asked to bear in mind that conscientious objectors may be divided into types—those objecting to war because of the tenets of a particular church or religious organization and those who have "their own scruples" to participation in war.

Wheeler made his complaint in a letter to Jackson, but the Attorney General's announcement contained no reference to the Wheeler letter.

Wheeler, who opposed enactment of the draft law, wrote Jackson that he had "come to the conclusion that your preoccupation with other important duties has allowed these abridgements of civil and legal liberties to escape your attention."

The Montana Senator cited the case of a New York draftee, who was forcibly carried to an Army truck and taken to camp.

Wheeler said he knew nothing of the details of the case except that it was reported that the man was a member of a religious sect having conscientious scruples against service in the Army.

Palestine Jews Expected to Join Britain in War

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, April 7.—The entrance of the Jews of Palestine into the war as fighting allies of Great Britain was anticipated by Sir Norman Angell, Nobel prize winner, and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, political representative of the Jewish agency at Geneva, speakers today at the annual spring luncheon of the Women's League for Palestine.

Dr. Goldmann predicted that before the end of the war a Jewish military unit would be fighting in the Near East against the common enemy, and that after the war the Jewish homeland would emerge as an independent member of the world community of nations.

Two thousand women members of the organization presented a check of $31,000 to Dr. Goldmann for welfare work in Palestine, and afterwards collected another $6,500

German Bombers Raid London For First Time in 18 Nights

By the United Press

London (Tuesday), April 8.—German bombs fell on London early today for the first time in 18 nights as Nazi raiders appeared in bright moonlight over virtually every section of Britain.

A heavy attack on Liverpool and the Merseyside developed after midnight, when high explosives and incendiaries crashed into several areas.

Two alarms sounded in London. Nothing happened during the first, in midevening, but during the second bombs fell on the edge of the city amid heavy antiaircraft fire. A hospital on the outskirts was struck.

Although German air activity was the most widespread in some time, the Luftwaffe was not believed concentrating a "Plymouth" attack on any city. Raiders were reported over northwestern, eastern and southwestern England, as well as East Anglia and central Scotland.

A Nazi bomber was shot down at Lytham in southwest Lancashire. Intense antiaircraft fire met successive waves of bombers as they swept over northwest England, but they succeeded in dropping incendiaries and high explosives.

[Antiaircraft units in a northeast coast town were credited with destroying another bomber when observers saw a blinding red flash at the height of the raid, the Associated Press reported. The bomber was believed to have exploded in air.]

Bombs hit a police station, the postoffice and flats in an east coast town, but casualties were believed slight.

Night fighters were heard pursuing and machine-gunning raiders over a west Midlands town after the Nazi planes had dropped about 1,000 incendiaries. Fire parties quickly extinguished the bombs.

A raider dive-bombed a village on the East coast, where approximately 1,000 incendiaries were dropped, most of them into fields and woods. Firemen quickly extinguished two huge fires, and there were no casualties.

High explosives damaged tenements in a Scottish town, causing some casualties.

One patient was killed and two seriously injured in the hospital for the aged and infirm which was struck in London. Other patients were evacuated safely.

The air ministry reported that the great naval center at Brest, where the German sea raiders Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been sheltered, was battered with high explosives by the Royal Air Force Supday night for the fourth time in eight days.

Two German destroyers off the northwest coast of France were struck by torpedoes from coastal command planes Sunday, the ministry added. One of the destroyers was struck amidships and believed sunk while the other was hit on the bow.

Funeral Today For G. S. Paull, Ex-U. S. Official

Funeral services for George S. Paull, forme rhead of the personnel division, Bureau of Internal Revenue, will be today at 2 p. m. from the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Paull, who retired because of physica ldisabilit yin August, 1937, died Sunday at the Emergency Hospital in Annapolis, Md.

Born in West Chester, Pa., in 1870, he came to Washington at an early age to become a clerk in the War Department. There he was assigned to duty in the old Ford Theater, where he narrowly escaped death when that building collapsed in 1893 and killed 22 Government employes.

From 1905 to 1917 he served as appointment clerk in the Postoffice Department. Since 1917 until his retirement he was connected with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, most of this period being engaged in personnel work as head of the appointment divsion. Since then, he had lived in Annapolis.

Mr. Paull leaves his wife, Mrs. Sadie H. Paull, and a brother, Allen H. Paull of California.

District Ordered to Furnish 132 Selectees in Early May

Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, commander of the Third Army Corps Area, yesterday ordered the District to furnish 132 Selective Service inductees in the first ten days of May.

The order came as 34 more District men prepared for induction today in Baltimore as replacement selectees and local Selective Service headquarters prepared to induct 280 registrants between April 11 and 19.

Brig. Gen. Albert Cox said yesterday that 148 Washingtonians would be inducted on April 23. The quota of 132 for the first part of May will be inducted May 9, he said.

Meanwhile, national Selective Service headquarters last night appealed to all qualified physicians and surgeons to apply for commissions in the Medical Corps Reserve.

"Several thousand vacancies" now exist in the corps, according to the War Department. All doctors accepted will be given the grade of first lieutenant, spokesmen said.

Gen. Grant's announcement included quotas for neighboring States as follows:

Virginia—2,078 men, 87 of them Negroes.

Pennsylvania—2,002 men.

Maryland—938 men, 38 of them Negroes.

District of Columbia—132 men.

Two more calls will be made, selective service officials indicated, to cover the two succeeding ten-day periods.

It was indicated by officials that the corps area's total requisition for May might top that for April, when more than 15,000 men were summoned up for active duty.

The majority of the men called up from Maryland and Virginia will go from their reception centers to Fort George G. Meade, where they will fill gaps in the Twenty-ninth Division.

Year's Quota Is 9,747

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—Virginia's eleventh Selective Service call today for 2,078 men for induction between May 1 and 10 leaves 2,051 to be summoned to training before June 30 to fill the Old Dominion's first-year quota of 9,747 men.

Of the 7,606 men included in the calls thus far, 6,626 are whites and 1,070 Negroes. On the basis of population percentage, 1,474 of those remaining to be called before June 30 would be Negroes and 577 would be whites.

Thirty-four more District men will be inducted in Baltimore today as replacement selectees, while local Selective Service headquarters prepares to induct the next regular group of 280 registrants between April 11 and 19. Beginning Friday, white District selectees will be inducted in Richmond, and colored District selectees in Baltimore.

Two other regular induction groups were announced yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, comprising 148 local men on April 23 and 132 on May 9.

In Baltimore yesterday, 22 white District registrants were inducted to replace selectees rejected after physical examination at Fort Meade, and six colored Washingtonians were inducted to replace the same number rejected at Fort Dix, N. J.

Approximately 25 cases will be examined today at a regular meeting of the Draft Appeals Board at noon.

Those to be inducted today in Baltimore, 15 of them white, are:

Board No. 1 (colored)—Rogers Robinson.

Fotitch Seeks Ships to Bear Arms to Serbs

By International News Service

New York, April 7.—His country's "unbroken faith in final victory" was expressed tonight by Constantin Fotitch, Yugoslav Minister, at the end of a whirlwind day spent in New York conferring with British, American and Yugoslav officials and shipowners in an attempt to assemble a fleet to speed lease-lend war materials to Yugoslavia.

"We will go through a difficult time, but the end will be the same as that of the World War," he declared.

In a bitter denunciation of Hitler and his Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, Fotitch declared that his country was united against the foe and "satisfied to leave future moral judgments to humanity, for which we are fighting."

When asked if his homeland looked to Russia for help, Fotitch said, "I do not know."

Transportation is the most pressing problem now, the Yugoslav minister said, shortly before taking a night plane back to Washington.

18 Ships in U. S. Ports

Between 18 and 20 ships, representing 80,000 to 100,000 tons, are in American harbors or are en route to this continent and will be here within the next 48 hours, the plump, middle-aged envoy said. Only one ship, a tanker named Petar, is in New York.

"It has been agreed that Yugoslav ships in American waters shall remain here until we have looked over the situation," he said.

"For obvious reasons I cannot discuss any specific plans," he added. Nor would he explain what success he had met with today in his efforts to assemble a fleet to carry supplies to his countrymen or what plans for transportation had been discussed.

His round face, topped by thinning gray hair, broke into a genuine smile when he discussed the cooperation which he had met on all sides during his hasty trip to New York.

"There has not only been collaboration," he declared, "but friendly encouragement and genuine interest in all quarters. Both in their official capacity and by personal inclination the cooperation of the United States officials in this hour of my country's trial has been of the highest order."

Calls Hitler Insolent

But there was no smile on his face when the Balkan diplomat spoke of the manifestos issued by Hitler and Von Ribbentrop a few hours before the invasion of Yugoslavia began.

"The incredible statement of Hitler is impudent and insolent," he declared. "Hitler refers to Yugoslav officials as criminals and usurpers. The fury of Hitler must be intense at finding that Yugoslavia is not willing to accept his new order, which is based on concentration camps and looting.

"All the leaders of the three great Serbian parties in Yugoslavia, with Dr. Macek, the venerable leader of the Croats, are united in their stand. Certainly, wo do not have anyone in Yugoslavia who has the amount of blood on his hands that Hitler has had since June, 1934.

"We prefer the statement of Secretary of State Hull in which he condemned "the barbaric invasion" of Yugoslavia to the views of Hitler."

Italy's Woes Laid to Graft And Slackers

By the United Press

Boston, April 7.—Graft and slackers contribute to Italy's poor showing in the war, Saville R. Davis, former Rome correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, writes in that newspaper.

The economic mechanism and social system were disrupted by profiteering and shirking of war duty by wealthy and powerful persons who forced the lower classes to bear the brunt of the war effort, Davis wrote.

"Anyone with influence could dodge the draft, "and countless numbers did."

The feeling among the lower classes was strong against the slackers, Davis said, but so many of the stay-at-homes were "grossi pezzi or big shots" that nothing could be done.

Ciano Off "For the Front"

"A friend of mine saw Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano depart 'for the front' at the time when German diplomacy was trying to get rid of him, and the Duce sent him out of the way for a while.

"He left with a convoy of luxurious limousines, accompanied by a number of . . . gay blades and socialites . . . who filled his leisure hour with gaiety. While he was supposed to be at the front, incidentally, he actually spent half of his time at the foreign office."

Davis wrote that Ciano's "bejeweled parties, which continued after the Greek fiasco which he had helped to engineer, were unkindly compared by indignant Italians to some of Nero's whims."

The Monitor correspondent believed there was much graft in the armaments contracts, and graft in the general finances of the government.

Duce Not Involved

"It is only fair to say that Signor Mussolini was not personally involved," Davis said. "I have not heard it said that he himself received graft. He was too honestly convinced in the future of his cause. . . .

"Evidence of graft, and the widespread rumors which surpassed the evidence, long since passed out of the stage of mere scandal. They become important political and social facts. The people were talking against the higher-ups with a rising tide of wrath.

"War taxation had been going on for long years. Always Signor Mussolini told the workers, 'You must sacrifice to make our army strong.'

"But now the people were discovering that the army wasn't strong . . . A murmur rose, ominous and insistent.

"What have you done with our money?" it said.

"There was no answer."

Bill Provides 3-Man Board To Run Armory

A three-man commission to have complete control of the new District Armory would be established under a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Reynolds, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The commission would be composed of the commander of the District National Guard, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox; the president of the Board of Commissioners, and a third member to be selected annually by the Washington Board of Trade.

The purpose of the bill is to provide the Armory with an administration responsible for arrangements for leasing the property for sports events, conventions and other affairs. The commission would have charge of all Armory employes and would be empowered to select a business manager whose appointment could be made outside the civil service system.

A financial report covering its business ventures would be required of the commission annually.

On several occasions, District officials have expressed the opinion that through leasing of its facilities the Armory could be operated, if not at a profit, at least on a self-sustaining basis.

Benefit Auction Of British Goods Set for April 16

A benefit auction of British goods unsold at the three-day Picadilly Arcade last week will be held on Wednesday, April 16, in the Society of the Cincinnati headquarters, 2118 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, it was announced last night by Mrs. Truxtun Beale, chairman of the arcade.

The auction will begin at 10 p. m., with doors opening at 9. Admission will be $1, Mrs. Beale said.

More than $20,000 was netted by the arcade from sales alone, all proceeds going to the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund, the committee announced. All left-overs material not suitable for auction was purchased by members of the 10 subcommittees and donated to local charities.

"Left-over shoes have been sent to the Goodwill Industries, books to the sailors association, dresses to the Thrift Shop, and other items to similar organizations," Mrs. Beale said. Higher-priced goods not sold will appear at the auction.

along hundreds of miles of European border, should consolidate its position in the Balkans through successful military action. Other officials said that they had no information as yet that the Soviet-Yugoslav pact implied Russian willingness to come into direct conflict with Germany.

Secretary Hull also said that the statement of Marshal Petain that French honor forbade any action against France's former allies was very important. The secretary said he would like to say a few words about Marshal Petain's statement. He explained, however, that he thought it better to wait until official confirmation of press reports on the matter are obtained.

With Yugoslav communications broken, perhaps because of destruction of the Belgrade radio station by bombers, and no word yet received from Arthur Bliss Lane, the American minister, nothing more was said by officials yesterday about the Balkan situation.

It was reported, however, that American munitions, including 75 mm. field guns, machine guns, bombs, ammunition and other supplies, were being hurriedly assembled for quick shipment to Yugoslavia in keeping with Secretary Hull's pledge Sunday of armed help for the Yugoslavs.

These supplies will be started overseas, probably in Yugoslav merchant ships now in American ports, by mid-week at the earliest, according to current reports. It was impossible to substantiate such reports, however, because of the Presidential edict that no information is to be made public about shipments of war materials until they reach their destinations because of danger of their destruction by attack.

The British air force operating in the balkans has obtained over 100 American fighter planes in the last sixty days and it was thought unlikely that any American planes would be sent directly to Yugoslavia.

The Government also moved yesterday to do what it could to aid American citizens in Yugoslavia, who were said to number about 2,000. Americans persistently have been warned to leave European danger spots.

President Roosevelt again took a direct hand in diplomatic negotiations yesterday when he conferred at the White House with Gen. Frank Aiken, Eire's minister of defense coordination, and Robert Brennan, Irish minister here.

Gen. Aiken said after the conference that he had laid before the Chief Executive the Irish government's proposal to purchase American arms, ships and a supply of wheat of at least 30,000,000 tons. He said that the President's reaction to the proposal would have to be obtained from Mr. Roosevelt.

Several weeks ago the President inquired how supplies could get to Eire when he was asked about the proposal formally submitted yesterday. It was believed in diplomatic circles here that no American aid for Ireland would be forthcoming unless Eire modifies its stand with regard to the war. American armed aid has been pledged only to those nations actively resisting aggression, and Eire has refused to grant bases to Great Britain.

George de Ghike, the new Hungarian minister, yesterday called upon Secretary Hull for the first time. He said that he had not been informed as yet of British air raids upon Hungarian territory. American officials expressed no surprise, however, at the reports that British planes bombed Hungarian objectives, since Hungary is a passageway for German troops to the Balkans.

Leaders Seek War Incident, Wheeler Says

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 7.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, asserted tonight that "everything has been and is being done by this Administration to create an incident to incite the American people to war."

Reiterating his prediction in Cleveland yesterday that American convoys would be sent to the South Atlantic and perhaps later to war zones, he added in a prepared address:

"I venture the prophecy that when our ships are sent through these same zones—when American boys go to watery graves in the Gulf of Aden—it will be in the name of peace. What sham! What hypocrisy!"

Wheeler spoke before a mass meeting sponsored by the America First Committee, ending the first leg of his cross-country speaking tour.

He declared that the key to this Nation's success is its faith in laws, instead of in men, and charged:

"Today by our acts we are abandoning the philosophy of government of our forefathers by returning to government by men—one man.

"Every time some of us oppose granting more power and more power to the President we are asked, 'Can't you trust the President?' Americans, that is the doctrine that has brought chaos and wars to Europe."

Radio Amateurs Hold Drill On Red Cross Aid in Disaster

An emergency drill of amateur radio stations across the Nation, to demonstrate their effectiveness as a communication system for floods and other disasters, was concluded yesterday when they turned over to Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, reports from approximately 1,000 Red Cross chapters in the East.

Eight members of the American Radio Relay League, who coordinated the picking up of messages in Eastern States, met with Davis to discuss the drill, one of the most extensive of its kind ever attempted, it was said.

It worked like this: Last week the Red Cross mailed to its 3,700 chapters a questionnaire asking for the number of delegates to attend the national convention April 21. Chapter officials Friday night began making contact with short wave operators in their vicinities, requesting them to relay the information to coordinating operators at area headquarters in San Francisco, St. Louis and Washington.

Pointing out that amateur stations arep laying a "vital part" in Red Cross disaster relief operations, Davis said that "the outcome of this drill proves that the Nation's amateurs are on the job, ready for any eventuality."

"One of our big problems in disaster fighting," he said, "is maintaining communications with stricken areas. When thousands are driven from their homes by flood, hurricanes or other catastrophes which cripple normal communications, amateur operators are looked to as the connecting link with the outside world. Through them the Red Cross is able to survey relief needs and act quickly."

Roy C. Corderman, local amateur, reported he received a message from Carson City, Nev., via an operator in the Panama Canal Zone. He said the message, directed to Washington, was picked up in the Canal Zone, relayed to West Palm Beach, Fla., and thence to Washington.

Meeting with Davis and Red Cross disaster relief officials yesterday were Roy C. Corderman, vice chairman of the District of Columbia Red Cross disaster committee; Maj. Donald E. Talley, liaison officer between the Army and the American Radio Relay League; Lieut. Comdr. John Reinartz, liaison officer between the United States Navy and the league; Lieut. Comdr. J. H. Nicholson, U. S. N.; Oscar Reed, A. R. R. L. coordinator of the Washington area; Miss Elizabeth Zandonini, Station W3CDQ, and Henry Hobbs, sectional coordinator of the A. R. R. L.

D. C. Officials To See Newark Try Blackout

A trial blackout to be staged in about three weeks at Newark, N. J., will be studied at first hand by members of Congress and District officials seeking knowledge of how to conduct a similar experiment in the Capital.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee announced yesterday that he and District Commissioner David McCoach, jr., would lead a contingent of officials to Newark when the New Jersey metropolis stages the blackout.

No exact date has been set for the Newark experiment, Randolph said, but it is expected to be held in "two or three weeks."

Randolph emphasized that the biggest problem connected with blackouts was planning. Arrangements, he pointed out, must be made in advance with the utilities companies and police and fire officials. Cooperation of all civic groups and all citizens must be assured, he stated. The blackout, he said, would last no more than two or three minutes, and cause only slight inconvenience.

The purpose of the visit, he said, would be to find out what those problems are so that Washington officials can prepare to meet them. Randolph feels that Washington, as the Nation's Capital, should be the next city in the East to experiment with the blackout.

Randolph, who heads a special subcommittee on District defense, learned of the proposed blackout while in Newark last month. On his return to the Capital, he suggested to District officials that they communicate with city officers at Newark.

Keep False Teeth Purified Says Dr. Sherv

Don't brush your false teeth or dental plates—you can't purify them that way—you can't even clean them properly that way.

Keep up with the times—get today a generous 30-cent bottle of Stera-Kleen—give your plate a bath as directed, and after the first bath your false teeth will start to sparkle with purity and cleanliness—will so glisten with beauty that you'll be proud of them. Your mouth will feel much better—rejuvenated.

Just a little of Stera-Kleen in a half glass of water and all slimy mucin stains and murkiness begin to go—it's amazing—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.

Amazing "Liquid" Promptly Relieves ECZEMA ITCH—

Doctor's Formula Great Success!

New York, N. Y. Thousands have discovered first applications of wonderful, medicated Zemo not only quickly relieve itching of eczema and other skin irritations (of external cause) but ALSO aid healing of the red, scaly skin.

Use Zemo morning and night. Soon your discomfort should disappear! Most convenient because it's a greaseless, stainless liquid. Doesn't show on skin. All druggists now sell Zemo!

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

1. Three no trump. It should be less difficult to take nine tricks at a game contract in diamonds. You have hearts and diamonds, and partner's double raise shows a strong hand and probable spade and club stoppers.

2. Three clubs. You could bid four hearts, but, as a slam seems likely, this bid wouldn't be quite strong enough. Three clubs, a jump bid in a new suit, will force partner to bid again. You may raise the hearts on the next round, and partner should then learn that you have a singleton spade. He may be able to try for a slam if he has a good heart suit and some diamond support.

U. S. Loses 3 Labor Cases In High Court

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld lower court rulings in three cases constituting a setback for the Justice Department in its efforts to prosecute labor unions for alleged violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act. The vote in these cases was not announced, though the court in four other cases upheld lower court decisions by tie votes of 4 to 4.

Another 4-4 division of the eight-man tribunal only last Monday upheld a lower court ruling that the owner of a coal mine who leases it to an independent operator on contract is exempt from minimum price provisions of the Bituminous Coal Act. Government counsel already have announced that they will seek a rehearing when the present vacancy on the Supreme Court is filled.

The vacancy, giving the President the opportunity to make his sixth appointment to the court, occurred when Justice James C. McReynolds retired February 1. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, has been most prominently mentioned for the post.

Building Unions Involved

The labor cases involved prosecutions against A. F. L. organizations in the building trades. The Building and Construction Trades Council of New Orleans, composed of 21 locals and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners in Chicago were accused of unlawful conspiracies under the Sherman Act in moves against C. I. O. employes of the New Orleans Trucking Association and the Harbor Plywood Corporation, of Hoquiam, Wash., respectively; the International Hod Carriers Building and Common Laborers District Council of Chicago and vicinity and a local of the International Union of Operating Engineers were accused of unlawful acts in efforts to combat the mixing of cement in trucks during its transportation.

The Supreme Court, in upholding lower courts' dismissals of the actions, delivered no written opinions but cited the 5-2 decision of Feb. 3 in a similar case involving the AFL Carpenters union at the Anheuser-Busch brewery in St. Louis. This also was the basis for the lower courts' actions.

The majority opinion in that case, by Justice Frankfurter, said that "so long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with non-labor groups, the licit and the illicit (under the Sherman Act) are not to be distinguished by any judgment regarding the wisdom or unwisdom, the rightness or wrongness, the selfishness or unselfishness of the end of which the particular union activities are the means."

Witnesses' Case Declined

Thirteen persons describing themselves as "Jehovah's Witnesses," failed yesterday to obtain a Supreme Court review of a decision which upheld as constitutional a Manchester (N. H.) ordinance prohibiting the sale on public streets of newspapers, books, pamphlets or magazines without first obtaining a badge from the superintendent of schools.

Appealing from a decision by the First Federal Circuit Court, they contended the ordinance constituted "prior censorship of the press" and denied them their "right of freedom of speech, press and of worship of Almighty God."

In three cases, disposed by by four to four decisions, the tribunal:

Upheld an injunction restraining Samuel R. Toucey, of Kansas City, Mo., from continuing litigation seeking to recover from the New York Life Insurance Co. on a $50,000 insurance policy.

Held that the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Co. is responsible for interest on bonds which had been guaranteed by a constituent company when the two merged in 1923.

Ruled that Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Bernards, of Washington County, Oreg., had no right to proceed under provisions of the Frazier-Lemke Farm Mortgage Moratorium Act in an effort to recover possession of their land which had been sold to pay off indebtedness.

How the justices were aligned on these cases was not announced.

Reversing previous action, the court agreed to review the conviction of J. Bush Crenshaw, former president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank, of Newbern, Tenn., on charges of making false entries.

Reynolds' Daughter Pays $5 In Traffic Fine; Father Aloof

Ticket-Fixing Can't Be Tolerated, District Chairman Declares

FRANCES J. REYNOLDS.

Miss Frances J. Reynolds, 26-year-old daughter of Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, paid a $5 fine for a traffic violation yesterday because "Dad"—who doubtless could if he would—refused to use his influence to have the charge "fixed."

Appearing before District Traffic Court Judge Walter J. Casey, Miss Reynolds pleaded not guilty to a charge of passing through a red light at Ninth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast last Thursday. Judge Casey, however, did not agree. Hence the $5 fine.

The Senate District Committee chairman's daughter was halted Thursday by Officer R. A. Neilsen, of the Ninth Precinct. Both she and a friend who had been with her, Martin Fredenhagen, said in court that the amber caution light had been on when the car entered the intersection.

At the Senator's office yesterday it was said he received many requests for alleviation of traffic troubles and had remained indifferent to all. Following yesterday's episode, Miss Reynolds declared of her father:

"He said he would not have anything to do with it . . . that it was my own headache."

"And," added, "it was."

Representing her at the hearing was Wesley E. MacDonald, the Senator's secretary and a lawyer, who said it was his client's first offense.

Asked late yesterday for an opinion on his daughter's case, Senator Reynolds replied:

"Traffic regulations are designed to make safe travel on the streets of the District. It is the duty of the Police Department to see that they are enforced. Ticket-fixing by persons in high office is a practice which destroys public morale and confidence in the Police Department.

"The practice of ticket-fixing," he declared emphatically, "cannot be tolerated in any circumstance."

Mrs. Thomas Holcomb To Sponsor Submarine

Secretary Knox yesterday designated Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the commandant of the Marine Corps, as sponsor for the submarine Drum.

The Drum is building at the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, and is scheduled to be launched May 12.

Strike Put Off In 69 Plants Of U. S. Steel

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 7.—A threatened walkout of C. I. O. unionists in the 69 plants of the United States Steel Corporation was postponed today by an agreement of the union and management to extend contract negotiations, now deadlocked from April 8 to April 15.

The extension came a few minutes after National Steel Corporation the Nation's fifth largest steel corporation, announced a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for about 20,000 wage earners. The conferees received word of National's move as they reconvened after a weekend and then issued a joint statement saying there "need be no public apprehension" about a possible shutdown in Big Steel's mills.

The C. I. O's steel workers organizing committee is seeking a similar wage increase for 261,000 employes of U. S. Steel, but there are also other stumbling blocks in negotiations on the C. I. O's nine-point program. These included the closed shop and check-off of union dues. Informed sources said it was these issues that led to a definite breach in the conference. The company is understood to have flatly informed the union committee it would "never" commit itself to these two points.

Strike at Lukens Steel

Union spokesman, however, predicted that U. S. Steel and other steel companies would follow National Steel's lead with respect to wages as they did in 1937 when National was the first large producer to offer the $5 a day wage. Both U. S. Steel and National now pay a minimum of 61½ cents an hour for laborers.

At Coatesville Pa., meanwhile, the machine shop force at Lukens Steel Co., which rolls the world's largest steel plate and is engaged on important defense production, struck today and threatened to carry the walkout to the entire plant.

Arthur Johnson, an organizer for the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said 130 men were on strike. A company spokesman said only enough men were on duty for maintenance purposes.

Demand $1.09 an Hour

The present base pay rate is 79 cents an hour. The union seeks a flat rate of $1.09 and elimination of the bonus system under which, Johnson said, it was possible for workers to earn 95 to 97 cents an hour.

Under the agreement for extension of the United States Steel wage parley, any contract changes will be retroactive to April 1—a point which the union had insisted upon as a condition of continuing the conference.

Most steel men were surprised by National Steel's move, but other companies withheld comment. Several steel executives have expressed belief that such an increase in wages in the industry would bring higher prices, a situation the Government hopes to avoid.

Weir Announces Increase

Ernest T. Weir, 65-year-old chairman of National Steel who has fought C. I. O. attempts to organize his plants, personally announced the wage increase. He said simply that details were being worked out for all subsidiaries.

Known as the "Lone Wolf" of companies independent of U. S. Steel, Weir won prominence defying the National Recovery Act and the National Labor Relations Board. The board has ordered his Weirton steel company to abolish an employes' representation plan, cease "dominating" employes and discouraging C. I. O. membership. A legal battle over the order is still under way.

There will be no U. S. Steel conference tomorrow because Murray will go to Washington to discuss the general labor situation with President Roosevelt.

Martinsburg Mill Still Picketed

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 7 (AP).—Small groups of strikers picketed the gates of the Interwoven Stocking Co. plant today while Federal officials considered union protests against an injunction restraining mass picketing.

About 10 pickets were assigned to walking duty at each gate. There were no reports of any clashes.

The management, which claims nearly 500 of the 1,500 employes are at work, said in a statement that the union's primary demand was a closed shop and reiterated its opposition to such a concession. The statement renewed the promise to keep the mill open for those wanting to work.

Motorcyclist Killed In Frederick County

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 7.—Frederick County records its first traffic fatality of 1941 last night when Elvin Lester Springer, 27, near Thurmont, was instantly killed when the motorcycle he was riding crashed head on into an automobile operated by George Harold Fleagle, Frederick. The crash took place near Woodsboro.

The death was the second in Springer's family in less than a month. His sister, Mrs. Guy Burhman, near Cascade, Md., died March 16.

Mediator Sure Ford and Union Officials Will Discuss Issues

'Face-to-Face' Meeting Would Be First in Plant History

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 7.—Federal and State mediators labored today to narrow down the "points at issue" in the United Automobile Workers Union (C. I. O.) strike against the Ford Motor Co., preliminary to a "face-to-face" meeting between opposing sides.

James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, expressed confidence today that he would get the company and union representatives around a conference table, something that has never occurred before in the 38 years' history of the Ford company.

Relative quiet prevailed at the big Ford plant in suburban River Rouge, where some 85,000 hourly rated workers have been made idle by the strike called last Tuesday night. The company's closing of branches throughout the Nation and its stoppage of deliveries by independent supplying concerns has brought the total number affected by the suspension of work to an estimated 200,000.

Dewey today characterized the only remaining obstacles to "face-to-face" negotiations as "side issues," such as the evacuation of men who have remained in the beleaguered Rouge plant.

The union contends the men are "potential strike-breakers" hired by the company recently in anticipation of a labor dispute. The company has said they have loyal workers fearful of running union picket lines since disorders which resulted in casualties of varying degree that company and union spokesmen now estimate in the neighborhood of 500.

Informed of the National Labor Relations Board's order for elections in two Ford plants, Bennett, speaking for the company, said:

"This company is not afraid of a fair and impartial election and never has been. We have refused our consent, however, because of the close and intimate relationship between the U. A. W.-C. I. O. and the local office of the NLRB. If the local office of the board has anything to do with the election, I am afraid there will be a repetition of the Allis-Chalmers strike vote."

Testimony was given before a Wisconsin Mediation Board that a portion of the Allis-Chalmers strike ballots were fraudulent.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. predicted the board's order would have a "salutary effect on the negotiations for an agreement to end the present strike" in the Rouge plant. Its statement also forecast a "landslide" victory, with "better than 90 per cent" of the Rouge workers favoring the C. I. O.

Harvester and Steel Elections Ordered

Ford Brotherhood had "presented evidence by the shovelfull" that it should be listed. Although the organization was not charged with company domination, the Labor Board declared yesterday that it was denied a place on the ballot because no new membership cards had been signed since 1937, no elections have been held and no dues or assessments had been collected since that time, no new members have been admitted, none has been expelled or suspended, no membership meeting has ever been held and the largest meeting ever held was attendd by only 30 to 40 organizers.

Ford Vote in 45 Days

The Ford elections are to be held within 45 days, the Labor Board ordered. It was anticipated that the elections at the smaller Lincoln plant could be arranged first.

In its order for the Ford elections, the board mentioned the allegations of Ford Attorney I. A. Cappizzi that the U. A. W. and the Detroit regional office of the NLRB were Communist-dominated, but made no answer to them except to deny the lawyer's motion to dismiss the union's petition for an election.

Board Calls Hearings

Meanwhile, the Mediation Board last night called hearings in three strikes referred to it Saturday.

Representatives of the Seas Shipping Co., of New York, and the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association (C. I. O.) were summoned to appear tomorrow at 10 a. m. before a board panel consisting of William H. Davis, Walter Teagle and Emil Rieve, representing, respectively, the public, employers, and labor. The company operates two ships in South Atlantic trade, and the strikers, according to Labor Department records, are demanding increased wages and a "wartime" bonus.

Another panel, headed by Board Chairman C. A. Dykstra, will open hearings Thursday at 2 p. m. on the Standard tool strike which began January 27 at Cleveland, with 600 workers on strike. Eugene Meyer, representing employers, and Thomas Kennedy, for labor, will sit with Dykstra.

The Cowles (Cleveland) Tool Co. strike, where 110 men walked out February 27, will be taken up Friday at 2 p. m. by a panel consisting of Dr. Frank Graham, Meyer and Rieve.

Another panel will begin hearings Wednesday on the strike at the Snoqualmie Falls (Wash.) Lumber Co., which began last October 28, with 894 men involved. Dr. Graham Roger Lapham for employers and Robert Watt for labor will participate.

The full board is to meet Thursday at 10 a. m.

Miss McNally Begins 33d Term As Union Officer

When Federal Employes' Union No. 105—the women's union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—installs officers at the Willard Hotel tonight, Miss Gertrude M. McNally will be corresponding secretary for the 33d year.

When she pioneered in the formation of the group back in 1909, the idea of a women's union at the Bureau was considered a radical idea, a member said. Miss McNally and other leaders of the group worked for such measures as increases in minimum wages. The local was one of the early Federal employe unions to have a hospital guild. It also operates a credit union.

In addition to her work with the local, Miss McNally has served for many years as secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Other officers of the local to be installed are Olive Greer, president; Nicie B. Perrell, vice president; Ann Sundholm, recording secretary; Gertrude Schellhorn, secretary-treasurer; Leo Williams, guide; Minnie D. Stevens, guardian.

Coal Strike Settlement Hits New Snag

By the Associated Press

New York, April 7.—The Nation's soft coal industry, in which 90 per cent of the mines have been idle for a week, continued to be virtually paralyzed tonight as labor and management failed to break their wage dispute deadlock, after being on the verge of agreement.

Negotiations will be resumed at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

A new contract, covering 330,000 United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) in the eight-State Appalachian area and indirectly affecting 120,000 others in outlying States, was expected today, but a rift between Northern and Southern operators over local wage conditions postponed settlement.

Joint labor-management negotiators extended their efforts for another 24 hours in apparent attempt to compose this North-South difference.

[Late last night, after private caucuses, the Southern operators issued a statement asserting that "no proposal had been presented that the South could consider," the United Press reported — Editor's note.]

Sectional Dispute

Argument between the Northern operators in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, northern West Virginia, and Maryland and Southern operators in southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia centered on the union's demand for elimination of a wage differential under which Southern operators pay 40 cents a day less than Northern owners.

Northern operators were reported ready to meet the union demand for $1-a-day increase and elimination of the differential. The basic wage under the contract which expired March 31 provided $6 a day in the North and $5.60 in the South. A flat $7 a day wage would increase Southern miners' wages by $1.40 a day, which Southern operators said they could not meet.

Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the United States Conciliation Service, said he believed today's "particular delay will prove to be very profitable in connection with this total situation."

Monday Earliest Opening

Steelman emphasized the word "total" but would not say in response to a question whether he employed the word in a "geographical sense."

It was almost certain that the mines in the Appalachian area, and big outlying areas, such as Alabama, Indiana and Illinois would not be reopened before Monday.

It would require 12 hours to notify miners to return to work and from 24 to 36 hours later to get mines in production. Mines customarily are closed on Good Friday and on Saturdays and Sundays.

GPO Insurance Group Reelects Officers

The Government Printing Office Group Life Insurance Association last night celebrated its tenth anniversary by reelecting the officers who have served since its beginning. They are Martin R. Speelman, president; Thurston R. Brown, vice president; Ernest C. Mellor, secretary-treasurer.

John J. Deviny, deputy public printer, gave the principal address at the dinner in Harding Hall at the G. P. O.

Next 100 Days Crucial for U.S., OPM Official Tells Inquiry

is scheduled for this afternoon.

It was clear from the tenor of the questions addressed to Biggers yesterday that prime interest of the committee members at the present is in the strike situation. But ultimately the scope of the inquiry will be much wider, and will include aviation matters, land acquisition and procurement of materials.

Two other broad congressional inquiries into the defense program will open next week—to be conducted by the House Naval Affairs Committee and a special Senate committee.

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, who two years ago endeavored to impeach Secretary Perkins, sharply objected yesterday to her request that she be excused immediately after she had read a prepared statement.

Brandishing a stack of papers from the files of the Dies Committee Thomas insisted on making a motion to require the Secretary to remain; but no one seconded it.

"Bottleneck in Witnesses"

The committee's difficulty in obtaining desired officials to appear before it (yesterday's session had to be adjourned early because there was no one to testify in the afternoon) prompted one member to deplore the "bottleneck in witnesses." However, Chairman May assured newspapermen that the officials in question were not attempting to avoid the committee.

Secretary Perkins, who was accompanied by Gerard Reilly, solicitor of the department, said that the new Mediation Board "has already shown it has the confidence of all parties and the public." And, she said, the settlement of the Allis-Chalmers and other strikes "has justified that confidence." She stated that the department was working "in close cooperation" with the board.

"Selfishness" Blamed

Biggers, head of the gigantic Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., told the committee that "selfishness is the basis of most of our problems" in the defence production effort. Another major obstruction is, he said, "the lack of understanding of the magnitude and urgency of this job."

Declaring that "there is no real problem on the profit question," Biggers said that manufacturers were not worried about making profits, but have been buying materials too far in advance. He said that it is necessary that "work be spread more widely," but at the same time he said there had been some justification for the "hesitation" of prime contractors to give subcontracts.

Asked by a committee member how he felt about "forcing labor to cooperate," Biggers replied:

"I don't believe that a democracy should force anybody to do anything until powers of education and persuasion have been exhausted."

He added, in response to a question, that he saw "no reason" why labor unions should avoid incorporation, but declared that he thought that would be no "panacea."

Biggers told the committee that the FBI had reported evidence of Communist influence in some labor troubles, and, he observed, "I do not think it should be tolerated for one minute."

76-Day Strike Over, Allis Reopens Today

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, April 7.—Production lines at the Allis-Chalmers manufacturing company, stilled during a 76-day strike, will roar into full 24-hour a day operation tomorrow to speed delivery of $45,000,000 in delayed national defense orders.

Immediately after the C. I. O. plant local ratified a settlement plan today, the company sent squads of workers into the huge suburban West Allis factory to prepare it for the reopening.

A company spokesman said all 7,800 production workers would be called to their jobs, that all departments would be operated on a 24-hour shift six days a week and some seven days a week.

The strike has tied up urgently needed Army and Navy orders, among them destroyer turbines and propelling machinery for battleships.

The settlement plan, which a mass meeting of United Automobile Worker Union members ratified by acclamation, was reached at Washington last night after a conference of company and union representatives with the Defense Mediation Board.

Provisions included establishment of an impartial referee to arbitrate disputes; a stipulation that negotiations for wage increases be entered into within two days after signing and that increases be effective on the day production resumes; and a clause setting forth that no strike or lockout be held within a year.

Under the agreement all employes on the payrolls January 22, when the strike started, are to return without discrimination. The union had threatened that those who participated in a short-lived back-to-work movement would lose their jobs. The movement, ordered by Government officials seeking delivery of defense materials, resulted in rioting April 1 in which 49 men were injured.

The union walked out January 22 over demands including a union shop, wage increases and seniority adjustments.

Steinhauer Sworn As Airport Chief,

J. Earl Steinhauer yesterday took oath of office as operations manager of the new National Airport, scheduled to open at Gravelly Point next month. Organizer and first director of the District's compulsory automobile inspection service, Steinhauer will serve under John Groves, airport director.

The new operations manager was once operations manager of Hoover Field, now part of Washington Airport, and later was assistant manager of College Park Airport. A transport pilot, he has handled air meets and competitive flying events. He will begin his duties immediately.

Army Adviser In House Probe Resigns Post

Secretary Stimson last night announced the resignation of Francis Blossom from the special construction advisory committee of the Army Quartermaster Corps on account of illness and expressed the Army's appreciation for his "effective service."

Blossom, a member of the New York construction firm of Sanderson & Porter, was recently called before the House Military Committee during an investigation of the circumstances surrounding the award of a contract to his firm for construction of a large munitions plant while he was drawing a Government salary. He and other Army officials testified that he had not passed on the award.

Later, Blossom announced he had arranged not to draw profits from his firm while on the Government pay roll. The Army announcement said that Richard H. Tatlow 3d, of Kansas City, Mo., now employed here in the War Department, will replace Blossom on the advisory committee.

Probe Strikes, Women Urged By First Lady

Impartial investigation by committees of women would be one means of putting before the public a fair report on the strike situation, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference, when asked what women could do to help the tense labor situation.

A great many people, continued the First Lady, have no idea what the facts are and there are many interpretations of the facts. Because public opinion does carry such weight, she said, a fact-finding mission of this type might make for a more just decision.

"If the people are unable to see two sides of the situation, the hope for democracy is slim," Mrs. Roosevelt replied, when one reporter suggested that everyone is on one side or another in the question of strikes in defense industries.

When asked if she felt that people were getting impatient with the strikers, the First Lady replied that she thought there was a general feeling that defense must not be held up, but she did not think the blame was one-sided.

Mrs. Roosevelt was asked if perhaps the people were vexed at the leaders of the striking unions. That is an educated opinion, was her reply. As a rule there is very little division, she continued, in people's minds between the workers and their leaders. The First Lady also said she thought the question of a fair share of profits for the workers should be a subject for mediation—with employers' taxes taken into consideration.

Oh, yes, plenty of letters, was Mrs. Roosevelt's reply, when asked about her mail from mothers who are indignant that their sons should be drafted while laborers are allowed to strike.

Lawyer, Secretary Indicted In Tapping of SEC Wires

Telephone Operator Pleads Guilty to Conspiracy Charge

By the Associated Press

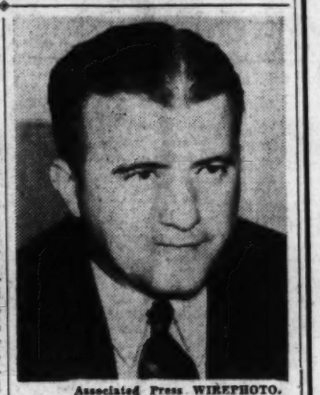
New York, April 7.—An arrangement whereby a lawyer and his secretary were cut in on telephone conversations between the New York and Chicago offices of the Securities and Exchange Commission, was charged in an indictment returned today by a Federal grand jury.

The indictment charging conspiracy and tapping of SEC wires named Jacob Gruber, assistant general counsel for the SEC from 1934 until 1938; Fay Werthmann, a secretary in his law office, and Elizabeth Miller, formerly chief operator in the SEC New York regional office.

Gruber and Miss Werthmann pleaded not guilty. Miss Miller, arraigned separately later, pleaded guilty.

The indictment set forth one conspiracy and three substantive counts.

These alleged that on last March 5 Miss Miller connected Gruber in on a conversation between the New York and Chicago SEC offices, that three days later Fay Werthman was cut in on a similar conversation and that on March 22 Gruber was enabled to intercept another conversation by the same process.



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.
JACOB GRUBER,

United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa told Judge Edward A. Conger that Gruber had performed legal services for a friend of Miss Miller and had suggested that she enable him to intercept telephone conversations in lieu of payment.

Federal prosecutors asserted that the alleged wire tapping occurred at a time when the activities of certain of Gruber's clients were under scrutiny of SEC agents.

Narcotics Agents Arrest Weiss

Narcotics Commissioner Harry Anslinger announced yesterday the arrest of Emanuel Weiss, long a fugitive, and labeled hi mas "New York's No. 1 criminal."

Weiss, former associate of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, and a defendant in New York's spectacular "Murder, Inc." expose, was arrested in Kansas City, Mo., Sunday by narcotics agents and flown to Brooklyn, where he was arraigned yesterday.

Man Convicted Of Attacking Maid Sentenced to Hang

French Lee White, colored, 33, of Bethesda, Md., was sentenced yesterday to be hanged by Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. Sentence was pronounced by Judge Woodward.

A jury convicted White of rape April 2. He was alleged to have attacked a crippled white domestic in Bethesda November 22.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Charles Coburn Here, In Person, on Friday

Distinguished Actor to Appear at Keith's; Phil Regan Gets Along With His Pet Project; This, That and the Other About the Theater

CHARLES COBURN, one of the most distinguished figures in the American theater, will be present in Washington on Friday to make four personal appearances in conjunction with the initial presentations of "The Devil and Miss Jones," at RKO-Keith's Theater. This is the subject that recently was "sneak previewed" on Fifteenth Street to the intense enjoyment of the capacity audience that viewed it. Jean Arthur and Robert Cummings are the juvenile stars of the film which the veteran Coburn virtually "steals."

BELL

It would be a magnificently futile gesture to attempt to recite all of the pictures in which Charles Coburn has been a mature and generally unobtrusive steadying influence. To slip into the vernacular, he never "hogs the spotlight." There is no reason why he should. His great ability as an actor always is quietly and unostentatiously assertive.

The genesis of the Coburn eminence goes pretty far back. He had achieved high repute in every department of the so-called "legitimate" theater before the films ever engaged his attention. He has been author, producer, director and actor.

Not the least of his achievements was the founding of the Mohawk Drama Festival, observed annually, up to this year, on the campus of Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y. This institution has contributed to the development of every branch of the theater and has attracted enormous audiences from every section of the United States. As we have remarked many times before, the Mohawk Festival has stood as the most valuable summertime theatrical activity this country has been able to boast in recent years.

In addition to his four personal appearances on the Keith stage Friday, Mr. Coburn will be guest of honor at a press breakfast that morning somewhere in the vicinity of the poisonous hour of 10. It will be worth "staying up for" to make the acquaintance of a man who has contributed so generously and so valuably to the highest traditions of both the stage and the cinema.

There is, however, one fly in Mr. Coburn's soothing unguent. The possibility that total defense will involve the colleges during the impending summer has caused the postponement of this year's Mohawk Drama Festival. Concerning this Mr. Coburn says: "War preparations entail many uncertainties, and in no place more than in colleges. The uncertainty as to whether the National Government will require the services of Union College in carrying on the educational preparation, during the summer, of engineers, chemists and physicists to meet emergency needs, has inevitably postponed the plans of the Mohawk Drama Festival beyond the point of safety for the season of 1941. The festival has to bow to these circumstances and now goes forward to plans for the season of 1942. The vitality and stability for the future is in no way challenged or impaired by this temporary and local impact of the national emergency."

J. Edgar Hoover and His Men on Screen

"Men of the FBI" will be coming along about the middle of the month as a new release of the "March of Time." The Federal Bureau of Investigation and its staff of nearly 2,000 special agents will be pictured in training and at work. The film, which was produced with the cooperation of the FBI, here in the National Capital, is wholly unlike previous motion picture treatments of the bureau, in that it does not dwell sensationally upon the "G-man" and the "Tommy gun."

Just a couple of paragraphs from a letter only now received from Phil Regan: "Dear Nelson: My sincere thanks to you for your cooperation and space on the Democracy Day idea. It was certainly swell of you. The response of the Congress has been most gratifying and has urged me to contact members of the clergy of all denominations and the American Legion, whose cry should be, 'We fought for democracy, let's keep it.'

"This idea occurred to me when I became aware of all the obvious flag-wavers, whose patriotism should be in their hearts, instead of on their lapels."

It's a small world, as you might say. That uncrowned empress of the impressionistes, Sibyl Bowan, postcards from Miami that she just wanted to find out how the other half lives. Then she asks if I remember Hansford Wilson, who played the role of Lester in "Listen Lester," along with a lot of other things. Well, he is the manager of the hotel at which she is stopping. It's a small—but I guess I said that.

Just-Brush-It-Off-and-Forget-It Note

What ails you probably is spring fever and not the Bubonic plague, as you had feared.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 7.

I arrived in Washington two hours late in a downpour that made me feel right at home. Missed Eleanor's press party, but made the President's. It was my first visit to the White House, and what a thrill! No wonder they call it the "charm school."

HOPPER

F. D. R. sure turned it on. The stage missed a great actor when he chose politics. The National Women's Press Club pancake party was terrific—700 women letting their hair down at once. Mrs. Willkie didn't smile at Eleanor's speech. My hat topped Lily Dache's by two feet. Mrs. Lionel Atwill did a burlesque of our lids, from table decorations. Washington is the place and the life.

"Men of Boys Town," as an argument against reform school methods, would have hit the mark if it had appealed more to reason and less to the hankie. Spencer Tracy's performance as Father Flanagan lends dignity and force to the theme, and Mickey Rooney is up to his usual high standard. Bobs Watson is appealing as the same character he played in "Boys Town," but it was little Darryl Hickman, as the 7-year-old bandit, who really took the spotlight. All in all, "Men of Boys Town" is a picture you'll want to see.

Reason you don't see Walter Pidgeon in any more musical comedies is that a clause in his contract forbids it. When the vogue of musical comedies got the gate in Hollywood a few years back Walter went with them. He had to go back to Broadway and build up a reputation as a dramatic actor before he could get into movies again. "When a singer gets old," says Walter, "he's out. But when a dramatic actor ages, he simply turns to 'character,' I hope." Well, for my money, I don't care what Walter does—just so he stays with us.

Harry Carey, one of Hollywood's last rugged individualists, tells me he still reads by kerosene lamp. Harry kept electric lights off his ranch until two years ago, and once sued a power company for building a line in sight of his place. "Electric lights," says Harry, "are too doggone bright for my eyes. I like something soothing, like an old oil lamp."

Waiting for the baby to go to sleep is a household headache, but it isn't as expensive as it was for Universal when 6-month-old Amanda McFarland (Spanky's sister) didn't feel sleepy. Baby plays the daughter of Irene Dunne and Bob Montgomery in "Unfinished Business," and a closeup scene required her to be actually asleep, so they timed it for her regular nap hour. But Amanda had different ideas, so the whole company, including actors, cameramen, technicians, etc., had to cool their heels for a solid hour while the young lady lay in her crib, cooing and kicking—and the budget ticked merrily on!

Charlotte Greenwood is taking a busman's holiday in her time off from "Miami." She's editing a series of travel films she and her husband took over a period of seven years . . . Robert Cummings has a new bulldog named Bundle—from Britain.

Joan Bennett found herself a veteran in pictures when Cameraman Arthur Miller on "Man Hunt" said to her the other day, "I was turning the camera on the first picture you ever made."

'Blossom Time,' At National, Still a Hit

By Nelson B. Bell

"BLOSSOM TIME." The Messrs. Shubert present Everett Marshall in the operetta in three acts, adapted by Dorothy Donnelly from the original of A. M. Willner and H. Reichert, with music by Franz Schubert and H. Berte, adapted by Sigmund Romberg. Staged by Deward Scanlon; settings by Watson Barratt. At the National Theater.

Sung with all the enthusiasm and fervor of a "first time on any stage," acted with sufficient skill to realize all of the humor and pathos of a tender love story and staged with colorful effects not alien to good taste, "Blossom Time" last evening recieved the full approval of a near-capacity audience in the National Theater.

Distinguished by the music of Franz Schubert, as embellishment of a romantic narrative commensurate with the dignity of the great composer whose life it celebrates, "Blossom Time" deserves an enduring and permanent place among the foremost of the American operettas. It is musically complete and dramatically and humorously sound. Upon hearing it so admirably performed last night this column was struck with the thought that it possesses qualities of melody and charm that entitle it to as long a life as any of the Gilbert and Sullivan works that have been kept alive so long and so gloriously by the Savoyards—although in temper and timber it resembles none of them.

To chart the movement of this superlative example of light musical diversion, after its full 20 years of consistent popularity and acclaim, would be as conspicuously a work of supererogation as to outline the plot of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Abie's Irish Rose" or "Tobacco Road"—none of which, again, it resembles in the remotest degree, except in the hold it has taken upon public favor.

Music Beautifully Adapted

It was with inspired insight that Sigmund Romberg adapted the most tuneful of the youthful Schubert's compositions to the requirements of a libretto devised with no less deftness by Dorothy Donelly from the original of A. M. Willner and H. Reichert. Into the operetta's musical fabric have been woven with exceptional adroitness excerpts from the "Unfinished Symphony," the "Ave Maria" and others of the classics that Schubert has handed down to the ages. They masquerade under such titles as "Song of Love," "Lonely Heart," "Serenade" and the like, but they are, unsullied and unmarred, the immortal Schubert.

Through the romantic tale that Miss Donnelly has contrived flows the deeply moving recital of a thwarted love, so great that it found solace in sacrifice and triumph in defeat. In this, of course, Franz Schubert is the central figure. There is infinite pathos here, always ameliorated by the lilting measures of the Schubert melodies and never permitted to become too sentimental or too emotional to be accepted as perhaps an imaginative, but none the less believable, etching of a futile and compelling passion.

It is conceivable that in some hands, "Blossom Time" might become a pretty maudlin business. Not under the discreet administration of the current cast. Everett Marshall's interpretation of the role of Schubert is the best, both vocally and histrionically, that Washington has seen. Mr. Marshall proves himself not only one of the most competent of the contemporary barytones—and there is no news in that—but also an actor who is able to submerge himself so completely in a character as to make it a valid and memorable portrait. He is surrounded by a highly proficient vocal ensemble composed of singers who also are able to impart life and vigor to the non-musical periods of the play.

Miss Errolle Scores Another Hit

Foremost among these are Martha Errolle, cast as the Countess Bellabruna; Frank Hornaday, as Baron Schober, and Marie Nash, the Mitzi Kranz. Miss Errolle's voice is by far the finest feminine organ in the cast and it is only lamentable that she is not heard more frequently. Miss Nash is a charming and ingenuous Mitzi, whose performance is marred only by the strident quality of her high notes. Mr. Hornaday's tenor approximately, if not wholly, matches Mr. Marshall's barytone. Truman Gaige, Driskill Wolfe, Joseph Toner, Marjorie Ford, Gracie Worth and Robert Lange are among others who lend richness to the musical passages.

The comedy is intrusted to the veteran Douglas Leavitt, the nimble Harry K. Morton, Zella Russell and Freddie Sherman, now programmed as Fred,, who for season after season was the most popular juvenile the old National Theater Players ever had.

Settings and costumes, as already intimated, add to the luster of an offering that will need its extra Easter Sunday matinee and night performances to accomodate the lovers of operetta at its best who will wish to see it.

Stuffed Shark Needs Muzzle

Larry Reed, studio electrician, holds the incontestable right to tell Hollywood's strangest story.

Reed, rigging a light on "The Gentle People" set at Warner Bros., was bitten by a stuffed shark. Yes, a stuffed shark. The wound was real and painful, requiring three surgical stitches to mend it.

Reed was helping light a scene in a fish grotto in which Ida Lupino and John Garfield were to sit at a table, eating. The stuffed and mounted shark was part of the atmospheric decoration. Reed's elbow came in violent contact with the shark's lower teeth when he brought down his arm.

Stars Again as Great Composer

EVERETT MARSHALL,

who appears in the role of Franz Schubert in the Shuberts' revival of "Blossom Time," which last night opened an extended week's engagement in the National Theater. Mr. Marshall is surrounded by an excellent singing and acting cast, many of whom have been seen here before in their present roles

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 7.

ON GOV. LEHMAN'S desk ready for signature, is the Davidson Bill, which makes it unlawful to refuse admission to public entertainments or amusements of any person over 21 years of age. It marks the end of an era—a long era, during which many newspaper men and critics were barred from the New York theaters because their writings had found disfavor with theater owners or producers . . . This is the story of how that legislation was initiated and enacted:

LYONS

THREE YEARS AGO the Shuberts barred me—because of something I had written—from seeing not only their productions but also any shows presented in the 30-odd theaters they operate. Years before others also had been barred—Woollcott, Winchell, Variety, George Jean Nathan—and then reinstated. Woollcott alone sought redress by applying to the courts—which finally ruled that the ban is legal . . . Last year I retained Morris L. Ernst, America's foremost expert on civil liberties, to remedy all this. He reported that the Woollcott decision was binding and that the Shuberts could prevent me—or anybody else—from buying tickets or securing entrance in any other way. "The law's against you," said Ernst, "unless you change the law."

ASSEMBLYMAN Irwin C. Davidson, of Manhattan learned of this case and agreed that the law needed changing. Mr. Ernst wrote the bill and Davidson introduced it in the Assembly . . . I asked the New York columnists to support the bill, and they did—all except Miss Dorothy Kilgallen, who denounced it . . . Miss Kilgallen subsequently was barred from seeing Shubert shows . . . The bill was killed in committee . . . Last month Davidson reintroduced it. The Assembly passed it. Friday Davidson wired: "Boy, we win; bill just passed the Senate" . . . PM, the newspaper, reported the passage of the Davidson Bill under the heading "Winchell Bill." Its news report began: "The Assembly yesterday passed what may some day be known as the Winchell Bill . . ." But whatever its name, the bill marks the end of an era, and no longer will newspapermen be barred from theaters.

JESSE JOYCE LANDIS had a busy day Friday: She had to rehearse for a radio program, as well as for her feature role in the play "Your Loving Son." Her energies drained by these trying rehearsals, Miss Landis entered a cab, sat back, exhausted and told the driver, hazily: "Murry Hill 5230." The driver replied: "Thank you, ma'am—but I'm married" . . . Anton Refregier, the muralist who designed Cafe Society, has been commissioned by the Maritime Commission to paint two murals for the new vessel, the "S. S. Polk." The paintings are to be scenes from "Moby Dick." And now, for the first time, Refregier must start reading the book . . . Senator Bob Wagner, who is ailing, has three nurses in attendance.

DR. COONEY, proprietor of the Incubator exhibit which was one of the features at the World's Fair, will begin his thirty-seventh year as an exhibitor at Coney Island's Luna Park this season. Dr. Cooney is offering jobs to all persons who live in his Incubators, if they now are unemployed .

BRUCE PINTER, Washington correspondent for the Herald Tribune, returned to Washington last week and learned of the excitement he had brought to his local draft board . . . The members of the board had wanted to question him, but couldn't locate Pinter . . . Police cooperation had been asked in an attempt to find his whereabouts . . . Although Pinter had forgotten to inform his draft board that he was leaving the city, his whereabouts were made public each day in the date line on the front pages of the Herald Tribune. For Bruce Pinter had gone South with the President of the United States, covering F. D. R's. trip for his newspaper.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 7 (INS).—The biggest news of a motion picture is the contemplated "Life of Winston Churchill," planned by Sol Lesser. I just learned that James Roosevelt's trip East to confer with his father, President Roosevelt, is partly for the purpose of seeing if it couldn't be arranged for Lesser and himself to film the biography of England's hero, the man of the hour.

PARSONS

Because other actors have been associated with some character they played on the screen, an unknown player will be chosen for the role of Churchill.

A good thing that Ann Sheridan took herself a long vacation when she and Warners were separated, for from her schedule she won't have much time to play. After she finishes "Kings Row" she'll be a part of the "Klondike" opus that Warners are planning in Technicolor. I was interested to hear she'll play Klondike Kate, a real character, while many others include Tex Rickard and Sid Grauman, who were part of the gold rush panorama, will be in the movie.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Charles Wendling (he's Claudette Colbert's brother) and Margaret Lindsay have discovered each other; Olympe Bradna's bridegroom-to-be, Douglas Wilhoit, has been drafted; the pretty girl with Baron Polan at Charley Foy's night club is Sue Garland, sister of Judy; Leif Erickson hadn't been on the lot at Paramount ten minutes when his former wife, Frances Farmer, came on the set to wish him luck; Astrid Allwyn and Marine Officer Hugh Hancock are thinking things over; Twentieth is bidding for the Clare Booth play, "Margin for Error;" Sylvia Sidney has turned redhead for her new stage show; Shirley Ross expects her baby the last of this month.

Boots Mallory (Mrs. William Cagney in private life) is considering an offer from George Jessel to join his P. A. jaunt in New York; Ingrid Bergman's friends are trying to persuade her not to return to Sweden, but some of her family are there and she wants to go back.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Hugo Inden, D. C. Artist, Is Dead at 40

Hugo Inden, 40, artist and interior decorator, died yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital of complications after an operation a week ago. A niece, who had been waiting at Lisbon for months to get passage to visit him, had sailed only last Friday and a message was sent to the steamer yesterday.

A native of Germany, Inden had lived in the United States since 1928 and in Washington most of that time.

He was instructor in design and commercial art at Abbott Art School. He had decorated numerous Washington homes. One of his specialties was the decoration of recreation rooms, of which he did a number in Georgetown homes. He created decorations for several Bal Boheme affairs here, notably a Louis XV ball at the Mayflower Hotel several years ago.

His niece, Mrs. Frederic Walch, of Paris, had planned to spend last Christmas with him and had been waiting in Lisbon ever since for passage. He has other relatives in Germany.

Inden studied art in schools in Dusseldorf and Munich, and was engaged in art work in the latter city.

He made his home here at the Arts Club.

The funeral will be at 10 a. m. Wednesday at Gawler's funeral home. Burial will be private.

Mrs. Meek's Funeral Set For Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Sadie R. Meek, 72, wife of a Treasury Department official, who died Sunday after a long illness, will be at 10 a. m. today at the Hines funeral home.

Mrs. Meek, who made her home at 1736 Columbia Road Northwest, was born in Salem, Va., the daughter of Capt. Richard W. Reid, a Confederate officer. She was a direct descendant of Gov. Edward Diggs, of Williamsburg.

For 35 years before her death she lived in Washington, playing an active role in patriotic organizations. She belonged to the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of 1812, the Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Daughters of the American Colonists, the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, the Southern Society and the Central Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are her husband, S. McDowell Meek, of the Treasury Procurement Division, and seven children by a previous marriage—Mrs. Anne Clarke, Mrs. G. Allen Rady and Charles F. Ray, of Washington; Mrs. T. J. Williams and Mrs. A. T. Seay, of Richmond; Mrs. C. H. Smton, of Newport News, Va., and John R. Ray, of Texas.

There are also two sisters, Mrs. Jack Cromer, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Mrs. Frank Iden, of Arlington, Va., and two brothers, W. L. Reid, of Winston-Salem, and H. Burwell Reid, of Detroit.

Burial will be in Richmond, Va.

Court Limits Alien Property Seizure Claims

Suit for recovery from the United States Government of property seized during the World War must be limited to the proceeds of the property the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

Basing its finding on the Trading With the Enemy Act, the court sustained the action of District Court in the case of Johann Carl Pflueger, who was engaged in business in Bremen, Germany, during the World War and was later construed to be a citizen of the United States.

He claimed "just compensation" for property this Government had seized from him during the war. A total of $506,169, representing the value of stocks seized, was returned to him.

After signing releases of any other claims against the United States, Pflueger later sought $190,000 more through the German - American Mixed Claims Commission.

Budwesky to Talk With U. S. on Fees For Housing Work

City Manager Carl Budwesky of Alexandria will confer today with representatives of the Federal Works Agency, to discuss an agreement under which the city may receive some form of compensation for municipal services to be rendered the proposed new housing development for Fort Belvoir personnel, to be constructed on Duke Street Extended.

In view of the fact that the site of the development will become a federal reservation, it will yield no tax return to Alexandria, Budwesky, said, and the city is anxious to receive some assurance it will be compensated for services it might be called on to provide.

The Army housing development is to be built on a 40-acre tract lying between Duke Street Extended and the College Park subdivision, and will include 225 homes for civilian personnel at Fort Belvoir.

Show People Honor Berger, 30 Years in Movie Industry

By Richard L. Coe

Thirty years in motion pictures—very nearly spanning the lifetime of the no longer youngest industry—and his recent promotion to a District managership for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer brought Rudolph Berger the acclaim of local and nationally known figures of the films at a dinner in his honor in the Willard Hotel last night.

"Rudy" to some, "Doloh" to others, Berger has been a familiar figure on Washington's film row since 1913. His career began in Philadelphia, extended as far south as the Carolinas, but, with time out during the World War, he has been marketing motion pictures here nearly half his lifetime. The "you-alls" of the South, the "Baastonese" of the Northerners and the confident tones of California's Gold Coast blended last night to indicate "Rudy" had made friends every step of his way up the ladder.

There were speeches from William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for M-G-M, and William A. Scully, who holds a similar post with the rival Universal Pictures, and a host of others. There was humor by Toastmaster Alvin Newmeyer. There was the serious side, too, strongly emphasized by General Counsel C. C. Pettijohn, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the Will H. Hays organization.

For "Rudy" there were gifts, too—a handsome gold watch, a set of luggage for the comprehensive traveling his new post will entail and, finally, a scroll inscribed by all the friends attending the dinner.

And, that the theatermen are the first to appreciate their own profession, there was topnotch entertainment not only for "Rudy" but for his 300 fellow diners—Martha Raye, Will and Gladys Ahearn, Frank Sinatra, Connie Haines, Tommy Dorsey's "Pied Pipers" and the Mulcays gave their professional zest while, in disguises their mothers wouldn't penetrate, an array of local film men did their unprofessional best under the guidance of Gene Ford.

The dinner was organized by a group of Berger's friends and the Washington Tent of the Variety Club. Sidney Lust headed the committee, with A. E. Lichtman and Hardie Meakin, chief barker of the Varsity Club, as his vice chairman.

Others who spoke included Frank Durkee, representing the Maryland exhibitors; William F. Crockett, president of the Virginia Motion Picture Theater Owners; Newton B. Carskadon, vice president of the West Virginia Exhibitors Association; Tom Ayers, for Delaware Exhibitors; Charles Arrington, representing the North Carolina exhibitors; Vincent Dougherty, president of the Salesmen Club; John Allen, representing the M-G-M Washington employes, and Joe Morgan, "representing everybody in the trade."

Council Opposes FBI Investigation Of U. S. Employes

The Industrial Union Council, central body of C. I. O. affiliates in the District, last night urged the Senate to strike out a House-passed appropriation of $10,000 for a Federal Bureau of Investigation inquiry into Government employes.

The council charged in a resolution that an investigation being undertaken by the Civil Service Commission has resulted in intimidation of the workers and concerns itself with political and labor opinions "leading to firings on insufficient grounds."

Hit-and-Run Bicycle Breaks Leg of Child, 3

Five children were injured in traffic accidents in and near the District yesterday, one by a hit-and-run bicycle rider.

Wallace Carroll Neitzey, 3, of 1870 Ingleside Terrace Northwest, was struck down on the sidewalk near Seventh and E Streets Southwest by a bicycle operated by a colored boy who pedaled off without identifying himself. The child was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fractured right leg and head injuries.

Hurled to the ground by an automobile in the street in front of her home at 1256 Oates Street Northeast, Carroll Ann White, 5, sustained a fractured left leg, severe head lacerations and undetermined internal injuries. Police said the automobile was operated by Viola M. Porter, 528 Columbia Road Northwest.

Lewis Allen Dodson, 6, of 445 Tenth Street Southwest, received lacerations of the face and a possible skull fracture when she was struck at Tenth and E Streets Southwest by an automobile police said was operated by James E. Harper, 19, of 520 K Street Northeast. Harper was charged at Fourth Precinct station with failing to give right of way to a pedestrian.

Francis Little, colored, 7, of 723 Fourth Street Northwest, was treated at Sibley Hospital for lacerations of the legs and face after he was struck by an automobile at Fourth Street and G Place Northwest. Police said the machine was operated by David Berger, 31, of 2405 North Capitol Street.

Injured in an automobile accident at Cheverly, Md., Jeannette Bartlett, 15, of Landover, Md., was taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. She was in undetermined condition there last night with severe lacerations of the face and a possible skull fracture.

Frederic William Wile, Veteran Reporter And Pioneer Radio Commentator, Dies in D.C.

Frederic William Wile, 67, veteran reporter, war correspondent, political analyst and pioneer radio commentator, died yesterday morning at his home, 3313 Sixteenth Street Northwest, after a lingering illness.

He is survived by Mrs. Wile; a daughter, Helen Isabel Wile, of Washington, and a son, Frederic William Wile, jr. of New York.

Burial will be in La Porte, Ind., where Mr. Wile was born.

Mr. Wile's newspaper career began 43 years ago, when, as a 23-year-old bank clerk, he made good on a test assignment on the Chicago Record. His active career ended only a few weeks ago, with his last editorial for the Washington Star, to which he also contributed a tri-weekly column, "Washington Observations."

Mr. Wile's reportorial history was the sort to inspire young men to enter his profession. And his enthusiasm for his chosen work led him to take an interest in fledgling reporters, many of whom, grown older here and throughout the country, remember with special graatitude his help and encouragement.

Mr. Wile's first "scoop," after earlier triumphs as founder, reporter, editor and printer's devil on his family organ, the Wile Evening Journal, was the covering of an impromptu speech of President McKinley in Chicago. The Record recognized his talent and sent him to London in 1901, where he covered developments during the Boer War, and reported the death and funeral of Queen Victoria.

By that time he had attracted the notice of Victor Lawson, of the Chicago Daily News, who hired him as Berlin correspondent. Success there, in turn, enlisted the attention of Lord Northcliffe, who induced the young reporter to become the London Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent.

In this post Mr. Wile kept Lord Northcliffe informed, in an almost "rivet-by-rivet" account, of Admiral von Tirpitz's ambitions for German sea power. His reporting on Germany's growing naval strength caused such an effect in the London press that when World War I broke out, and the head of the German press office flung Mr. Wile's passport on the desk and ordered him out on the last diplomatic train leaving Berlin, the German officer told him:

"You have done more than any single man to cause England's participation in this war."

Mr. Wile was forced to flee, despite claims of immunity because of his American citizenship. The night before he had been incarcerated as a spy, an indignity which he later avenged by collecting $6,000 from Germany for false arrest.

With the text of the famous German "White Paper" in his pocket, Mr. Wile took the first ship to the United States. He was met at the dock in New York by a staff of New York Times translators, to whom he parceled out pages torn from the document, and enabled that paper to publish the first translation in the United States of the Kaiser's alleged reasons for declaring war.

Later Mr. Wile returned to London and conducted a column for the New York Times and London Times, at that time the world's two largest papers. The daily piece, "Germany Day by Day," consisted of translations and analysis of the German wartime press, supplied him by British intelligence agents.

When this country entered the war, he became an officer in the A. E. F. Military Intelligence Section, and since 1919 held a reserve commission as lieutenant colonel.

After accompanying President Wilson on his triumphal European trip and a spell at Chatauqua lecturing, Mr. Wile became Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia Ledger. In 1923 he began a news broadcast, as the first regular Washington commentator on the air. In that capacity he broadcast the London naval conference of 1930 and the 1932 World Disarmament Conference. In the last 20 years, he also wrote a column appearing here and in several other newspapers throughout the country.

An all-around newspaperman, he was equally at home in covering a diplomatic pow-wow—his courtly manner and polished wit were famous—or a rough and tumble police story. As chief of the Philadelphia Ledger Bureau here, he interrupted his coverage of the historic Washington Arms Conference to report the Knickerbocker Theater disaster, in which 98 persons lost their lives. His coverage was characteristically thorough, so much so that United States Marines had to pull him away from the wreckage of the collapsed roof and force him into the snow. One of his close newspaper friends, Louis Strayer, was killed in the disaster. Mr. Wile's story of it was hailed as a classic.

In the last several months, when ill health confined him to his home, Mr. Wile's reportorial instinct grew sharper than ever. Each visitor to his home, bringing news of contemporary Washington, prepared himself for a rapid-fire barrage of questions—the who, what, where, when, why and how that remained his code until the end.

Balkan Strategy

It is still much too early to get any clear picture of the fighting which has been taking place on the Yugoslav and Greek borders during the three days since Hitler began his war on those two liberty-loving nations. German reports tell of the bombing of Belgrade while carefully avoiding any mention of the fact that the Yugoslav capital had been proclaimed an open city. But this action is only one more black mark on the dark record of the modern Attila and his legions. The German high command also declares that German forces have penetrated Yugoslavia to a distance of a score or more miles. This may well be true, for the Yugoslav plainlands adjacent to Hungary and Rumania are practically indefensible. Greek reports, on the other hand, tell of fierce fighting in the lower end of the Struma Valley in Macedonia and claim that except for the loss of one fort, the Greek troops, while heavily outnumbered and suffering from a marked inferiority of mechanical equipment, have held their ground. In the meantime, the British have revealed the strategy they propose to follow by announcing that their first objective in the Balkans will be to drive the Italians out of Albania into the sea.

This strategy is indicated by the nature of the situation which confronts the Allies. Italy is the weaker and very much the more vunerable of the Axis partners. Although the Italians in Albania have succeeded during recent weeks in holding their ground, they have failed to develop any offensive power. A combined thrust by the Greeks and British from the south and the Yugoslavs down the valley of the Drin and along the coastal plain to Durazzo might well mean the finish of Mussolini's foothold in the Balkans. A junction between the Yugoslav and Greek armies might then be made very much easier than it is at present, and the Germans would be checkmated in their obvious objective of driving a wedge between Greece and Yugoslavia.

From the German point of view the assault on Yugoslavia, essential though it had become because of the whacking diplomatic defeat which the Yugoslavs had administered to the Axis, is secondary to the drive on Greece. There the objective is the Gulf of Salonika and its great port. Not only would the achievement of that objective have the negative advantage of preventing the British from using it as a base of operations against the German rear, but it would also have the positive value of serving as a springboard for aerial attacks on British shipping in the Eastern Mediterranean. To reach Salonika by the shortest route means a drive down Struma Valley which bisects the Rhodope Mountains separating Bulgaria from Thrace. The route is extremely difficult at this time, for the roads are seas of mud, though, for that matter, it is a hard route at any time. A more favorable approach to Salonika is by way of the Vardar and Morava Valleys which run through Yugoslavia to Macedonia.

With the capture of Belgrade, which may not be far distant, and of Nish, which may prove a somewhat harder nut to crack, German forces would be in a position to drive down these two valleys to Salonika. But the deeper they penetrate into Yugoslav territory, the more difficult their task may become. In the highlands of Serbia mechanized equipment and air power may not be able to play the role they can play in the flat and fertile Croatian part of the kingdom to the north. Nor will the difficulties be difficulties arising solely out of the nature of the Yugoslav terrain. The problem of transport which has plagued the Germans even on their own home grounds may plague them to a far greater degree in the Balkan theater. The reports of air raid alarms in Budapest and air raids on Sofia and other places remote from the actual fighting front suggest that one of the principal tasks assigned to the R. A. F. may be the disruption of German communications behind the lines. Now, as during last spring's blitz, the odds would seem to favor the Germans. Yet the advantages are not all on their side in the present conflict, nor are the disadvantages wholly on the side of their enemies.

Back To Work

The agreement settling the Allis-Chalmers strike, which was worked out under the auspices of the National Defense Mediation Board, has been ratified by the union membership, and the men are now back at work. The details of the pact are not so important as the fact that operations are to be resumed. Allis-Chalmers has a vital contribution to make to national defense. Both Army and Navy plans have suffered from this 75-day stoppage, for this plant manufactures machinery of importance to both services. All through the strike the Army has been awaiting machinery from Allis-Chalmers for the expansion of a large new powder plant. And the Navy, similarly, has been subjected to a hold-up of its new destroyer program. The knowledge of these effects upon our national defense program has accounted in great measure for the public demands upon Congress for remedial legislation.

The general satisfaction with which the news of the settlement has been received will redound to the prestige of the Mediation Board. President Roosevelt's appointees have amply justified their choice. The panel to whom the Allis-Chalmers case was remitted showed unflagging zeal, and both the employers' and employes' sides have united in praising the panel chairman, William H. Davis. Mr. Davis in full measure has that incomparable asset for a mediator, namely, an inexhaustible fund of patience. But the board would be the first to protest that their own personal qualities are only secondary in successful mediation. Public opinion comes first, and this is the basic reason for the five successes which the Mediation Board can now chalk up to its credit, and which, as a result of the Allis-Chalmers case, will keep the board hoisted in a key position in national defense.

If the Mediation Board had been appointed earlier, doubtless there would not have been so much delay in mediating this strike. Yet it was three weeks before the board got the case. In the meantime the Navy Department and the OPM had put themselves out on a limb by unsuccessfully ordering the resumption of operations, thereby putting the authority of Federal Government in jeopardy. Procedure, to be sure, cannot rise full-fledged with the establishment of a new governmental agency. But the lesson to be learned from the experience of the Mediation Board to date is that there should be no delay at the Department of Labor in certifying a case to the board. This does not mean that the admirable conciliation service headed by Dr. John R. Steelman should be hurried in its work. But certainly no step such as was taken in the Allis-Chalmers should come between the failure of conciliation and the beginning of mediation.

The perfecting of mediation does not, of course, lessen the need for the exploration of legislative steps which would reduce the hazards of stoppage on national defense work. Settling a strike is not half so meritorious as preventing a strike. In these emergency times the entire Nation is committed to work and sacrifice, and the spirit of service in general will be retarded if our factories are to be sporadically immobilized by labor disputes. Thus the inquiry into strikes by the House Military Affairs Committee has the same national backing as has the Mediation Board. A repressive law seems inevitable unless labor and management obey the President's injunction to give "sufficient advance notice of any threatened interruptions to continuous production as will permit exploration of all avenues of possible settlement of such controversies so as to avoid strikes, stoppages, or lockouts."

Support For Overton

The District has a friend—President Roosevelt. The President believes the Federal Government should pay for all capital improvements in the District. However, he agreed with Senator Overton yesterday that it would be a good idea to make the Overton proportional land-use formula a basis for the Government's payment. If the Overton bill is modified in accordance with the President's views, the money derived would be applied first to constructing municipal buildings, schools, and so on. If any were left over, presumably it would go into the general fund. The advantages of the Overton plan in determining the Government's contribution to capital outlays is obvious when Congressional psychology is considered. For, if it were left to the national legislators to appropriate for each capital need, the District might get short shrift.

Yesterday's conference at the White House followed a failure to function on the part of Congressional machinery on the Overton bill. Only nine of the House District Committee's 21 members showed up to consider a measure which already has been passed by the Senate. The failure is made deplorable by the urgent immediate needs of the District. These are shown by Representative Hunter's estimate that the city will need $10,000,000 extra in the new fiscal year to provide schools, sewerage, libraries, street lighting, fire, police and other services in the areas where defense workers are concentrating. The Overton formula, if applied to the 1942 budget, would so increase the Federal contribution over the customary lump sum as to supply some $3,000,000 of the needed funds.

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, who took part in the discussion with the President, said Mr. Roosevelt would lend his active support to the bill if it were changed to apply the proceeds primarily to capital outlays. Therefore the important step is an amendment. And the proponents of the measure should lose no time in obtaining it when the committee meets after the present recess. After that, the approval in high quarters and the immediate need may be expected to speed the legislation through the House and the necessary House-Senate conference. Then we should see the end of the annual battle over the lump sum and the inauguration of a fairer method in computing the Federal Government's obligation to the District.

Blossom Time

With mild weather coaxing the buds along the rim of the Tidal Basin, good folk up and down the land are making plans to be in Washington for the Cherry Blossom Festival Saturday and Sunday. The fact that the celebration coincides with the Easter holidays doubtless will swell the crowd coming into town, and besides that the Daughters of the American Revolution will open a convention here on Monday. Many of the visitors will arrive without previous arrangements for places to sleep, and their possible plight has been arousing some concern because the District is in the throes of a housing shortage deriving from defense activities. It was reported several days ago that all hotels are booked solid for the week. The situation is improved somewhat as a result of the response to a plea by the Trade Board's Housing Bureau, which asked that persons having spare rooms should register them for paying guests. But the bureau still considers it urgent that householders report available space anywhere in the metropolitan area. And if anybody is contemplating a trip to Washington on business that can wait, he had best hold everything until after Easter Week.

Frederic William Wile

Frederic William Wile, who died yesterday at the age of 67, won great distinction in two related fields. As foreign correspondent for American and British newspapers over a period of more than a score of years, he reported many of the outstanding developments on the international scene. Combining a passion for accuracy with a gift for expression, his dispatches from South Africa at the time of the Boer War, from Germany in the heyday of the Kaiser and from England during the first World War, are the raw material of history. The same combination of qualities that had made him a great foreign correspondent also served him in good stead when he pioneered in the field of radio broadcasting. He has described his experiences in that field as well as in the field of journalism with characteristic charm in his autobiography, "News Is Where You Find It," which appeared two years ago. A man of intense patriotism and rugged idealism, he left his mark on his times, and he will be sadly missed by a multitude of friends in Washington and throughout the Nation and the world.

BACK TO THE FIELDS

She watched him going up the lane,
And suddenly a loneliness
Was in the house. She tried in vain
To lose what she could not express . . .
But she had heard his whistle near,
By yard and barn, so long before
Fields called him back—now she could hear
It far away . . . and then no more.

The dog had gone with happy barks
And waving tail. She visioned how
He chased the early meadow larks
Then trotted close behind the plow.
She turned to work and tried to sing
But then the song was out of tune—
A little catch that seemed to bring
Her mind how far it was to noon.

When work she had to do was done,
The red geranium had her care
Beside the window in the sun
And fragrance lingered on the air.
Then, past the shining maple tree,
She looked to where the field was high—
And from that window she could see
Plowman and team against the sky!

Population Point

Permit me to call attention to a misleading statement which appeared in the American Institute of Public Opinion release published in The Post, April 5. In this news release, Dr. Halbert L. Dunn, chief statistician of the division of vital statistics, Bureau of the Census, is quoted as saying:

"If present birth and death rates continue, the population of the United States will fail to maintain its numbers by about 4 per cent per generation."

The average person reading this sentence would quite logically imagine that the population is now on the decrease at the rate of 4 per cent per generation, so that in about 30 years the population would decrease from its present total of 132,000,000 to about 126,700,000. This is a misleading impression. If the "present birth and death rates continue" (those for 1940 being the last rates available) the population of the United States will increase about 1,000,000 a year. And as these millions are added to the population, the increase will grow larger and larger, and the population will increase indefinitely.

If we use the birth and death rates for the five-year period 1936-40, the situation will be much the same as the above only the increase for the next few years will be about 900,000 instead of 1,000,000, a year, but in either case the population would increase indefinitely, and the increase would grow larger as the years go by.

This is quite a serious matter when we realize that the average citizen in this country has a great deal to say regarding the development of an intelligent population policy for the United States.

GUY IRVING BURCH.
Washington, April 6.

Need For Sacrifice

That our industrial and labor leaders have let it come to a strike without settling their differences peacefully shows clearly that neither of them realizes in what danger we all and our American structure are, nor do the industrialists realize that labor made them rich and powerful, nor does labor realize that one cannot take out more than one puts in and that even a lake can be dried out if more water is taken than coming in. It also shows that both have failed to benefit from the mistakes those countries have made, who have given themselves into the hands of dictators in order to undermine the other class of the country.

The Russian laboring classes overthrew their industrialists in the belief that they will be free and prosperous, but instead have put around themselves and their children stronger and harder chains. The industrialists of the other dictator countries thought that they would curb the democratic labor privileges, but instead have lost their wealth and liberties as well as destroyed everything and everybody in their own countries. These foreign diseases have moved in in our midst to deprive us, too, of our sacred privileges. And it is up to each and every one of us that we shall see to it to bring these two factors to their senses and expose the schemers who keep stirring up trouble among our people. Labor should also realize that increased wages mean also rising prices for every-day commodities and when they figure it all up they will find that they are only managing to get deeper into the red and at the same time jeopardize our doctrines and are working into the hands of our enemies—and that their only salvation is for each to make certain sacrifices to preserve our Americanism.

Drifting In Defense

When will our American democracy gird itself for an all-out defense effort to aid those countries so courageously fighting the aggressor states? This is a logical question at this crucial moment, because "time is of the essence" more than the American public realizes. Because of a lack of vital cooperation on our home front, our apparent shortsightedness and our seeming desire not to realize our present danger, we are traveling the road traversed by the many countries of Europe, climaxed by the tragic collapse of the Republic of France and the rude awakening of the British people, after Dunkirk, that they were really fighting a war, or should have been.

It is true that we have accomplished a great deal since last June. We realize that we cannot impose our defense effort on normal living conditions and business. There are some, however, who seem to believe this defense effort a myth. What does it take to bring a united nation to such a realization? War? The pessimistic attitude is yes. The very optimistic say no. The eventful happenings of the past 18 months should give the answer.

We, all of us, are not giving without stint. We seem to have forgotten that we have made commitments, we are under obligation, because we don't want to have the Axis win this conflict.

We lack a determined and united defense effort. The men controlling our destiny are doing their utmost, are trying to get everything running smoothly and effectively. They deserve credit. However, some labor elements have failed in their duty to carry on for our country. The apparent inability of labor and management to iron out differences and still continue to produce defense material creates a serious home "emergency."

The President's words that we need and must have "Action, and action now" have slipped by a lot of us.

Can we preserve our priceless heritage, handed down by men of foresight, of courage, and of unlimited ability to act when they saw the need for immediate action? Are we of their caliber? Will we act in time? Unless we do iron out our present stalemate in defense production, we will pay the extreme price later, both in human and natural resources.

How long must we wait?

Senator Byrd

Senator Byrd, in his demand to end defense work stoppages, is voicing the public will. The people are fed up on the sidestepping policies of the Administration, in the handling of strikes. They want immediate action to put an end to their disastrous results. If the Democrats, the real Democrats, want to return to a sane, businesslike government under the Constitution, they will in the next election—if we have one—have Harry Byrd leading the ticket. For real patriotism, and business ability in Government affairs, he stands head and shoulders above the leading Administration Democrats in Congress. During the orgy of spending of the past eight years he has stood for economy in Government expenditures, the same economy that Mr. Roosevelt promised, and for which he substituted extravagance and waste. Senator Byrd deserves the thanks and cooperation of the people in his efforts to end these damaging to defense strikes.

Rooms For Rent

There has been a great deal of discussion concerning rents charged here for both homes and rooms. I have some knowledge of the situation here in my own section (Northeast) as a private homeowner, I have tried at various times to rent a room in my own home, but without success. This room, I believe, is typical of many being offered at present. It offers all conveniences, is nicely laid out, well away from the congestion of the city. It is three blocks from a bus and five blocks from a street car, however, and this may have been a deterrent to prospective room seekers. The problem is to draw these room seekers out to look at rooms. Perhaps they do not have time to look. They may feel it a waste of time Strangers are chary of going far from their work to live, even when they must sacrifice comfort to do it. In this neighborhood it is considered hardly worth while to advertise a room. One must circulate among one's friends who work down town.

The same situation applies to some extent in renting houses out here. Rents are reasonable, but there is a demand for houses in Maryland and Virginia, where many can go and enjoy the advantagees of the District and live in Maryland or Virginia for the country air (or something). This area is mostly single-dwelling houses and bungalows, no apartments. I am sure there are other similar areas in the District, and the people who howl about high rates and undesirable living conditions in the District and then make no effort to find better conditions, make me sick. Only a car token would do it, if they haven't a car.

Profile

A few weeks ago I chanced to notice in a heap of paper refuse a reproduction of a large close-up photograph of one of the European dictators. I found upon closer scrutiny, later, that there had been written in the margin of the picture the following lines, which seem to be of sufficient interest to warrant preservation in print:—"Eyes of a lizard—hard and cold as ice in a blizzard . . . straight slit for a mouth . . . short nose, which shows intellectual drouth . . . upper lip tight narrow band of rind-gristle . . . middle third hid in indigenous bristle . . . same thorny cruelty seen in a thistle . . . no humor but ill . . . sadistic will to coil round, torture, crush, and kill . . . a turtle head thrust from a keratin cage . . . too bad you survived the Reptilian Age!"

Listing Strikes

You ought to reserve sizable space in The Post every day and list, as you did Sunday, all the companies in industry who are troubled with strikes which curtail production so necessary to our national defense.

In this way, perhaps, the public may see the damage these strikes cause and then can raise so much fuss that proper legislation will be enacted in Congress making these kind of strikes illegal.

The other night I reread the Constitution and I still do not find any evidence of right, wherein, if I do not choose to work, I have any reason whatsoever to keep my neighbor from taking the job I did not want.

The Post Impressionist

One-Man Blood Bank

To be quite frank about it, I don't want to be drafted; I don't want to be in the Army. If I did, I should have enlisted long ago. I am enjoying myself very much the way I am, what with working industriously through the day with the highway department and spending my evenings listening to Mozart and reading books for review in The Post. It would be particularly annoying to be drafted just at this particular time, when I am in a fair way to become an expert baker of delicious bread, thanks to the Browns' "Look Before You Cook," which I reviewed recently.

I didn't particularly mind registering for the draft, for it meant that I was given three days' leave in order to return to my legal residence. The actual registration was enlivened for me by the presence of J. B., who was just ahead of me in the line. J. B. is a charming colored boy of about 20, possessed of a lovely voice and an inexhaustible repertoire of the songs of his race. J. B. and I have been friends for the last ten years. We greeted each other enthusiastically and, after we chatted for a few minutes, I asked him to sing a few stanzas of "This Train" to cheer me up.

J. B., with that entire lack of self-consciousness which is one of his most endearing traits, obligingly threw back his head, closed his eyes, and sang

"This train don't carry no gamblers,
(This train, this train),
This train don't carry no gamblers,
No snuff-dippers, no midnight ramblers.
This rain is bound for Glory,
(This train)."

Thus we got the registration over with comparatively painlessness, and I sat back to wait for the drawing. My order number was 5005! That meant that 5,004 men from my group would have to go before I was called. I assured myself there was nothing to get excited about. It would take them years to get down to me.

However, they proceeded to scale down the order numbers of my group and I emerged from this process considerably chastened. Now there were only 1,076 men ahead of me. They were getting closer, all right, but they were still a long way behind me. Then they began calling up some of my closest friends and companions, and I could hear their footsteps behind me.

Three weeks ago they sent me a questionnaire, which I duly filled out. All this, I told myself, was just preliminary work—you know, getting the clerical details over with. They were weeding out the married men, the physically unfit and the like. They were apparently mulling over the information I had given them, for I heard nothing from them for two weeks.

Then, last Saturday, I suddenly felt their breath hot on the back of my neck. They were catching up with me! They wrote me a letter, telling me that I had been placed tentatively in Class I, and sent me a physical examination form to be filled out immediately.

I had had my usual semiannual blood test ten days ago, so I took along the report card when I reported to the physician for examination. He gave it a brief glance and said, "No good!"

"What's the matter with it?" I asked. "It was made only ten days ago, and it says, 'Negative.'"

"Has to be in four copies," replied the physician. "Now roll up your sleeve and clench your fist tightly."

Thus I lost another pint of my blood. I am rather proud of that blood: it has been on the losing side of every fight for the last 300 years. And I got another taste of red tape; it wasn't my first and I'm sure it won't be my last.

I got through the physical with flying colors till it came to my hearing. I am by no means deaf; I hear everything I want to hear, but I just don't hear quite so sharply as I should. There is nothing wrong with my ears; I have had them examined several times. I think, fundamentally, it is because I was the only quiet and studious member of a large and noisy family. In pure self-preservation, at the age of 14, I trained myself to sit quite unmoved in the midst of sheerest bedlam and read the "Comedie Humaine" of Balzac, unmindful, indeed unconscious, of the hullabaloo about me. It is a useful trait, and I have held on to it.

The physician was very conscientious about measuring off 20 feet and using the properly conversational tone of voice in testing me. He wasn't quite sure, but he gave me a tentative rating of 10/20 in the left and 20/20 in the right. Then, just to be on the safe side, he sent me to an ear specialist for a more accurate test.

The ear specialist had me sit down facing a window and close my eyes. Then he retired to another room and blew a fearful blast on a policeman's whistle which stopped all traffic in the vicinity of his office.

"Did you hear that?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; in both ears," I replied.

"Well, young man; you're as good as in the Army now," he said, as he confirmed the first physician's rating.

Two days later they sent me a notice that on the basis of my physical examination I was subject to general military service. But, they added, I had to have a blood test made. Would I please report immediately to the examining physician and submit a specimen of my blood!

I know now what use they're going to find for Private Appleby; they're going to use him as a blood-bank.

Today And Tomorrow

The Stakes For The World

WE CAN BEGIN to measure the importance of the struggle in the Balkans and in Africa when we remember the circumstances under which the British decided to make a stand in that part of the world. The decision was taken last July in the weeks immediately after the fall of France. At that time the British army had suffered such losses in Flanders that there were not enough rifles and field artillery in the British Isles to repel an invasion. Day by day the government in London waited anxiously for news of the progress of the convoy which was carrying the guns that had been made available by the President from our reserve stocks. Yet in that moment of awful peril the British government decided to reinforce Gen. Wavell's army in Egypt, and it sent him troops and equipment from the British Isles.

LIPPMANN

Only men of absolute courage could have made that decision to reduce the forces defending their very homes in order to strengthen the defenses of a distant outpost. And only the most compelling reasons could have justified the risk—Mr. Churchill and the British people were faced last July with the imminent possibility of a Nazi invasion which would have cost the members of the government their lives and would have meant for the people devastation, starvation and slavery. Obviously, they were not thinking of enlarging their empire by conquering the Libyan desert or the wilderness of Ethiopia. They could afford to think only of what was essential to their own survival. Yet they judged it necessary to defend themselves by making a stand in the Middle East.

WHAT IS HAPPENING now and what is now at stake can be appreciated only if we grasp the ultimate reasons for this difficult and brave decision. Remember that in July of last summer there was no Balkan front and that no one had any reason to imagine that the Greeks and the Yugoslavs could or would resist Hitler's demands. Remember that the Italian navy and army and air force were unscathed, that the French navy was under the orders of a French government in which the leading figure, below Marshal Petain, was Pierre Laval. Remember too that there existed already an Axis partnership with Japan, and that a Japanese movement towards the Netherlands Indies and Singapore was clearly under way. Remember finally, that the United States was paralyzed by an election campaign which was bound not only to postpone a policy of aiding Britain, but perhaps even to prevent such a policy from ever being adopted.

In that situation the decision was taken that Suez must be held at all costs. The ultimate reason for that decision was that as long as the totalitarian powers could not pass in and out of the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal, and also in and out of the Pacific Ocean past Singapore, the Japanese and the Italian and the German navies could not reinforce one another. The region from Suez to Singapore is a barrier which separates the Asiatic from the European part of the Triple Axis. If Suez were lost, then Singapore could be attacked from one side by Japan, from the other by Italy and Germany. If Suez and Singapore were in enemy hands, the Japanese navy could come into the Mediterranean and into the Atlantic, as in fact it did in the other war, the Italian and German navies could come into the Pacific. The combined navies of these three totalitarian powers, if they could be used as one force, would have been immeasurably more powerful, perhaps decisively more powerful in either ocean, than these same navies separated by the great British wedge from Suez to Singapore.

THE WORLD, we must remember, is not flat as on a printed map, but it is a globe. On this globe there are two passageways between Europe and Asia, between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. The one way is past Suez and Singapore, and these doors are held by the British. The other way is through the Panama Canal. There the door is held by the United States. Just as it is absolutely vital to our defense that we should be able to pass through Panama and that no enemy should pass through it, so it is equally vital that the other passageway between the two oceans should be in friendly hands. If Suez fell to Germany and Singapore to Japan, the totalitarian powers of Europe and Asia would be united and could act together in either ocean as and when they saw fit. Thus the maintenance of the Suez-Singapore wedge adds enormously to the military value of the Panama Canal. For if there are two doors to the same room, the use of that room cannot be controlled effectively by opening or closing only one of the doors.

The decision to defend Suez and Singapore was, therefore, a decision that, even if the totalitarian states were dominant on the land of Europe and Asia, they must be kept divided on the sea and prevented thereby from achieving a chance to command the sea. This is the significance to the world as a whole of the decision of the British to reinforce Gen. Wavell's army of the Nile, a decision which led to the victories in Libya and Ethiopia, to the Greek and then the Yugoslav resistance, to the naval disasters that Italy has suffered. In the last analysis what is at stake in the Middle East and in all these campaigns is whether or not the European Axis is to be locked up in Europe and its Asiatic ally locked up in Asia. For if ever the wedge which separates the western and eastern aggressors were removed and they could act together, they would be able, as they are not now able, to seek in fact, and not merely in their general hopes, the domination of the world.

IT TOOK COURAGE last July to decide that Suez and Singapore must be reinforced. But to clear-sighted men it was an absolutely necessary decision. It has been amply justified. In a region where the British were weak and alone, they now have allies, they have irreparably weakened Italy, they now hold positions all the way from Macedonia to Aden on the Red Sea where they can, even on the worst calculation as to what will happen in the Balkans and Libya, continue to hold the wedge that separates Europe from Asia.

As long as that wedge holds firm, British and American sea power combined are superior to the separated sea power of the totalitarian allies. There is still, therefore, a good prospect that there will not be a Battle of the Pacific, and there is a good prospect that the Battle of the Atlantic can and will be won.

Shipping Dilemma

IF THE SIGNS do not deceive, the crucial shipping situation will first be treated with palliative measures, and convoying will only be ordered as a last resort. The big question then is: "Will palliative measures be enough?" "For a time, but probably only for a time," appears to be the best answer obtainable here.

In truth, the situation to which it is now proposed to apply palliatives is already bad enough to call for stronger steps, if political considerations did not stand in the way. It cannot be exactly summarized, since only a handful of men at the heads of the British and American governments have the full information. Yet there is enough fragmentary evidence to indicate the nature of the problem.

For one thing, during February, when shipping losses reached a grim peak, the British are known to have had a 25 per cent deficiency of needed imports. They have wisely built up large reserves of goods and munitions. Their food supply, for example, is supposed to be sufficient to keep them going for at least three months by stringent self-denial. Yet the British authorities' fear of a pinch is testified to by their recent tendency to give priority over other shipments from this country.

THEN, TOO, the strain of the Mediterranean campaign on Britain's shipping resources is constantly increasing. Most of the convoys carrying men and supplies into the Mediterranean must take the 12,000-mile voyage around Africa, since the German air fleet in Sicily threatens the Western Mediterranean. The voyage lasts about two months each way.

A huge tonnage is required to support Wavell's armies. For example, it is calculated that 500,000 tons of shipping must now reach Greece monthly, which means that about 2,000,000 tons are tied up in the Greek adventure alone.

Finally, few experts suppose that the Germans have shown their full strength thus far. In February, they are thought to have made a test. During the last month, when shipping losses were more normal, they are believed to have called home all but a minimum number of their submarines for a final training period for new crews. Their submarine fleet is variously estimated, from as low as 240 to as high as 600, with the middle ground the best bet. Supposing the middle ground bet is correct, and the new crews ready, they can more than repeat in April their February achievement. The British have adopted certain new antisubmarine devices. There are rumors, for instance, of small, quickly improvised aircraft carriers, to carry long-range pursuits. These will patrol the air above the convoys and pick off the big Focke-Wulf bombers the Germans are using to spot convoys for their submarine "wolf packs." Yet there is little confidence that such devices, standing alone, will be enough to meet the German threat.

The proposed palliative measures fall into four categories. One, the repair in American ports of damaged British merchant ships and naval vessels, has already been decided on. Another, cooperative use of British and American shipping, so that American ships do duty for British wherever possible, outside the danger areas, will probably be embarked on as soon as the British shipping expert, Sir Arthur Salter, gets together with the Maritime Commission. A joint British-American shipping committee is contemplated, to parallel the joint aircraft and ordnance committees already quietly formed.

THE TWO MEASURES remaining are much more controversial. First is changing the combat zones, which the President announced he was considering on Friday. Although the British would like this country to open the way to Ireland for our ships, the chief change suggested by American officials is the opening of the Red Sea. Combat zones, it is contended are danger areas. With the Italians being chased out of Ethiopia and Somaliland, all danger in the Red Sea is at an end. Thus the change is excused. However, since the Neutrality Act forbids American vessel to carry arms to belligerent ports, and since Egypt was included in the list of belligerents in the President's neutrality proclamation, this list will probably have to be altered as well.

Finally, there is the strongest step next to convoying—release of additional naval vessels and merchant ships to the British. The President is believed to feel it will be useless to give the British merchant ships without also giving them destroyers and other craft suitable for convoying to protect them. The Navy's anxiety to keep its remaining forty or so over-age destroyers is well known. The admirals, searching for arguments on their side, contend that the British do not have the crews to man more destroyers. But the President is understood to have received personal assurance from Winston Churchill that the crews exist and are ready. Small anti-submarine craft have already been released, and the chances are pretty good that a compromise number of destroyers say 20 or thereabouts—will also be handed over.

SUCH is the situation. Such are the ways to meet it, short of convoying. There can be no doubt that the Administration is unanimously determined to meet the situation effectively, by palliatives if possible, by convoying if necessary.

If convoying comes, it seems likely to come after the situation has worsened, and American public opinion has matured. Meanwhile, it is healthy that the President and his subordinates are not ready to make so grave a decision in haste, and that most of them say they welcome public debate of its tremendous implications.

Lawyers At Havana

By Crawford M. Bishop

Inter-American Bar Association—II

MANY IMPORTANT recommendations were made by the Conference of the Inter-American Bar Association, at Havana, to the national associations. Among these was one suggesting the exerting of their influence to obtain uniform legislation protecting the investment of foreign capital. The need for developing latent resources of the American Republics to meet the present emergency cannot be met without adequate protection by law for the alien investor. Another resolution recommended the enactment of legislation by which the law of trusts, as it exists in common law countries, be incorporated into the civil law. Such legislation is particularly necessary to enable the financing of local enterprises by the issuance of bonds.

A further step in the direction of the protection of foreign capital was taken by the conference as a result of round-table discussion of tax problems. This was expressed in the resolution that the member bar associations urge their governments to conclude treaties aimed at preventing the imposition of discriminatory, extraterritorial, and double taxes. A paper by Mitchell B. Carroll dealt with the prevention of double taxation in the Americas through the development of international law. Since the Latin-American Republics began levying income taxes, following the example of the United States, it has not infrequently resulted that American or other foreign individuals or companies have found themselves subject to taxes by two authorities on income earned abroad.

THE STUDY of the laws of the several countries relating to immigration, naturalization and citizenship, and of the legal documentation relating to civil status of persons, was entrusted to committees of experts to be appointed. The unification of legislation, at which such study aims would, if obtained, facilitate in great measure the movement of individuals from one country to another, and contribute to better understanding and greater development of resources. The removal of obstacles to the free movement of persons and capital deserves the sympathetic consideration of every American government.

THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL was also requested to consider organizing a third committee to make a study of customs laws and commercial treatries. As a guide to the work of this and the other committees, there are available the many excellent papers presented by leading attorneys and authorities in the respective round-tables in which the resolutions originated. If, as a result of such studies, adverse customs restrictions may be removed and inter-American commerce promoted, the Inter-American Bar Association will have done much to justify the hopes of its organizers.

Of the results accomplished at the first conference of the association, probably none is of greater importance than the creation of the "Inter-American Academy of Comparative Law." This academy, with its seat at Havana, is to offer special courses in comparative and international law to American students, to be conducted by professors of the various American countries. The academy is to be organized by a committee of seven members designated by the council of the association. Such an institution should receive financial assistance both from governments and private endowments interested in developing inter-American relations.

FOR THE BETTER administration of justice, the conference urged its member associations to recommend to their governments the negotiation of treaties of comity with one another. These should have, as their object, the mutual service of court documents, the supplying of information regarding foreign laws, and the recognition and execution of foreign judgments. The advantage of taking such subjects out of the realm of private international law and making them the subject of public international treaties is evident.

In the realm of administrative law and procedure the conference recommended the establishment of a system of exchange of information among the several countries of America. This has a particular and timely importance for the United States, because of the recent report of the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure and of the bills now pending in Congress. This country may do well to study the legislation of its sister republics in regard to administrative procedure, in which they have had a longer practical experience and have developed a considerable body of adjective law and precedent.

AMONG OTHER constructive suggestions for the improvement of the profession was the resolution recommending the creation of law libraries, the establishment of courses in legal ethics in all law schools, the preparation of a draft code of professional ethics and the inclusion of a requirement of good moral character for entrance into law schools and the conferment of degrees.

FOR THE preservation and diffusion of legal knowledge, a recommendation was made for the establishment of national centers of legal documentation in all the countries represented by member bar associations. The executive committee was asked to study the possibilities of publishing a journal devoted to the activities of the association and to the publication of articles of interest to the legal profession. The creation and publication of bibliographical and juridical indices in each country was urged upon the member bar associations, with a view to the eventual creation of a Pan-American Bibliographical Index.

These resolutions grew out of the round-table discussion on international legal documentation, presided over by Dr. John T. Vance, law librarian of Congress, who presented a scholarly paper on that subject.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the association was charged with the study of projects submitted to the conference, relative to the creation of an American Institute of Comparative Constitutional Law, of a Pan-American Institute of Comparative Law, and of an Inter-American Office for the Unification of Criminal Law. Recommendations with regard to these projects are to be submitted to the next conference, which is to be held in September, 1942, in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

While these projects may not be realized, or may be consolidated with the "Inter-American Academy of Comparative Law" abovementioned, nevertheless, the fact that they were presented and considered shows the lively interest taken by the delegates in the study of comparative law. This hitherto neglected field of legal study in the Americas would appear now, for the first time, to be coming into its own. The resolution recommending the establishment of relations among the law students of the different universities of the Americas is another step in the same direction. The mutual ignorance of the systems of common law and of civil law prevailing in North and South America, respectively, will, it is anticipated, give way to a better comprehension by the bench and bar in all the countries, and usher in an era of mutual understanding and cooperation.

The Once Over

Men's Styles For 1941

While there will be no change of basic patents involved in men's clothing styles for 1941, and it will still be impossible to get in and out of this year's clothes the same as in 1940, this department's look-see into the situation has convinced it that there will be new touches to pants, coats and vests. If you expect to remain in civilian clothes, bend an ear:

Colors will switch sharply from the loud tendencies of previous springs. This is due largely to the fact that, with the draft on, no male wants to be more conspicuous than necessary. Even males beyond the Selective Service age will prefer the duller hues on the ground there is no sense being an oriole during a bird hunt.

Coats (jackets) and trousers (pants) will be roomier. There is so much going on and so much to be seen in these critical days that the ability to turn completely around inside a suit of clothes is paramount. Pockets will be inadequate as usual, but they will be cut much larger, tailors having awakened to the fact a man has to carry so many things around on him these days that a well-designed suit of clothes must combine some features of a satchel, filing cabinet and old-fashioned desk.

There was a time when pockets were expected to contain little except loose change, seat stubs, matches and an old letter or two, but with the changes in the social system, the war, et cetera, there must be ample pocket room for Federal summonses, Government notices, correspondence with various Washington commissions, lawyers' briefs, instructions on how to read tax forms and analyses of new laws, ordinances and regulations. In fact, the so-called "business suit" to be adequate today must have a loading capacity up to two tons, and there should be deep inside pockets for carrying records of conferences attended to date and conferences impending.

In addition, a business suit should have room for at least a bottle of spirits of ammonia, a digest of latest Congressional action, divers bulletins from the labor front and the usual vitamin tablets. (This is exclusive of room for old mutuel tickets, data on mud horses, 11 or 12 keys which fit nothing whatever, chewing gum, odd crumbs and those letters you were supposed to mail a week ago Tuesday.)

Designers of clothes for the well-distressed man have, however, been alert to the situation, and some of the best ones have put zippers on the entire lining of a business suit so it can be opened, filled and closed again, like de luxe golf bags.

Pants will be longer than ever, there being no demand at all for short pants in a season when the desire to seem under 21 is practically nil.

Buttons—Smart tailors will feature bright buttons on men's clothes, possibly adding a few bells, reflecting the conviction that anything that will give a man a cheerier appearance should be provided.

Hats, shoes, etc.—There will be little change in men's hats, but it is a year when a mug is going to feel particularly silly going around with a gay band and a feather. Men's shoes will continue to look like shoes and will permit males to keep their toes to themselves. Should they follow the ladies' open-deck shoe styles it would be but a step from that, they feel, to wearing hats with their heads out and clothes with their bodies out.

Suspenders, Jumpers, Overalls It looks like a good year for 'em.

The War At Sea

By Mark Sullivan

The Urgent Need For Convoys

BEFORE THE German invasion of Greece and Yugoslavia, the matter of using American naval vessels for convoying cargo ships was serious. Now it is urgent. Very soon, America must come to a decision about it. The decision is bound to be for action. The only question is to choose one out of different ways for making our naval vessels available.

SULLIVAN

Upon both Britain and America the new battle-front in the Balkans puts an extra need for cargo ships. The extra need falls upon Britain because she must now support a new battle front, far distant from her home base of supplies, and against a German army. The extra need falls upon us because we have told Greece and Yugoslavia we would give them help—munitions, and the like. Some way, the help from us must be delivered to those nations—they have few or no cargo ships of their own available. We can hardly say to those hard-pressed little nations, "Here is help—if you come and get it." When we made the promise of help, doubtless we assumed the help would be carried by British cargo ships. But we now face the fact that Britain has desperate need of her own for all the cargo ships she can command.

Cargo ships means not merely cargo ships. It means cargo ships convoyed by naval vessels. Also, all the cargo ships available to Britain, and all available to the United States, must be considered as one—a common pool of cargo shipping. As for convoying, that so far has been done by Britain alone. It has not been enough. One way or another, Britain must get the use of American naval vessels for convoying; otherwise she will lose the war.

THE TRUTH IS, to state it baldly, Britain has been losing the war for some months past. During the period when many events created optimism—the British victories in Africa, her victories over the Italian navy, the refusal of Yugoslavia to bow to Germany—during that very period, and in spite of those favorable events, the war has been going against Britain. It has been going against her in the quarter that vitally counts—her ability to keep open her lifelines upon the sea. The war has been going against Britain because of the increased effectiveness of the Germans in sinking cargo ships. About this aspect of the war we have been as fatuous lately as we were about the western front a year ago, before Germany broke the Maginot line.

The record of German sinkings for the four weeks, February 23-March 23, was 400,413 tons—this is the official figure furnished by Britain. For this figure to have any meaning to the average reader, he must compare it with new construction during the same period. About new construction, no figures are available on a monthly basis, and any figures used for any current and future period must include some degree of estimate. An estimate commonly accepted by experts is:

Anticipated new construction in British shipyards the present year, about 1,000,000 tons.

Anticipated new construction in American yards during the present year, about 1,000,000 tons.

Here is a total of new construction, American and British combined, of some 2,000,000 tons. And here is Germany sinking at a rate of about 5,000,000 tons. Germany is sinking existing ships more than twice as fast as new ships are being built.

THIS STATEMENT is subject to some explanation. The estimate that Germany will sink 5,000,000 tons the current year is based on the accomplished fact that she sank some 400,000 tons in March. Question may be raised whether she can keep up the March pace indefinitely. Experts say the answer is yes—unless the British get help from the American Navy in holding the Germans off. Also it should be said that by a year from now America will be building new cargo ships at a rate far in excess of a million tons a year, perhaps 4,000,000 tons a year. But a year is longer than Britain can safely wait.

That American naval vessels will be used for convoying, practically everybody in Washington takes for granted. But there are two ways, widely different, and about these there is argument.

We can simply transfer the destroyers to Britain as provided by the "lease-lend" bill, letting Britain furnish the crews. This would be according to law, and would carry us no farther toward war than we already are. Already, last September, we transferred 50 destroyers to Britain.

To the direct transfer of vessels, one objection is time—it would take weeks for British crews to learn to operate the American vessels. Another objection comes from persons in our Navy and Administration who think we ought not to relinquish ownership of naval vessels which conceivably we may need later. After all, our Navy men must take into account the possibility, at least, that Britain may lose the war, that Germany may get possession of the British fleet, including the vessels we now transfer to her.

THE OTHER WAY would be for our destroyers to do the convoying as American vessels, manned by American crews and under the American flag. That would be the quickest and most effective way. The objection to this is that it would be practically an act of war. Though we have already gone far along the road, and have done so with our eyes open, it is doubtful if our Government is willing to take any final step at this time.

Fredericksburg Area To Form Defense Unit

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—Brig. Gen. James A. Anderson, coordinator of the State defense council, will attend the organization sessions of the Fredericksburg and southwestern regional councils this week.

He will go to Fredricksburg Wednesday when that area council convenes at the country club at 11 a. m. for its first meeting. Matters relating to the resettlement of Caroline residents who may have to give up their homes for an Army maneuver ground probably will be discussed.

The southwestern council meeting will be held at Abingdon Friday at 10:30 a. m.

Court to Decide if Congress Can Regulate Primaries

The Supreme Court took under advisement yesterday the question whether Congress can regulate primaries, especially in the South, where nomination frequently is equivalent to election.

Herbert Wechsler, special assistant to the Attorney General, argued that it could but this was disputed by Warren O. Coleman, attorney for five New Orleans election commissioners charged with changing votes cast in a Democratic Congressional primary. The litigation is of potential far-reaching importance.

"If Congress has this power" Coleman asserted, "it has the power to abolish all primary elections for Senators and Representatives in every State in the Union. It has the power to establish conventions, to overthrow conventions, to provide any sort of a primary that it may desire."

The indictment was dismissed by the Eastern Louisiana Federal District Court on the ground that the Supreme Court had held that Congress had no authority to regulate primaries, but only general elections.

This 1921 decision ruled that Congress would not regulate expenditures by Senator Truman Newberry, of Michigan, in his campaign for nomination. Chief Justice Hughes, then a practicing attorney, represented Newberry.

Wechsler said that "under the laws of Louisiana the primary is a part of the election machinery of the State" and "is not only an integral part of the process of choice" but "is the determinative part."

"If a State prefers to conduct Congressional elections in two steps rather than in one," he added, "the protection of the Constitution reaches to both. Where, as in Louisiana, the first step is not only important, but is actually decisive, the constitutional guarantee necessarily applies."

Spring Asserts Itself

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Washington went springtime yesterday and all who could went out to see it.

Pink cherry blossom signs were up at the intersections. Forsythia bloomed on the White House lawn. Hyacinths had cropped up on the Allies' Inn, at Seventeenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest. Star magnolias bloomed on the Pan American Building lawn. The cherry tree buds were puffing green and red, and the sun made silver fingerings on the river.

The fishermen were out in droves along Hains Point. Some fished with six or eight poles and had an invention whereby they could sleep and still catch a fish. This is by the device of hanging a bell on the line.

Throwing his line in a sleepy outcurve, across from the Naval Air Station, was Louis Browdy, 40 years a fisherman, of 3640 Eldridge Avenue, Brentwood. He knew the river. For 50 years ago he had hunted rabbits with wooden clubs down there. They were that thick before rabbits and the shore were regimented. Yesterday Browdy complained to the ripples and his recollections. The annual menace of the bicycle had come.

He was there fishing and thinking how, back in the middle twenties, a woman had fallen in and everyone else had wondered how to get her out, when she came up for the third time. He had made a cast, snagged his hook into the shoulder of her dress and dragged her out.

He was using that kind of pole and line yesterday and along came a woman bicyclist, ran over the pole, which was propped on the railing, and broke its handle.

"She stopped mighty nice but I think she gave me a fictitious name," he said.

A man nearby said the catfish and white perch were doing all right but the herring wouldn't come up until the dogwood bloomed.

The tourists going now to the Tidal Basin can get some understanding of what the Greater National Capital Committee contends with every year in letting them know when to come to see the blossoms. Day before yesterday there were scarcely any buds. Then, yesterday the sun came out, causing the forsythia to bloom on the White House lawn, the star magnolias on the Pan American Building lawn, the silver fingerings to appear on the river and the cherry buds sprang out and colored and bulged as if to burst.

Steve's Answer to Nazis Is Nuts

Those ferocious growls heard on East Executive Avenue, beside the White House, yesterday emanated from Washington's most indignant man, Steve Vassilakos, who sells peanuts and would like to ram a crate of them down Hitler's ears, free of charge with the shells included.

Steve is a Greek.

In his terrible indignation over the attempted invasion of his homeland, English fails him and he falls back on Greek, which has a few better adjectives. A man of action as much as words he has begun firing away his peanuts at the Germans. He has posted a sign, reading:

"For two days all my receipts will be given to Greek relief, Steve Vassilakos."

And verbally, with a point toward the White House:

"You remember, sure you remember. Wilson sent the Kaiser to Holland. That man's going to send Hitler and Mussolini to the North Pole. That'll cool 'em off."

Lavish Jewels, Gay Flowers Enter Fashion Picture

Hollywood, Calif.—Lavish jewels and gay flowers have been drawn so completely into the new fashion picture that even the most starkly tailored suit will carry its bit of sparkling detail, its tiny corsage.

Bette Davis, declaring that the selection of flowers for any costume is an art in itself, exhibits a smart whim. She clips a small bunch of fresh violets to one cuff, then completes the color scheme with a matching amethyst clip on a lapel.

And now that the most popular spring hat carries a miniature flower garden on the crown, it's Ida Lupino's idea to match the artificial posies with real ones drawn through the belt of a simple, dark dress. She does it with orange poppies, striking a very new and colorful note with a navy sheer frock and highcrowned sailor banked with poppies and bachelor buttons.

Anyone can copy a simple trick employed by Olivia de Havilland of hooding the row of shirt buttons on brown santung slacks under artificial black-eyed Susans. Geraldine Fitzgerald suggests clipping three rose buds to a narrow, black velvet neckband especially effective with off-the-shoulder necklines.

Muffs of fur will be replaced with muffs of small, fresh flowers for formal evenings.

Hold Head High To Achieve Lovely Walk

By Ida Jean Kain

IN A make-yourself-over program, the way you walk is elementary—but there's more to it than just putting one foot ahead of the other. Your carriage is the important thing.

There is a theory that a beautiful carriage hinges on the way you hold your head. If you hold your head high, you don't slump; and the straight line at the back of the neck impels you to automatically lift the chest and retract the abdominal muscles.

For a practical demonstration of the way the rule works, try this: Lie on the back on the floor with knees flexed and feet flat on the floor. Concentrate on the vertebrae of the neck and try to flatten this area against the floor. To do it you will involuntarily raise the chest and pull with the lower abdominal muscles.

It's an excellent posture test to stand facing a wall with toes touching the wall. The only other part of the body which should touch is the chest. If your nose touches, that's a bad sign—you're carrying your head too far forward. And if the stomach touches, you have a sway back and will have to straighten that out before your posture or figure can be good. One of the best posture exercises is simply to lie on back on floor with knees flexed and "dig" the small of the back down into the floor.

Point Toes Ahead

In walking, keep your balance by pointing the toes straight ahead. Don't point them out to the sides. And in stepping along, place one foot ahead of the other almost in a straight line so that you will hold the upper legs together and avoid wabbling.

A graceful walk is mostly hip action, not knee action—but the knees must be flexible. A stiff-kneed walk makes you look old. To keep flexible, do this once a day: Stand barefooted with feet parallel and heels flat on the floor, and bend the knees until you are about halfway down. Don't let the heels come off the floor.

You can acquire more poise by borrowing the model's trick of walking a chalkline with a book balanced on the top of your head. If your head is squarely on your shoulders, your spine straight, and your walk a glide, the book will stay put. Then try walking the line barefoot on tiptoes, and finally go up and down stairs.

Practice Pigeon-Toed

You can break a tendency to "toe out" by practicing walking the line pigeon-toed. Or, if you want an exercise to strengthen the feet, walk the line barefoot with toes curled under and weight thrown to outer borders.

When your figure is aligned in perfect posture your bones give you much better support and you don't have to have such strong muscles.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Visitor From West Asks How to Revive Faith in Her Husband, Wrecked by His Brazen Misconduct While She Was Invalided, Expecting Third Child

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a youngish housewife and the mother of three children. My home is in a Western State, but I am here for 10 days. I have been reading your column with pleasure and it occurs to me that you may be able to help me. I shall be watching for your answer, hoping you can find space for it before I leave town.

My youngest child, a daughter, was born a little over a year ago. For three months prior to her birth, I was sick in bed most of the time. Just about six weeks before she arrived, a tragic thing happened. An 18-year-old girl came between me and my husband. At first, I did not realize the seriousness of the situation, because I loved my husband and trusted him completely.

You see, we planned to bring in a "hired girl" to take care of the house during my invalidism, but instead of getting the girl I had in mind, my husband brought this girl into our home. He had completely lost his head over her. It was terrible what I went through, watching them together while trying to keep my chin up and regain control of the situation. I talked to my husband about it, but he just made fun of me and told me how ugly I was and how much he hated me.

The two older children, boys, aged 12 and 9, respectively, saw how their daddy was behaving. The younger boy told me he saw the girl in his father's arms. When I reported this to my husband, thinking it might shame him into better behavior, he simply said, "Don't be jealous of me." For three months I was terribly hurt by the spectacle of his open pursuit of her, although I begged and pleaded with him every day to return to his senses.

When I was able to be up, we let the girl go, but my husband has continued to be very distant to me. I feel that I am not wanted; and that I would like to leave him and never see him again; but I cannot walk out on the children. Our once happy home seems to have no foundation at all. Please tell me what to do; how to rebuild what was destroyed, if possible; and, if not, how to carry on from here. Sincerely, M. T. R.

One Cannot Trust Man Who Lacks Decency

DEAR M. T. R.: You speak of rebuilding what was destroyed: namely, your trust in, and love and respect for, your husband. In my opinion, such attitudes on your part toward him cannot be reconstructed—for the reason that he revealed himself, in his misconduct with the girl, to be intrinsically a little lower than the beasts, for even the beasts are instinctively faithful to, and protective of, a mate, in the period preceding and immediately following the birth of their young.

Your husband is not only a weakling, but he is vicious (either a moron or a thoroughly "bad" man),—else he would not have carelessly defiled his sons' imaginations with the spectacle of his brazen infidelity to their mother, while she lay sick a-bed expecting a baby. Nor would he, —unless he were fundamentally a malignantly cruel man,—have taunted you, at such a time, while so involved, with biting references to your "ugliness" and his detestation of you. It is not so much the fact of his polygamous inclinations, as it is the form of expression they found, which mark him a person devoid of the qualities we classify under the heading of "human decency."

It is common knowledge that many marriages have survived the storm of one partner's passionate attraction to a third party. But when they survive, it is because there have been elements of decency in the character of husband and wife which have prompted them to go on showing consideration for each other's feelings and welfare, even in hours of most cruel interior trial. Your husband has shown himself stranger to this kind of decency, to judge by the nastiness of his misbehavior, in all the aspects reported. And this estimate of his character leaves us without any starting point from which to begin to rebuild your shattered confidence in him.

As for "how to carry on from here,"—it seems to me you must already have partially solved that problem, inasmuch as you have gone on living with him for more than a year since he has so villianously destroyed your regard for him. Amid the ruins of that faith in him which had been the "foundation" of your wifely happiness,—you have "carried on" for your children's sake, in something of that spirit of saintly patience and exalted heroism so exquisitely depicted in Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light." The spirit of: "I do not ask to see the distant scene,—one step enough for me."

In certain situations—and yours appears to be one of them—such heroic time-marking constitutes the most advisable procedure. It need not be a negative experience. It may be productive of future assets, such as wisdom, indomitable fortitude, enriched human sympathy, the calm knowledge that nothing is so bad that it can not be borne (while life lasts) for the sake of loved ones who need our protection and unwavering example of serene gallantry.

My advice to you is to "carry on" in such a way as to compensate to your children for their shoddy-souled father — giving them, from day to day, memories of a mother who is brave and gay, optimistic and resourceful, whose fount of peace and strength resides in her own spirit; so that their hearts may always swell with happy pride and affection, both now and in future years, at the thought, sight or mention of you; and so that they will have, in you, an inspiring "example to live by," when problems of their own must be met. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Living Room Of 1923 Needs Brightening

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Remember the living rooms of 1923 . . . davenport and chairs with mahogany frames, cane arms and backs, taupe velvet cushions! Well, that's the sort of room Mrs. V. W. is redecorating this spring, and she writes for our suggestions. The rug will be replaced, the walls repapered, the furniture cushions recovered. The woodwork is a fine rich oak and so are the library table and bookcases, while the dining room adjoining also has oak furniture. For this reason she would like to work out a color scheme that would blend and emphasize the woodwork.

She's considering a light green wall paper, perhaps striped, and a dark brown rug with an all-over pattern of autumn leaves. For the windows she feels she might like sateen draperies with a gold or yellow ground and a pattern of rusts and browns. She wants the effect to be colorful neither garish nor somber. She is open to suggestions for quite a different color scheme than the one she mentions.

Basic Approach

In analyzing this problem, we'd approach it from a more basic angle. From the plan enclosed, we see that the room has a great many openings for doors and windows and very little wall space. That means that the effect is likely to be cluttered looking unless care is taken with pattern and colors.

Our first reaction, therefore, would be to paint that dark woodwork in the same color as the walls in order to achieve a more tranquil room. However, if you like that oak woodwork and want to keep it, then your idea of planning the room around it is the best. But don't have so much pattern elsewhere in the room . . . we'd have the wall paper in a plain effect rather than striped and in a color that doesn't contrast with the oak as much as the green would. For instance a warm beige or else a sunny yellow for the walls. Then for the windows we'd prefer no side draperies but beautifully made, beautifully hung curtains of ninon, voile or organdy in the same color as the wall—beige or yellow.

Brown Rug Advised

For the floor we'd like the brown rug with the all-over autumn leaf design. Then select a gayly flowered sateen on beige or yellow ground, something with lovely garden colors and green leaves—use this for covering the cushions and for slip covering extra chairs. You might also make fresh lamp shades of this flowered fabric and if the windows seem too plain, have valances of this flowered material. An alternative plan would be to use this flowered material for curtains—since it would be the same ground color as the walls, the result would not be broken up too much.

Sheet Buying Hint

A good tape selvage, according to the American Institute of Laundering, makes a sheet 25 per cent stronger at this point of heavy strain. So, when purchasing sheets, examine the selvage closely. It should be closely woven, like a tape, and free from wrinkles at the edge. No loose threads should extend from it and the selvage edge should be clean. Such a selvage is worthy of a good sheet, because it will not crack or separate from the rest of the sheet.

Spring Dresses Feature Drapery

New York (AP).—Dressmaker costumes—wool dress with matching cape or jacket—are runners-up to suits for spring basics. They allow great femininity in detail—ribbon bindings, trapunto work at hem and sleeve.

The great season for dresses is not quite here, but early shoppers show a definite preference for feminine lines—drapery at the bosom, slim skirts slit up the front, wide bell sleeves, sometimes faced with lace ruffles.

Spring Menus

ABOUT this time of the year we look around for ways of making our dishes in tune with the spring season. Sometimes it takes but a little change to give old dishes to appeal. Here are some suggestions for pepping up our dishes

Lightly toasted vitamin B bread makes a nutritious foundation for freshly cooked asparagus. Pour melted cheese over all, to make the meal complete.

A triple-decker hot sandwich is good for Sunday brunch or Sunday supper. Each sandwich needs three slices of toast, buttered. On the first slice put hot asparagus. Cover with toast. On the second slice put sliced hard cooked egg, and a spoonful of mayonnaise. Serve with cole slaw in a lettuce leaf cup.

Slices of bread are transformed into buttercups when pushed into a muffin cup so that the corners of the slice stick up. Toast the bread and fill with creamy scrambled eggs to which minced parsley or minced chives have been added. Serve with buttered peas and prune muffins. For dessert, try pink rhubarb sauce with a cookie.

Hot biscuits, made rather large and then split, are a delicious foundation for creamed eggs in cheese sauce. A buttered green vegetable and spiced peach complete this tempting and nutritious luncheon plate.

When crisp French rolls, with tops cut off and crumb removed, are toasted, they are excellent holders of creamed salmon, or of poached eggs in cheese sauce. Fruited gelatin salad is a good accompaniment.

Bundles-for-Britain Plate

For those who collect commemorative items, a Bundles for Britain plate is interesting—it has a white ground with a symbolic crest in red, blue and gold in the center, while the rib is decorated with embossed designs of the Scotch thistle, the English acorn, the Irish shamrock and the Welsh daffodil. The plate sells for about a dollar.

If you can neither fly nor climb, don't be discouraged . . . perhaps you can kick.
—Elbert Hubbard

And if you don't kick about poor coffee, my friend, you are indeed in a sad state. Why be satisfied with something that's less than the best . . . especially when Wilkins costs only a few paltry pennies more than average coffee. Shucks' soon they won't even make pennies. I'll betcha!

Society Still Buzzing Over Gridiron Whirl

By Hope Ridings Miller

AFTER WHIPPING ITSELF into a grade-A froth over the week-end, Capital society settled down long enough yesterday to take stock of the happenings that enlivened (and I mean enlivened) the local whirl the past few days.

Table talk at a number of informal luncheons, teas and supper parties buzzed with rumors, reflections and some first-hand reports of what went on in Our Town from Friday afternoon until the final trainload of Gridiron visitors pulled out of town early yesterday. But here are a few choice items I picked up in passing from party to party on Saturday and Sunday:

Hope Ridings Miller

Wendell L. Willkie, lingering in the small ballroom of the Willard to talk Sunday afternoon, while most of the guests at the Gridiron Drone party were in the next room watching the skits, made two statements that still have the whole town talking. First, he was "willing to bet anybody, anything, that this war is over by December, 1941—with an Allied victory." Then, he was "willing to bet that every noninterventionist Representative and Senator who comes up for reelection in 1942 will be defeated."

I must say a couple of noninterventionist Senators who overheard him didn't seem to be worried. "Thus far Willkie's prowess as a prophet has been none too good," one commented with a chuckle.

MRS. WILLKIE apparently was more amused than anybody while the skit in which her husband was blistered went on the gridiron. She laughed out loud about the line that had "the White House calling Wendell Willkie . . . a lot louder than it called him last November."

Later, she told friends she and her husband their son, Philip, were returning to New York late Sunday night. "I've had a wonderful time in Washington," she added, "but I couldn't stand this pace long."

Incidentally, at Mrs. Eleanor Patterson's party following the Gridiron dinner, the three Willkies were completely surrounded from the minute they arrived. A year ago, at a similar party at the Patterson house, Mr. and Mrs. Willkie were comparatively unknown and unnoticed and everybody was crowded around Thomas A. Dewey, at that time the front-rank candidate for the Republican nomination.

On Saturday night, however, getting close enough to talk to Dewey was no trouble at all. He told me, by the way, that he and Mrs. Dewey had just finished a vacation in Florida and that she went on back to New York without stopping in Washington "because she couldn't stay away from our boys any longer."

Jim Farley and Dewey arrived at the party about the same time, and each held a litle court of his own for a brief time in the ballroom. Rumors were floating freely through the throng that come 1942 Dewey and Farley will be pitted against each other for the New York Governorship.

WHEN MRS. ROOSEVELT sent word to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brayman that she couldn't attend the Gridiron Drones reception, she said it with flowers. Three dozen red and pink roses accompanied her note or regret. You saw them (the roses, of course) in a huge bouquet atop the piano in the ballroom.

Capt. Elliott Roosevelt thought the Gridiron show "lacked punch" this time. At least, that was the report rippling around the room after some of the skits had gone on the boards Sunday afternoon. By the way, invitations for that party stipulated that the hours were from 4 to 7 o'clock. At 9:30 several guests were still on hand, and the Braymans were half an hour late to another party.

Although he has consistently refused to be lionized in the fashion of most literary figures, Marquis James had a lion's share of attention at practically all the fetes swirling around the Gridiron dinner. Coming to Washington with him was his pretty wife, Bessie Rowland James, who also has several published tomes to her credit and is now working on another. "Matter of fact, we've now got three books being completed in the James family," she told me at the dinner given by Helen Essary and Evie Robert on Saturday night.

MENTION OF THAT PARTY reminds me of an unexpected appearance made by Mrs. Altemus ("Liz") Whitney, who just happened to drop by the club "for a drink" before going on to "another party." A company of around 30 topflight Washington women and several out-of-towners, all turned out in their flossiest evening finery, were having coffee in the drawing room when La Whitney, turned out in tweeds and boots, came in—straight from the races at Richmond.

But although she hadn't expected to attend the party, she got introduced around just the same. Evie Robert, floating through the room in a cloud of pale green tulle and looking every inch the Glamour Girl, spotted the hunt country g. g. the minute she came in, took her on the rounds and saw that she met everybody.

"So many women all at once sort of get me down," sighed the lovely "Liz" as she took her seat and ordered a drink. A couple of hours later at Mrs. Patterson's party, she seemed to have revived completely; and, having exchanged her sports costume for a trailing white frock, she was being whirled about the dance floor by first one local swain and then another. I expected to see Gene Autry following her around, too; but his interest seemed to be centered elsewhere.

Engagement Announced

Bachrach.

MISS DORIS MAIE NICHOLS

whose engagement to Hal Wade Carlsen is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Arthur Nichols. The bride-elect was graduated from Penn Hall Junior College, Chambersburg, Pa. Mr. Carlsen, the son of Mrs. Grace Wade Carlsen and the late Hal A. Carlsen, of Erie, attended Drexel College, Philadelphia. No date has been set for the wedding

Mrs. Richberg, Mrs. Goodrich Give Joint Luncheon

Two Mary Goodriches, visiting in Washington, took over the spotlight at the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, at Hickory Hill, Mrs. Richberg's Spring Valley home. Mrs. Herbert Goodrich, of Philadelphia, the former Mary Dern Baxter, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. G. H. Goodrich—the other Mary—of Anoka, Minn., were popular centers of attention through the whole party.

Receiving informally, the two hostesses were trimly turned out in spring pastel crepe frocks cut on simple lines. Mrs. Goodrich's featured a yellow pattern on a cornflower blue background, while Mrs. Richberg's costume was of slate blue, fashioned in a softly draped pattern.

Sprays of pink gladioli, arranged in shallow bowls, and flanked with tall white candles, centered the dining room tables. Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone were ranking guests. Others there included Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. George Dern, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Casenove Lee, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Arthur Henning, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and Mrs. William O. Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Underwood Honor Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench at Party

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Underwood, of London, England, who have taken an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, gave a luncheon party there yesterday in honor of Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench.

Sir Evelyn, who is the founder of the English Speaking Union, is in Washington with Lady Wrench for a few days after a six months' tour of the United States. They expect to leave shortly on a visit to the British Dominions. Mr. Underwood, who is also widely traveled and a lecturer, is a national director of the English-Speaking Union.

Because it was given in Holy Week, yesterday's party was of an informal nature. Among those present were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope, the Minister-Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Nevile Butler, Lady Bailey, Lady Chalkley, Lady Harris, the Honorable and Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown, former Senator Sherman Minton, the Rev. and Mrs. John Tibbits, Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Frederic Schenck, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Lynch Luquer, Mrs. Bruce Wallace, Miss Bertha Noyes, Albert Murray, Miss Mary L. McQuade, Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone Hartley, Mrs. Bissett Norment, Mrs. Everard Robinson Todd, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Poland, Edgar Eyre, Mrs. Kenneth M. Watson, Mrs. Augustine Todd, Col. and Mrs. Hartley Maconochie, Mrs. Bertram Long, Mrs. John Bigelow and Mrs. Martin Vogel.

Mrs. Montgomery Home; Spent Winter In the Bahamas

Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery has returned to her apartment at the Shoreham after having spent most of the winter at Cat Cay Island, Bahamas. Before leaving, Mrs Montgomery entertained at a large cocktail party in honor of her Behamas hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Wasey.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Montgomery was feted at a cocktail party given by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Saul, in their apartment at 2224 Wyoming Avenue.

Nelson Rockefeller Gives Luncheon

Nelson Rockefeller entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Pan American Union. Guests of honor were members of the union's government board, and many from the South American diplomatic corps were among the company.

Mr. Rockefeller is Coordinator of Cultural and Commercial Relations with Latin America, one of the important defense jobs created in the last year.

Agnes Bayer to Wed T. A. Brennan Monday

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Bayer have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Agnes Frances, to Thomas Anthony Brennan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brennan, of Washington, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio.

The wedding will take place Monday at 9 a. m. in St. Martin's Catholic Church, the Rev. Peter F. Quinn, S. M., officiating.

Miss Bayer attended Notre Dame Academy. Mr. Brennan is a graduate of Y Tech, Cleveland, Ohio. He is employed in the General Accounting Office here.

A wedding breakfast will follow the ceremony at the Highlands, Connecticut Avenue and California Street and then a reception at 22 Bryant Street.

Steffenses Receive Word Miss Scott's Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Steffens, of 37 Seaton Place, have received an announcement of the marriage of their granddaughter, Florence Elizabeth Scott, to Chester John Austine on Saturday, March 8, in Las Vegas, Nev.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harrison Scott, of Glendale, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Austine will make their home in Glendale.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Attend Kin's Wedding

Easter egg rolling and the wedding of her niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, will highlight the First Lady's calendar before she leaves on April 20 for her annual lecture tour. Incidentally Miss Roosevelt, who made her debut at the White House several seasons ago, has chosen as her outfit a gown of a new ivory shade made at a Girls' Trade School.

Mrs. Roosevelt will take a night train on Friday to Boston, Mass., for the marriage of her niece, to Edward Proctor Elliot on Saturday. The ceremony will take place in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Dedham, Mass.

Easter Plans Are Outlined

Easter Monday will find the White House lawn swarming with husky young American youngsters and meanwhile some 140 British refugees will add merriment to the annual afternoon party given at the White House for children. The First Lady will make her tour of the grounds at 9:45 a. m. On Easter Sunday Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the Sunrise services at Arlington. In the afternoon she will receive a group of children from the Hyde Park School. On Monday evening Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the opening of "Theater," at the National, a John Golden production starring Cornelia Otis Skinner.

Mrs. Roosevelt will not be on hand for the White House tea to be given on April 18 for the Daughters of the American Revolution, who will convene here next week. The First Lady will be in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where she is scheduled to make a speech.

Talks Before Club In Annapolis

Yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt went to Annapolis, Md., where she spoke before the Women's Club and examined the new acquisition to the museum at the Naval Academy. Several essay winners from Lancaster, Pa., will be greeted by her today and she will be on the air at 10:15 tonight with the Federal Employes Council.

Tomorrow the Seventy-third Congressional Club will fete Mrs. Roosevelt at luncheon. In the morning she will receive an Agricultural group from North Carolina and later in the afternoon a British War Relief group that Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt is interested in. Rounding out a busy day the First Lady will meet the National Society of Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America. On Thursday she will speak before a student group in Swarthmoore, Pa.

Constance Conboy Engaged to Wed John T. Kelley

Of interest in Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Conboy, of Glenbrook House, Riverdale, N. Y., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Constance Conboy, to John T. Kelley, son of Mrs. John T. Kelley, of Bethesda, Md., and the late Mr. Kelley.

Miss Conboy's father is coordinating adviser at Selective Service headquarters in New York and was formerly a United States attorney for the Southern District of New York. Miss Conboy was educated at the Villa des Fougeres, in Fribourg, and Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart here.

Mr. Kelley was graduated from the law school of George Washington University here and attended the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University. He is with the Department of Justice here.

Dr. Concheso Back From Havana

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio F. Concheso, has returned to Washington from a brief trip to Havana. He was accompanied by Senora de Concheso and their two children, Maria Teresa, 2, and Aurelio Enrique, 4.

Also newly arrived at the Embassy here is Rafael, brother of Senora de Concheso, who will be Consul attached to the Embassy in the capacity of private secretary to the Ambassador.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MAYBE IT'S a sign of the times—but the debutante business for next season looks as though it would be far less lively than last. The unofficial queen of the social secretaries for coming out parties, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, has only about half a dozen young ladies who've so far announced their intentions.

DUDLEY HARMON

Usually the first crocus hardly appears before fond mothers rush to sign up dates for the Washington clubs for evenings as far ahead as the Christmas holidays. This time last year plans were under way for more than a dozen large spring garden parties for the young. But now, what with the gloomy state of the world in general, and the uncertainty of the future, parents are hesitant. One young lady who will "come out" this season has told her mother that she doesn't want to be called a "debutante."

Mrs. Merriam says she "brings" 'em out, marries them, and then christens their children." Her latest protege to hold a christening party is Mrs. Edgar Orme, the former Nancy Luttrell, whose baby was named Nancy, jr., the other day. The Ormes, who were married a year or so ago, are in Washington temporarily before moving to the place they recently bought near Leesburg.

OUTSTANDING debutante of the next season probably will be Nedenia Hutton, blonde, slender daughter of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. Nedenia goes to Mount Vernon Seminary, where her mother studied, and will have a party next winter. Mrs. Davies has always kept her out of the limelight as much as possible.

FOR THE first time in their married life the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull know what it's like to have their own furniture. For years they have lived with rented tables and chairs in hotels. Now their new apartment at the Wardman Park is filled with things which Mrs. Hull has been buying the past few months. Most are eighteenth century reproductions. Their living-room, incidentally, measures 32 feet, the longest of any apartment in the big hotel.

THE HUGE cake which Mrs. Wendell Willkie bought from Mrs. Warren Austin at the Piccadilly Arcade was ordered by Mrs. Willkie to be sent to the Children's Hospital . . . Mrs. Austin did such a rushing business at her food counter that many edibles were sold several times over. I hear that the committee cleared $17,000 from its sale, all of which is profit. The money will go to the benevolent fund of the Royal Air Force.

HAVE YOU HEARD: that in Italy, instead of putting conscientious objectors in jail, they place them in the Army . . . also, that Mussolini is giving Hitler all war short of aid?

Ciechanowski To Give Dinner For Gen. Sikorski

The Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, will be host at a men's dinner tonight at the embassy in honor of Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, Polish patriot, who heads Poland's exiled government and armies.

Following the dinner party there will be a reception for members of the cabinet, officials and diplomats. Gen. Sikorski, who arrived here Sunday, will leave Thursday to visit Ignace Paderewski at West Palm Beach, Fla., for the Easter holidays.

Class to Honor Mrs. Mauborgne

Mrs. Joseph M. Mauborgne, wife of Maj. Gen. Mauborgne, will be honor guest at a luncheon at Pierre's today for one of the classes of Mrs. Hugh Butler's Practical Speaking Course. The event will serve as "commencement exercises" for the group. Five-minute speeches will be made and class members will cast votes. Prizes will be awarded on the basis of improvement and the best effect and Mrs. Butler will present diplomas with class rating.

Among the guests will be Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. William M. Kiplinger, Mrs. Chruck Baldwill and Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline. Mrs. Frank M. Kennedy will be toastmistress.

Ambulance Corps Groups To Meet This Afternoon

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, as chairman, and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson, as vice chairman, have called a meeting for this afternoon at 3:30 at the Shoreham Hotel, of their committees of the British American Ambulance Corps.

The purpose is to arrange details for the forthcoming concert of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Glee Club, which will have the radio star, Francis White, as soloist. The event will take place Tuesday night, April 29, at 8:30, in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, and prominent women in diplomatic and official circles will be patronesses for the event.

3 Chilean Writers Feted by Mrs. Burke And Miss Vernon

Mrs. Thomas Burke and Miss Mabel Vernon entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon at the Little Tea House for three Chilean journalists, who are leaving after a tour of duty here of several months. Both Mrs. Burke and Miss Vernon are active members of the People's Mandate and there is a branch in Chile.

The journalists are Joaquin Muirhead, who worked on The Washington Post; Manuel Vega, of the Evening Star, and Francisco LeDantec, who worked in Philadelphia. With four other countrymen they will tour the United States by train, plane and car prior to leaving for Chile in May.

Luncheon was served at a long table on the sun porch. Guests included Miss Edith Good, Mrs. Geraldine Waddell, of the People's Mandate; Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, who wore a Kelly green reefer with dark blue lapels and a matching hat; Senorita Cristina Michels, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels, who was dressed in gray with touches of white; Mrs. Harold Biesemeier; Mrs. John Begg, whose husband is with the State Department; Miss Mona Dugas and Miss Dudley Harmon.

The Molekamps Entertain for George Abell

Gaily informal was the supper party given last night by the Netherlands Commercial Counselor and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp at their home at 3416 P Street. The company was made up of several friends of George Abell, in whose honor the fete was arranged. Mr. Abell will be off soon for a trip to the West Coast. Before leaving for there, however, he will spend a couple of days in New York and also will visit friends in South Carolina over Easter weekend.

Pink tulips decorated the rooms in the Molekamp home. Receiving her guests in the drawing room, the hostess wore a frock of black chiffon, set off with a gold jacket. Guests found places for themselves at tables-for-four, and the party went merrily along.

Several members of the diplomatic corps were among those present. From the Netherlands Legation were Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten, Dr. and Mme. H. N. Boone and T. F. Valck Lucassen. The Secretary of the South African Legation and Mrs. J. R. Jordan also were there.

The Countess of Gainsborough and her daughter, Lady Maureen Noel, were among thos joining the party after supper. Coming along earlier was Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Maj. and Mrs. Richard Cutts and their guest, Miss Dorothea Lane, daughter of the United States Minister to Yugoslavia; Mrs. Crosby Miller, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Lieut. Otway Smithers, of the Royal Navy; Mr. and Mrs. Kingsbury Smith, Alfons B. Landa, Miss Azadia Newman, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mme. George Boncesco, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, William P. MacCracken, George Williams, Eugene O'Dunne and several others.

Clare Moran Plights Troth

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Moran, of 301 Berkeley Street, Boston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clare Virginia Moran, to Lieut. Col. S. LeRoy Irwin, son of the late Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George LeRoy Irwin, of Washington.

The wedding will take place in May.

Miss Moran attended the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Notre Dame Academy and Miss McClintock's School, of Boston, and was graduated from Trinity College in Washington. She made her debut in 1933.

Lieut. Col. Irwin prepared at St. Luke's School, and after graduating from West Point Academy served at Fort Sill, Fort Knox, the Philippines, Fort Oglethorpe and is at present on the Field Artillery board at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Clarksons Parents Of 3d Daughter

Squadron Leader and Mrs. Christopher Clarkson, of Little Hampton, England, and Washington, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, their third, on April 5 at Columbia Hospital. The child has been named Frances Ann.

The two other daughters in the Clarkson household are Jane, 6, and Carola, 9.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Brazilian Counselor and Mme. Arno Konder will entertain at a supper party tomorrow night in honor of the retiring Peruvian Counselor, Dr. Eduardo Garland, and Senora de Garland. Dr. Garland, who has been appointed Peruvian Minister to the Dominican Republic, will leave for his new post in a few days. Senora de Garland and their children will follow later in the spring.

Mrs. Effingham L. Townsend and Mrs. Martin Vogel have cards out for a reception on April 16 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr. The party will take place at Mrs. Vogel's home at 78 Kalorama Circle.

Miss Billie Gruman returned to Washington yesterday after an extended visit in Miami Beach, Fla.

Miss Marian King, the author, will entertain at an informal party on Saturday night in honor of Miss Mary Gould Davis, critic, librarian and author, of New York.

Miss Doreen Hurwitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, formerly of Marseille, France, entertained at a dance Saturday evening, having as her guests several classmates at the Maret School. Among those in the company were Gisele Chautemps, daughter of the former Prime Minister of France; Elizabeth Beck, daughter of the U. S. Consul in Bermuda; Ann Putnam, Marjorie Lynch, Virginia Lee, Evelyn Byrd Robinson and Ruth Milestone.

Col. and Mrs. Victor O'Kelliher will entertain at a dinner at the Silver Bowl tonight with Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell Waters as guests of honor. Tomorrow night Mr. and Mrs. Waters will give a bon voyage party at the Silver Bowl for Col. and Mrs. O'Kelliher, who sail for Puerto Rico Thursday, where the Colonel has been assigned for temporary duty.

Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, chairman of the Latin-American group for the United China relief benefit, which is to be held at Constitution Hall on Sunday evening, April 27, will entertain her committee at a tea at her home on Sixteenth Street at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Miss Charlotte W. Hines, of Arlington Hall, and her brother, James Hines, spent the weekend at Langley Field, Va., where they attended a dance on Saturday night.

Mrs. Joseph Dreyfuss is spending several weeks at the Atlantis Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla.

Phyllis Braunstein's Betrothal Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Braunstein, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Phyllis Braunstein, to Samuel Youner, jr., of 1774 Seventieth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The wedding will take place in June.

Mrs. Pinchot Fetes China Aid Groups

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Representatives of women's organizations were guests at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the committee for the benefit concert by Paul Robeson, famous barytone, being sponsored by the Washington Committee for Aid to China April 25 at the Uline Arena. Robeson will be supported by a chorus of 150 voices.

There was general enthusiasm for the project among the women who attended. Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, and heads of various college alumnae groups were among those present.

Mrs. Pinchot emphasized that this benefit was to be given two days earlier and was not to be confused with the program, also for China relief, which will be presented at Constitution Hall on April 27. The proceeds of the Robeson concert at the Uline Arena on April 25 will be the contribution of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, to the United China Relief drive, Mrs. Pinchot explained. It will go for Chinese medical and war orphan relief.

Roy Veatch of New York, field secretary for the Aid to China headquarters, was present and addressed the women, describing the plan of organization for United China Relief. He also announced that Pearl Buck, noted author, would attend the April 25 concert and would talk briefly.

Many of the organizations represented yesterday will take blocks of tickets, as will some schools and other groups in the city, both because of the popularity of Paul Robeson as a concert artist and because of the universal appeal of the cause of aid to China.

Among others present were Mrs. C. C. Hung, Mrs. Victor Kwong, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers, Mrs. Miles Trowbridge, Mrs. Nathan Halpern, Mrs. Walter Friedman, Mrs. Grace B. Seitzer, Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mrs. Fannie Roberts, Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. F. L. Hess, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dunthorne, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Gregory Silvermaster, Mrs. K. T. Wu and Mrs. Walter Sasserman.

Among those representing college alumnae associations were Mrs. Thomas R. Taylor, Swarthmore; Mrs. V. H. Brewster, Smith; Mrs. Nicholas Allen, Sweet Briar; Miss Alyce Stanley, Simmons; Mrs. Bernard Chandler, Wellesley; Mrs. Mildred Waugh, Western Reserve; Mrs. Roger Robb, Vassar; Mrs. John Vandergriff, Bryn Mawr; Mrs. Albert Armstrong, Goucher; Mrs. H. D. Krafft, Mount Holyoke; Dr. George Hervery, Rutgers; Miss Katherine Berry, Pembroke, and Miss Agnes Leverette, Wesleyan.

Boys Club Unit Hears Director

Washington boys who spend their vacations at Camp Ernest W. Brown this summer will find plenty of fresh vegetables right off the farm on the table at meal time, Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, director of the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police Department, promised yesterday.

Mrs. Roland Dulin, program chairman, introduced Sergt. Binswanger.

The boys, during their camping period, not only have an opportunity to enjoy the vegetables at their meals, but to see them grow, and help gather them, said Sergt. Binswanger, who showed movies taken at camp last summer.

Mrs. Daniel Wathey was elected to succeeed herself as president of the Junior Alliance for the coming year. Other officers include Mrs. Wyrth Post Baker, first vice president; Mrs. Carlton Duffuss, second vice president; Mrs. Dulin, third vice president; Mrs. Jack Stump, recording secretary; Mrs. Glen Spitler, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Albert Lance, treasurer.

G.O.P. Women Told to Build Unity at Home

The most important task for women in the present emergency is to clean up their own home towns, Miss Marion E. Martin, of the Republican National Committee, told members of the League of Republican Women yesterday, at their annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

"If we put into effect there all our ideals for America," she said, we would soon find that there would be no problem of morale, that there would be no doubt in anyone's mind that America and its way of doing things provide the best possible way of life. We would live our patriotism rather than prate about it.

"These days," said Miss Martin, "we have heard used the word 'unity' until it, like the term 'liberal,' has assumed new and even distorted meanings. There is one manner of use, however, with which there can be no disagreement, namely a unity in the ideal of a strong and virile America, where freedom an dopportunity prevail. There is one way in which women can help materially in attaining this goal, and that is by concentrating on building a healthier and happier local community.

Alpha Omicron Pi Unit To Entertain Tonight

The Washington Aumnae of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority will be hostess to the senior class and mothers' club of the active chapter in College Park, Md., at a bridge party to be held tonight at 8:30 at the chapter house at College Park.

Immediately preceding the party there will be the installation of new officers for the coming year.

The new officers are: President, Mrs. A. N. Staubly; vice president, Mrs. Mildred Berdeen; recording secretary, Miss Elizabeth Taylor; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Rudolph Nuss; Pan Hellenic delegate, Miss Louisa Wilson; treasurer, Miss Alice Cox; historian and editor to To Dragma, Miss Lucile Leighty.

MEMBERS of the Petworth Woman's Club spent a part of their meeting last week discussing the bus situation. There were heated arguments about the plan to curtail the service in the Petworth area.

The women made themselves heard in their own meeting and they plan to make their attitude clear when it comes time to raise their voices higher.

"If we have the dust and noise of buses that go flying by our houses, we want the privilege of riding on them when we need to," was the unanimous sentiment of Mrs. Petworth Housewife.

Mrs. Frank Stuart is president of the Petworth Club, which was addressed at its last meeting by Edward M. Curran, United States district attorney for the District.

CAMP FIRE EXPLORERS — The days of exploration are not over. There are still discoveries to be made and the Camp Fire Girls in Arlington, Ga., recently celebrated an important one for which they were responsible.

Miss Catherine Wahlstrom, national field executive, who was here from New York to conduct the training course for Camp Fire leaders, recently held, told of the pageant given by the Georgia girls on March 17, depicting the coming of De Soto to that section 404 years ago. March 17, the anniversary of his arrival, was also the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Camp Fire organization. The significance of the celebration, however, was the fact that five years ago this group of 20 girls, on a camping trip, located the spring by which De Soto camped. They reported their find to the Smithsonian Institution which sent representatives to the site and confirmed the fact that this was the De Soto spring.

Their pageant, commemorating the coming of De Soto, attracted hundreds of spectators from all the surrounding country, Miss Wahlstrom said, and one or two national magazines will have pictures of it in their next issues.

Edbert Ruhl to Sing

Edbert K. Ruhl, operatic and concert tenor, will entertain the Dolly Madison Chapter, D. A. R., and guests, at the District of Columbia Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue, tonight at 8:30.

D. A. R. Group Fetes Official

Miss Elizabeth Malott Barnes, who has served for 11 years as national vice chairman of the Junior American Citizens Committee of the National Society, D. A. R., was guest of honor and speaker last night at a meeting of the Junior American Citizens Committee of the District, held at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue.

The State committee entertained in Miss Barnes' honor, following its regular meeting last night, as this year marks what she termed her "graduation" from official participation in the Junior American Citizens work. She served five years as State chairman for the District D. A. R., and for three years of that period also held the office of national vice chairman.

During her term as national vice chairman the clubs have grown from a membership of 35,000, the largest proportion of which was in Michigan, to approximately 200,000—the goal for this year.

An example of the results of the work was cited by Miss Barnes last night in the fact that ten of the boys from John Monroe Club, established four years ago in Green County, Va., have volunteered for Army service. It is the first time that the young men in that section have volunteered in this way, she said, indicating that the appreciation and love of American ideals fostered by the club work was responsible for their prompt response in the defense program. The Grandmothers' Club there is busy making shirts for the Red Cross.

Establishment of the clubs in the Green County mountain district has transformed the section so far as community life is concerned, said Miss Barnes.

Pen Women's Board See Films of Conclave

Colored motion pictures of the midadministration conclave of the National League of American Pen Women, recently held at Miami, Fla., were shown by Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, of the national board, yesterday at the annual board meeting at the Willard Hotel. Local league members also attended the program and luncheon following the business meeting.

Legion 'Juniors' Writing Essays

Junior members of the American Legion Auxiliary in all parts of the country are writing essays on "American Citizenship—Its Advantages and Its Obligations." "What I Owe America and What America Gives to Me," and "My Responsibility to America Today and Tomorrow," Mrs. Blanche Crory, department chairman of junior activities, has announced.

The real value of this essay contest lies in the fact that thousands of young Americans everywhere will be gaining first-hand information concerning the vast advantages of American citizenship, she said.

Essays shall not exceed 500 words, and the essay judged to be the best in each department will be submitted to the National Americanism Committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, Indianapolis, Ind. The contestant submitting the winning essay in each department will be awarded the "World Book Encyclopedia," composed of 13 volumes and guide. The national winner, chosen from the 52 department winners, will be awarded a cash prize of $100.

In the interest of Americanism, members of this department have regularly visited the Americanism School of evenings or in reception to newly naturalized citizens.

Mrs. Gertrude Pierce is Americanism chairman for the department.

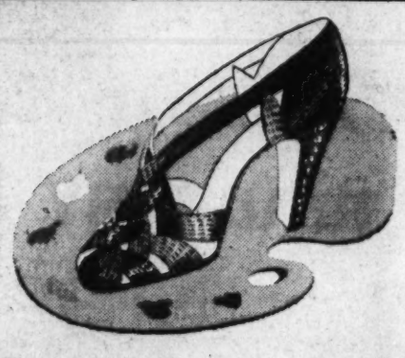
Once upon a time . . .



a woman came to Erlebacher's to buy open-shank sandals. Mr. James Griffith, manager of the Winkelman Shoe Salon, examined her feet first and then told her how sorry he was that he could not sell her sandals and have a clear conscience, because her feet needed shoes with more support! She was so impressed by his conscientiousness that she purchased three pairs of Winkelman Vita Pedics to relieve her foot troubles. Then he sold her a pair of sandals "as dessert" which she could wear comfortably on dress occasions. And the very next day she brought a friend in to receive such professional service.

Chickering Funeral Rites Set Today

Funeral services for Miss Frances E. Chickering, 79, school teacher who lived in the District for more than 70 years, will be at 11 a. m. today at the W. L. Speare funeral home at 1009 H Street Northwest.

Miss Chickering died Sunday after a two-month illness in a nursing home at 3344 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest.

A native of Springfield, Vt., she came here with her father, who served as a professor at Gallaudet College for 30 years. After attending Smith College, she returned to Washington.

Later she taught at the Hampton (Va.) Institute, the McDonald-Ellis School and the Mount Vernon Seminary. She was a member of the board of managers of the Y. W. C. A. and the Women's Christian Association of Washington, which her mother helped found.

She was a member of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, as well as the Friday Morning Music Club, the Twentieth Century Club, the American Association of University Women and the Smith College Club.

Surviving are her sister, Mrs. W. W. Beadell, of Washington, and a nephew, John L. Chickering, of New Canaan, Conn. She made her home here for many years at the Wyoming Apartment.

Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Rev. Albert McCartney will officiate at the services.

High Court Split, Dooming Husband In Rattler Case

Robert S. James' bizarre fight for his life ended yesterday on a note as rare as the grotesque nature of his protracted career in court.

"Live, writhing, hissing rattlesnakes" were introduced before the jury in his trial at Los Angeles, for James was accused of having tried to kill his wife by subjecting her to snakebites and, failing in that, having drowned her. The rattlers, nicknamed "Lightning" and "Lethal," were said by his counsel to have improperly influenced the jury, which found James guilty, condemning him to death.

His appeal reached the Supreme Court and was duly argued. A majority opinion was necessary to overrule the conviction. The nine-member court now has one vacancy.

And yesterday the court split evenly on the case, four to four.

James' appeal was lost.

He must die in the California lethal gas chamber unless, after President Roosevelt appoints a ninth justice, the court should grant a rehearing and reverse his case.

Another man condemned to die for murder, Joe Vernon, Alabama Negro, was granted a review yesterday by the Supreme Court, which twice before had saved him from execution at the last minute. His counsel contended that colored persons had been "intentionally and systematically" excluded from the jury.

F.D., Jr.—'He's Dynamite, a Junior Farley'—Is One of 10 Dream Prince-Glamour Boys

Stork Club Owner Picks About-Towners; Oomph Not Needed

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, April 7.—The old adage, "Handsome is as handsome does," is a dandy description of the polished modus operandi of Manhattan's leading men about town. Success as a combination dream prince and glamour boy depends neither on youth, good looks, oomph nor ping.

It's personality that pays, in the opinion of Sherman Billingsley, owner of the Stork Club and an expert in these matters. Billingsley today named ten men about town whom he considers tops.

This big ten includes Victor Mature, 25, the latest Hollywood-Broadway matinee idol, who is so handsome he stops traffic in everything but arms, and Ed Wynn, comedian, who will never see 50 again and couldn't get into a beauty contest if he borrowed a mask.

The other eight include Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., whom Billingsley considers the handsomest man in America; Artie Shaw, the orchestra leader; John Hay (Jock) Whitney, industrialist, financier and now a $1 a year man; Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Winthrop Rockefeller, Howard Hughes, oil millionaire, aviator and motion picture producer; Maj. Alexander Seversky, aviation genius, and Peter Arno, the cartoonist.

All ten, said Billingsley, are unfailingly polite, kind and considerate. They are connoiseurs of flashing eyes and a well turned ankle. They are equally appreciative of any service, no matter how small, whether from Billingsley himself or the newest bus boy. Almost without exception, they are conservatively dressed. Their behavior is decorous. And, with the exception of Ed Wynn, who always drinks champagne; of Vanderbilt, who drinks only soda pop, and of Arno, who prefers brandy, they stick to Scotch.

Four are under 30: Vanderbilt, 28; Rockefeller, 28; Mature, 25, and Roosevelt, 26. Two or three are crowding 40. Seversky is definitely beyond that. With the exception of Seversky and Roosevelt, who usually are accompanied by their pretty wives, the other lads play the field as far as the chickadees are concerned.

Shaw has a habit of waxing serious and getting married. But in between times he, as the others, arrives at the Stork accompanied by the pick of the town's society and show girls, models and mannequins.

"But none of 'em are breaking their respective necks over any girl, and the girls like that. These lads play hard to get," is Billingsley's shrewd observation. "If a girl is seen with one of these men, all the other guys who might take her dancing or marry her are twice as impressed with her.

"Maybe you've noticed that all ten men are adults. There isn't an undergraduate on the list. All kids know is to dance and have a good time. It takes experience in and of the world, a knowledge of men and affairs, to hold the personality that is the most noticeable thing about these men.

"What Victor Mature has got that Joe Doaks hasn't got is what makes poor old Joe harbor murder in his heart for this handsome actor," Billingsley said. "Yet Joe wouldn't harm a hair on Ed Wynn's head—if he could find one there.

"And that's where Joe is all wet. Because night after night, there are as many girls—and just as pretty ones—in the Wynn party as in Mature's. When Mature comes into the club, he stops the show. Honestly, every woman just sits and sighs like a dying calf, and I have the waiters keep the smelling salts handy.

"But when Wynn comes in, he stops the whole place. He takes over the club. He's funnier, if possible, off stage than on. He gets up to dance with a pretty girl and winds up dancing with Bert Lehr or a waiter. He pushes the piano player off the bench and plays his own accompaniments while he sings.

"But I have never seen anyone have such an effect on a crowd as Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. Everyone in the place wants to shake hands with him. It takes him 20 minutes to work his way to his own table. He's dynamite. Every time he comes in here I say 'There goes the next President.' He's a junior Jim Farley with a million-dollar smile."

Young Roosevelt, the only true blond in the Big Ten, never wants a ringside table, the goal toward which all night club patrons work. He asks for a table in the back of the room.

Young Vanderbilt, a famous turfman, abhors anything that borders on special attention.

But no one likes to sit and talk as much as Artie Shaw. He'll talk all night and finally, when the club is closing up at dawn, there is Shaw, still gabbing.

Mrs. Hessick Dies in Capital

Funeral services for Mrs. William Henry Hessick, Washington native and clubwoman, will be at 7:30 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home. She died yesterday at her home, 1428 Montague Street Northwest, on her sixty-sixth birthday.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kookogey, Mrs. Hessick was married March 19, 1894, and led an active social life.

She was a member of the Political Study Club, the Junior Alliance, the Constitution Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sixteenth Street Presbyterian Church, the Florence Crittenton Circle, the Fidelity of the Eastern Star and the North Star Chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Surviving are her husband, two sons, Frederick Andrew and William Henry Hessick, jr.; one daughter, Mrs. Leland Jackson Stump, and a sister, Mrs. Douglas Shier. All live in Washington.

Buddies All, From Generals Down, Cheer Injured Soldier

A five-month fight for life yesterday brought a buck private in Walter Reed Hospital a personal letter of cheer from three generals and a chief of staff at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The letter, which began "Hello Buddy," was also signed by a lieutenant-colonel, a major, four lieutenants and nearly 200 noncommissioned officers and men. It was mailed in an envelope two feet wide and three feet long.

Howard C. Cagle, of Moore Head, N. C., was only 18 last September when he enlisted at Fort Bragg and was attached to the headquarters and military police company of the Ninth Division. On November 23 he was struck by a car on a highway near Fort Bragg. There was little hope for his recovery at the Base Hospital.

Injuries to his brain and nervous system left his right side paralyzed. Recently he was brought to Walter Reed here for further treatment.

Yesterday's greeting said:

"Hello Buddy: We are dropping you these few lines to let you know that we all think of you often and that we are pulling for you to get well so that you can be with us again.

"We members of Headquarters and Military Police Company speak not only for ourselves, but for the entire Ninth Division in wishing you a complete and quick recovery.

"Stick in there and pitch like the swell soldier you always have been."

First signature was that of Maj. Gen. Jacob Devers, commander of Fort Bragg. It was followed by the signatures of Brig. Gen. Rene E. De R. Hoyle, Brig. Gen. Edwin F. Harding and Col. C. B. Elliott, chief of staff.

Pleading guilty in Circuit Court at Rockville yesterday to assault and battery on his wife, Joseph Edwards, 55, of Kensington, Md, blamed drink. He turned down an offer of suspended sentence if he would stop drinking, because he said he needs a drink before breakfast for asthma. The judge compromised with a suspended sentence if he would take that drink and no more.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Khuttz

Two Carroll L. Wilsons Pose a Problem

One of the minor problems confusing official Washington is Carroll L. Wilson and Carroll L. Wilson. There are two high Federal officials by that name who not only have similar names, but who also resemble the other, come from the same city and have been engaged in the same line of work. One Carroll L. Wilson is the chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. His namesake is liaison officer for the National Defense Research Committee who is now in London making aviation studies. He'll be back here in about, ten days and that means mail and phone calls for the two Carroll L. Wilsons again will be mixed up.

CARROLL L. WILSON
Here . . . and . . . Abroad

Both Carroll L. Wilsons have black hair, wear glasses, come from Boston, entered the Federal service within a few weeks of one another, and are research experts. Even their fathers had similar names. And just to make their likeness more striking, one was born in Rochester, N. Y., the other in Rochester, Minn.

Several hundred Census card punchers who were appointed subject to passing the Civil Service exam and who flunked the test will be permitted to retain their jobs. Those who failed the test were supposed to have been fired, but since the jobs are temporary and because there is such a demand for card punchers the commission relented. Census officials urged that the punchers who failed be allowed to remain. Many of the best punchers, it seems, failed the test.

The number of temporary Census employes has been reduced 1,600 since the new year, from a high of 10,000 to 8,400. Recently, however, very few employes have been fired. The employes are resigning to accept permanent positions in such numbers that it may even be necessary for Census to hire new employes from Civil Service rolls. The bureau could use additional stenographers and card punchers.

Federal officials have been looking over the Naval Hospital and its grounds at Twenty-fourth and E Streets as a possible solution to the space problem. The Navy soon will be moving the hospital to Bethesda and it's possible the hospital buildings will be used as Federal office buildings. It's also being proposed to erect temporary office buildings on the grounds to house workers.

The grounds at Soldiers' Home and the War College also are being considered for sites of the temporary buildings. One thing is certain about the site. President Roosevelt will choose it himself. He has ordered Federal Works Administrator John Carmody to recommend sites to him personally and the President probably will get into his auto and make the choice. It's reported that President Roosevelt frowns on the proposed construction of Federal office buildings at Suitland, Md., and it appears to be highly improbable that plans of the Public Buildings Administration in that town will ever be carried out. PBA, it's said, failed to clear with F. D. R. on the Suitland building program before it was announced.

Three hundred and thirty General Accounting Office employes will get fatter pay checks next week. They were each given one step increases. Each employe promoted was under civil service, in either CAF 1, 2, or 3, had very good or excellent efficiency ratings, and was at the minimum pay of the grade.

The new National Defense Mediation Board has not been limiting its work in accordance with the code of the wage and hour law. It met at 9:30 a. m. Saturday and adjourned at 1 a. m. Sunday. It was in session again at 9:30 a. m. Sunday and didn't adjourn until 7 p. m. But it got results. It settled the tough Allis-Chalmers strike. And labor leaders sat through it all.

D. C. Subway Is Predicted By Van Duzer

Construction of a subway from the downtown area north between Rock Creek Park and the Soldiers Home was predicted yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as a result of a report now being prepared on the District's traffic engineering problem.

Speaking before the Dupont Circle Citizens Association in the Mayflower Hotel, Van Duzer said that 37 per cent of the Federal Government workers lived in the Park-Soldiers Home area and constituted the city's greatest rush-hour traffic problem.

The report being prepared by his office is expected to be released in summary by May 1 and will form the basis of a master plan for future city development.

Unless steps such as the proposed subway are taken, the traffic situation will soon become "very serious," the traffic director said. "More than 1,000 new Government workers are coming to Washington every month, and last year saw an increase of 14,000 automobiles here," he stated.

The citizens voted to back the Overton-Hunter formula, urged establishment of a night court for the District, condemned the general practice of all-night street parking and nominated the following officers for next month's election:

For president, L. M. Leisenring; first vice president, Dr. Harry A. Garfield; second vice president, Harral Mulliken; secretary, Rowland S. Marshall; treasurer, W. Herbert Gill, and executive committee members, Admiral William L. Rogers and Frank C. Baldwin.

Progressive of Georgetown

Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown last night voted to petition the Commissioners for more policemen, especially one for night duty around Montrose Park and R. Street.

This recommendation was one of several bearing on problems of vandalism and delinquency, which were brought in by the law enforcement and sanitation committee, headed by Mrs. Lawrence Martin. Cooperation of the association with schools and youth groups, in putting more responsibility on children in an antivandalism movement, was urged.

The association stood with the Federation of Citizens Associations in opposing the House bill which would provide a rent control commission and the fixing of rental rates.

A request for establishment of a fund to clean up rats in Georgetown will be made to the Commissioners, the association voted.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken of the Woman's Bureau, Metropolitan Police, spoke on recreation at the association's meeting which was held at Curtis School.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association last night opposed the suggested rent control bill on the grounds that "no emergency yet exists in housing facilities in the District."

Members noted a decrease in housing vacancies because of the influx of defense workers but saw no general increase in the level of rents thus far.

They reaffirmed the association's support of the Overton-Hunter formula, voted to oppose any form of legalized gambling in nearby Maryland, and named a committee headed by Paul Kean to study the current lack of recreational facilities for children in Chevy Chase.

The association voted not to become affiliated with the Municipal Assembly on the ground that "its functions completely overlap those of the Federation of Citizens Associations."

Appointed as members of a committee to nominate officers for next month's election were L. A. Carruthers, Mrs. Wilbur LeRoy, jr., and S. C. Cissel.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night indorsed the Overton-Hunter plan.

Meeting at the Noyes School, the association also urged Congress to adopt the Sumners resolution providing national representation for the District.

The group called upon the Commissioners to fill the present police inspectorship vacancy by promoting Capt. Oscar J. Letterman, of the Twelfth Precinct.

Police Court Judge George D. Neilson told the citizens the District needed more uniform penalties for traffic violations.

Alumni Swap Tales of School In Honolulu

Washington alumni and friends of "the oldest boarding school west of the Rockies"—Punahou School in Honolulu — swapped reminiscences at the Cosmos Club last night in observance of the school's 100th anniversary.

Oscar F. Shepard, president of the school, told of plans for the centennial celebration at Punahou next month and invited his audience of some 50 "old boys and girls" to come down for the festivities.

Last night's banquet was one of a number being held this year in various United States cities to "rebuild and rekindle" the sentiment of former students for the school and to enlist interest in a centennial fund for three proposed buildings and additions to the faculty, Shepard said.

Recordings of talks by centennial officials were heard and motion pictures of campus life shown. Delegate Samuel W. King, of Hawaii, was toastmaster at the dinner, attended largely by Army and Navy men and their families.

Punahou School was opened in 1841 for children of missionaries.

Magathan Is Reelected

Wallace C. Magathan, of 7401 Blair Road Northwest, last night was elected to his tenth consecutive term as president of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C.

MAGATHAN

Other officers elected or reelected by the association last night were: First vice president, Guy Peterson; second vice president, Lewis A. Jones; secretary, William M. Green (to his fourth term); corresponding secretary, Carl C. King; treasurer, Norman E. McIndoo, and delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, L. C. Carey and Secretary Green.

The Takoma citizens voted to accept 22 new members, opposed extension of the commercial zoning area on Georgia Avenue from Whittier to Van Buren Streets Northwest, and objected to a proposed zoning change to permit apartment houses at Underwood and Blair Roads Northwest.

A. J. Jones, amateur magician and member of the association, entertained with sleight-of-hand demonstrations.

Messenger Boy Beaten; Police Hunt Prowler

A mysterious assault upon a telegraph messenger in front of the Italian Embassy yesterday added a new enigma in the Police search for the unknown prowler who beat two sleepers in the same area with a paving brick early Friday.

Last night a special plainclothes detail was stationed in the Meridian Park sector.

Youth Knocked Unconscious

The Radio Corporation of America received a call for a messenger early yesterday and Henry W. Evans, 20, of Hyattsville, Md., was dispatched to the Italian Embassy. Evans parked his car in front of the marble building at 2700 Sixteenth Street Northwest and knocked on the door, he told police.

Receiving no answer, he returned to his car. A black sedan had pulled up behind his auto, he noticed. As he bent to enter his car, a man's voice cried, "Hey!"

Evans turned. A powerful fist struck him in the throat. The youth fell to the ground, unconscious.

A later call to the company's office revealed that Evans had gone to the wrong address. The Italian chancery, next door, had called for the messenger.

Whether the youth's assailant was the same man who attacked Mrs. Evelyn Kneeland and John S. Long Friday morning a few blocks away, police could not say. None of the victims could describe the attacker.

Six Questioned

Despite the lack of a description, however, police questioned at least two white men and four colored men over the weekend in connection with the brutal beatings, Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives, revealed yesterday. All were released.

Mrs. Kneeland, 32, was attacked at home, 2311 Fifteenth Street Northwest. Long, 31, lives at 1321 Belmont Street Northwest.

Sen. Overton Gets Support Of Roosevelt

President Believes U. S. Should Increase Payments to D. C., He Tells Conference

The principle of Federal acceptance of a larger share of the rising cost of District government incident to Washington's mushroom growth in the defense emergency last night had the support of President Roosevelt.

The President yesterday told a White House conference of legislators and city officials that, first, he believed the Federal Government should pay for all capital improvements in the city and, secondly, that if this procedure should not prove feasible, he favored in principle the Overton formula for determination of the United States' share of District expenses.

As a result of an interchange of views with Mr. Roosevelt, Senator Overton and Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee returned to Capitol Hill with the understanding that the Overton formula will be amended to provide that Federal payment fixed by its application should be spent primarily for capital outlays such as schools, city buildings, lights and sewers.

Thus amended, the President agreed, the formula will have "active" White House support.

This, it was generally agreed, meant that the Overton formula will be given the green light by Administration leaders in Congress. The formula would base the Federal payment to the District on the ratio of United States owned acreage to the total area of the city. It has been accepted by the Senate and approved by a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Senator Overton, author of the plan, which has been sponsored in the House by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, said last night that he has agreed to be present when the formula is considered by the full District Committee shortly after the Congressional spring recess.

As a result of yesterday's developments, prospects for amicable solution of the city's fiscal relations with the Federal Government appeared brighter to friends of the District than they have for more than a decade.

In addition to Overton, initiator of the conference, and Randolph, the White House meeting was attended by District Commissioners McCoach and Young. The group spent 30 minutes with the President.

Explains Formula

Overton began by outlining the District's long history of controversy over the size of the Federal payment. He also explained to the President how his formula would operate.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was learned, stated that he had been giving the District's fiscal problems consideration for a long time and that he felt it was incumbent upon the Federal Government to pay for all capital expenditures of the city.

By capital expenditures, the President made it clear that he meant not only schools and city buildings, but streets, sewers and all other items of capital improvement. Mr. Roosevelt also emphasized his awareness of the fact that the city is having increasingly to bear unusual Government burdens by reason of the steady influx of thousands of Government defense workers.

Little sympathy was shown by the President, it was said, with the view, taken by some members of Congress, that the Federal Government is giving the District all the help it should in view of increased business caused by the defense boom.

The President, however, said he planned to make the District responsible for paying the cost of maintaining Capital improvements after they had been built and paid for by the Federal Government.

Fear White Elephant

Close observers of District affairs pointed out that as the defense boom subsides, the need for capital structures will diminish with the result that the city may find itself responsible for maintaining improvements no longer used.

At the conference, Senator Overton pointed out that adoption of the President's plan might entail a Federal outlay considerably in excess of that contemplated by adoption of his (Overton's) formula.

The President and Senator Overton then agreed that their ideas might be merged, that, in other words, the principle of the formula might be retained, but amended to provide that the Federal payment should be spent chiefly on capital improvements.

After the conference, Overton pointed out that in some years the need for capital expenditure may be much greater than in others. Congress, he said, would have to decide, in any event, what capital items should be approved and the necessity for reaching a decision would provoke controversies as bitter as any attendant upon consideration of the size of the annual Federal payment.

Kenilworth

Kenilworth Citizens Association last night went on record in favor of the Overton fiscal plan.

The association voted to request for the next District budget to include resurfacing of the following: Forty-fourth Street Northeast from Ord to the end of the street; Forty-fifth Place from Ord to Nash; Nash from Forty-fifth Place to Kenilworth Avenue, all Northeast.

Express cars on the Kenilworth line between 3:30 and 6:30 p. m. will be asked of the Capital Transit Co., the association voted.

Earl Dillon was elected delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Mabel M. Hubbel was chosen secretary-treasurer last night. H. E. Baron, Philip Roth and M. S. Peikin were elected new members. The association met at Kenilworth School.

Pupils Surround Msgr. Ryan For Autographs of His Book

SHE GETS HIS AUTOGRAPH—The Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan obliges Eleanor McNamee with his signature on a special copy of "Social Doctrine in Action," the life story of Father Ryan's fight for social righteousness and economic justice

The Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan was immediately surrounded by his social ethics class last night, when he appeared for his weekly lecture at National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

The girls wanted him to autograph their copies of "Social Doctrine in Action," the life-story of Father Ryan's fight for social righteousness and economic justice, which will be released by the publishers April 16. The students, however, had obtained "prepublication" copies.

Msgr. Ryan will be 72 next month. He tells of his life—his social and economic beliefs and activities—in 290 pages, written in five months. He concludes that the motives and hopes which influenced him in the beginning were worthwhile.

"Now I can testify," declares the director of the Social Action Department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, "that those hopes have been as nearly fulfilled as anyone could have expected in this uncertain world."

He has seen the establishment of minimum hours and wages, the eight-hour day, labor conciliation boards, collective bargaining, State employment agencies, municipal housing, insurance against unemployment and old age; municipal ownership of utilities, conservation of forests and other natural resources; regulation of the stock exchange; progressive taxes on incomes and inheritances.

These Msgr. Ryan advocated in 1909. For these goals, and others yet unreached, the Catholic educator has been fighting for more than 30 years—so that he was branded as a dangerous agitator" and "Red" by opponents of these goals.

Many times Father Ryan found himself in a minority of Catholic opinion, but he never hesitated to voice his ideas, which he based on understanding of papal encyclicals. Thus, for example, he has militantly supported child labor laws.

In May, 1939, 600 friends paid tribute to Msgr. Ryan on his seventieth birthday.

Supreme Court Justice Felix Franfurter then said: "Perhpas it will be permitted to one outside his faith to suggest that the practical pursuit of Msgr. Ryan's conviction has been strengthened by the thought that in promoting his conception of social justice, he was faithfully carrying out the commission his Church gave him to preach."

To this appraisal of his life work, Msgr Ryan adds: "My efforts on behalf of social justice not only have been 'strengthened,' but fundamentally motivated by the command to preach and expound the Gospel of Christ."

Two Medical Organizations File Appeals

The American Medical Association and District Medical Society yesterday set in action their fight against conviction on antitrust charges.

Edward M. Burke and Warren Magee, counsel, filed with the clerk of Criminal Court three motions in appeal from the jury verdict Friday which held the two societies guilty of violating the Sherman Act, while acquitting the 18 individual defendants accused of involvement in the conspiracy.

One motion would set aside the verdict and obtain judgment for the defendants. Another would arrest judgment. The third asks for a new trial.

Describing the first as the most important, Burke said it is aimed to obtain a reversal by the court of the verdict which held the A. M. A. and D. M. S. guilty of criminal conspiracy without the necessity of a new trial.

"As the theory upon which a corporation can be held criminally responsible is that the illegal acts and intentions of its employes can be imputed to the corporation, it follows that in this case there is no factual foundation for inferring that the corporatons are guilty," the motion states, explaining that a corporation can act only through its officers, agents and employes.

Other Arguments

There are six other arguments for setting aside of the verdict:

That the indictment charged the acts were committed by the 18 accused physicians "not as individuals, but as agents of the two corporate defendants, and the individuals, having been acquitted, it follows that the corporation cannot be held."

That no proof has been adduced of any interference with trade or commerce in the District of Columbia in violation of section 3 of the Sherman Act.

That activities of Group Health Association, its staff doctors and members constitute the illegal practice of medicine by a corporation "and therefore such activities should not be the subject of a conspiracy in restraint of trade under section 3 of the antitrust law."

That the activities proved against the defendants were within their lawful rights.

That, with the 18 individual defendants freed, there is no evidence left with which to hold the two corporations, namely, the American Medical Association and District Medical Society.

The seventh point cited in the motion covers "such other grounds as are apparent in the record and as may be argued."

Delay Expected

With District Court scheduled to begin its annual Easter recess Thursday, lasting until April 21, arguments on the motions are probably at least two weeks off. The delay is rendered the more probable by the fact that Grant W. Kelleher is out of the city for the remainder of this week.

Kelleher and John Haney Lewis, special assistants to the Attorney General, conducted the Government's case against organized medicine. The charge was restraint of Group Health Association, medical care cooperative for Federal employes in Washington.

The motions will be argued before Justice James M. Proctor, who presided over the doctors' trial, which began February 5 and ended Friday night when the jury brought in its split verdict.

Negligent Homicide Act Upheld

Court of Appeals Ruling Clears Way For Stricter Enforcement

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the constitutionality of the District's Negligent Homicide Act, providing a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a fine of $1,000 for a driver found guilty in a traffic death.

The higher court's ruling clears the way for stricter enforcement of the law which has been attacked as vague, and which has brought few convictions in lower courts. A District driver charged under the act, it had been estimated, had a 4-to-1 chance of escaping conviction.

Information written in the language of the law is adequate to inform an accused person of the charge against him, the court ruled.

Henderson Defendant

Rufus R. Henderson, 33, of 2316 Champlain Street Northwest, was the defendant in the test case taken to the Court of Appeals. He was charged with negligent homicide in the death of John Stahl, 63, of 1940 Biltmore Street Northwest, who was struck while crossing near Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest on June 13, 1940.

Maintaining that the higher courts should pass on the constitutionality of the Negligent Homicide Act, Police Judge Walter J. Casey held that the information filed against Henderson was insufficient. He opined that the information was insufficient in detail to enable Henderson to prepare his defense. The case now goes back to Judge Casey's court, for trial.

In an opinion written by Associate Justice Justin Miller of the higher court it was said:

"The mere fact that the specified standard of liability may be one of varying degree does not make a criminal law unconstitutional.

"Common" Terms

"The words and phrases used in the presently applicable statute, i. e., immoderate rate of speed, careless, reckless, negligent, manner, wilfully, wantonly, are all well known, both in common speech and in the terminology of the law."

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Associate Justice Riley Rutledge heard the case with Associate Justice Miller.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant United States Attorneys Charles B. Murray and Dennis McCarthy represented the Government, which appealed the case. Attorney for the appellee was Earl H. Davis.

To Try Pending Cases

United States Attorney Curran issued the following statement on the decision:

"All the cases held up, pending the outcome of the decision of the United States Court of Appeals have been ordered by me to be immediately set down for trial. As heretofore, all cases of like character will be vigorously prosecuted."

Four Policemen Win Promotions

Four police privates will be sworn in as detectives at 10 a. m. today to fill vacancies in the plainclothes force created during the past six months.

Frank H. Dodson, 44, a veteran of almost 17 years of beat-pounding, had the longest service of those promoted. He will remain with the Fourth Precinct for the present, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards announced.

Others were Arthur C. Keene, 37, of 1445 Park Road Northwest, who had 11 years of service, mainly in the Eighth Precinct; H. E. Hamilton, 34, of 821 Elder Street Northwest, who had 11 years of service, mainly in the Tenth Precnct, and John Layton, 28, of 7125 Ninth Street Northwest, of the special investigation squad. Layton joined the force in March, 1936.

Harvard Alumni Elect Warren

Charles Warren, Washington legal scholar who won the 1923 Pulitzer Prize in history for his book, "The Supreme Court in United States History," was elected president of the Harvard Alumni Association in Cambridge, Mass., last night.

Warren was graduated from Harvard in 1889 and was a former assistant attorney general. He lives at 1527 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

By Al Hailey

The biggest fight carnival Washington has ever seen will be staged tonight at Uline's $700,000 ice palace when Two Ton Tony Galento and Buddy Baer step up for their much-ballyhooed ten-round battle.

Call it what you will—Battle of Bums No. 2, circus or sideshow—it's a boxing show that is expected to pack the Northeast arena to its capacity.

Although there were plenty of choice seats left last night at Uline's, Promoter Ray Alvis and Mike Jacobs' New York staff agents predicted that every one of the 9,600 seats available will be sold by the time the first preliminary gets under way tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The gate is expected to hit the $25,000 mark.

Winner Meets Louis Here

Tony and Buddy will be fighting for the honor of meeting Champion Joe Louis in a heavyweight title match in Washington this summer.

Although Galento was a slight favorite last night there was plenty of Baer money in town, and more came in as the vanguard of the New York and Philadelphia fight mob began to arrive.

The Orange, N. J., beer tavern operator was being quoted as a 6-to-5 favorite over Baer along Ninth Street, but in some sectors you still could get 6 to 5 and take your choice. One carefree soul was mingling with a few stragglers at Uline's yesterday offering to bet $500 at even money on Baer.

Baer Best Bet Physically

From the physical outlook, Baer has to be placed in the favorite's role.

Buddy, whose ambition is to knock out Galento in less time than it took his fun-loving brother, Max, to stop Tony, is a powerful speciman, towering 6 feet, 6½ inches and weighing 242.

In addition to his youth, he has everything in his favor but punch. Just as Galento has never been accused of being a boxer, Buddy has never been feared because of his punching power.

The general opinion is that if Galento fails to catch Buddy within five rounds with one of those killing wallops that only the Beer Barrell Poker can toss, then Tony's chances for another shot at Louis are worthless.

Galento To Weigh 240

Galento, his manager, Harry (Social Success) Mendel, and an entourage of Galento followers stepped off a train last night at 8:05 o'clock. Galento insisted he was in top shape and announced to one and all that he isn't going to let his friends down tonight.

"I'm in shape," he said simply. "I've worked for this fight as I have for few others. Everything that possibly could happen to upset a man happened to me before my bout with Max Baer last summer. But that's all behind me now.

North-South Golf on Today; Bogart in Field

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—George T. Dunlap, jr., six times winner, will defend his title in the 41st North and South amateur golf tournament, which starts here tomorrow, against a field that includes Richard D. Chapman, the national amateur champion. Dunlap is a former national titleholder.

For Chapman, who has never won the North and South, it may be the last big tournament for some time; he is in Class 1-A of the Selective Service.

Commercial, Militia Leaguers Combine As Federal Loop

Two powerful sandlot baseball leagues which were scheduled to take part in National Capital Amateur Federation competition this year—the Commercial and Militia—joined forces under one banner last night at a meeting presided over by Vic Gauzza, local amateur sponsor.

The new circuit, composed of seven teams, will play under the name of the Federal Commercial League. A final organization meeting will be staged next Monday night at 8 o'clock, preceding the opening date, April 29.

Participants in the new league will be St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Militia League winner last year; Maryland Sport Club, Prince Georges County League victor last year; Navy Receiving Station, Arlington Cantonment, War Department, Palace A. C., and Hot Shoppes. Umpire V. Radcliff will handle all games in the weekday league.

Boston Bruins, Detroit in 2d Game Tonight

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 7.—Milt Schmidt, center on the Boston Bruins' famous kraut line, and little Bobby Bauer, his able right-winger, tonight appeared assured of seeing action against the Detroit Red Wings tomorrow night in the second game of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup series.

Schmidt, who retired from the Bruins' 3-2 opening victory last night with a severe charleyhorse in his left thigh, "baked" that injury for several hours today. Dr. Tom Kelley reported that Schmidt's leg had good freedom of motion and probably would respond to continued heat treatments.

Reads Riot Act

Bauer, who had a cut foot and a shoulder injury, sat out last night's game. His return to action would make Pat McReavy, the rookie who scored the third and decisive goal against the Red Wings, the fifteenth man on the Bruin's squad.

While the Bruins rested, Manager Jack Adams of the Red Wings read the riot act to his players during a special meeting. He told them they had played their poorest hockey of the playoff series against Boston and demanded that they give vastly improved performances tomorrow night.

To Go to Detroit

Adams revealed that all his players, except Capt. Ebbie Goodfellow, were fit, and he indicated he would use the forward and defensive lines that were used in Sunday's woeful opener.

After tomorrow night's game, both the Bruins and Red Wings will entrain for Detroit, where the third and fourth games of the best-in-seven series will be played on Thursday and Saturday.

Bill Cowley, the league's leading scorer, will accompany the Bruins, for his knee injury, suffered in the opening playoff game against Toronto, has been improving gradually. Cowley has high hopes of returning to action on Saturday.

Mrs. E. B. Morrow On USGA Body

Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, many-time Middle Atlantic and Maryland State women's champion, has been appointed this section's representative on the United States Golf Association's women's committee. Harold W. Pierce, president, announced the appointments.

Mrs. Edwin H. Vare, jr., will represent the Philadelphia district, while Mrs. James H. Hjul, who visited here and left several helpful suggestions with the local women golfers, will represent California.

Joe Louis Meets Chicagoan in St. Louis; 20,000 Fans Expected to Pay $55,000

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 7.—The Joe Louis spring carnival, playing one-night stands up and down the countryside, stops off here tomorrow night to put on its display of fisticuffs and fireworks for the entertainment of everyone—except possibly Tony Musto.

The Brown Bomber "risks" his world heavyweight championship at 9:30 P. M. (Central Standard Time) in the arena against the short-sized slugger from Chicago, whose only chance to escape what happened to Al McCoy, Red Burman, Gus Dorazio and Abe Simon this season is said to lie in a squat, crouching style and a somewhat better than fair punch.

All kinds of attendance and gate receipt records for St. Louis fistic festivals are expected to be broken, despite the fact that no one but squat Tony has even the faintest idea he'll either last the full 15 rounds or win the fight.

Jacobs Expects 20,000

Mike Jacobs, the New York impresario who is co-promoting this fuss with Tom Packs, joyfully estimates there will be more than 20,000 fans on hand for the party, and they'll pay a total of $55,000. Up to now, the previous high for St. Louis was hit in 1930, when 18,130 customers contributed $48,000 to see the local unveiling of Primo Carnera.

There was virtually no betting on the outcome of tomorrow's titanic struggle. The general impression was that Louis would end the fight in less than five rounds. This corner figures it will be all over around the third or fourth. Anything under 9 minutes and 48 seconds will be better than par for the course for Joe. That's the average he has maintained since winning the title from Jim Braddock in 1937.

After the Musto bout, Louis' forthcoming summer productions have been arranged something like this: Next month, the return bout with Simon in New York; June, Billy Conn, in New York; July, in Washington against the winner of tomorrow's Buddy Baer-Tony Galento fight, and September, Lou Nova.

Kirby, Cothran Lead Augusta Women's Golf

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 7.—Atlanta's Dorothy Kirby and Greenville's Jane Cothran, two veteran shotmakers, held a two-stroke lead tonight as the fifth women's titleholders' golf tournament closed out the first round of the 54-hole medal test.

Misses Kirby and Cothran, paired in the same twosome, matched each other's five-over par 80 on the Augusta Country Club's treacherous hill course, to take a one-stroke lead over Georgia Tainter, Fargo, N. Dak., and Helen Sigel, of Philadelphia, who posted a pair of 81s to tie for second place.

In third place, bracketed at 82, were professional Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C. Isabel Ogilvie, Cleveland, and Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.

Providence's Jean Bauer, who used up 86 strokes on the first of the three-day event, was alone at 86, one shot in front of youthful Eileen Stulb, Augusta, and socially prominent Grace Amory, of West Palm Beach, Fla., who finished in a draw at 87.

Tied for fourth place in the field of 21 players were Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore Mrs. Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Mrs. T. E. Nolan, Newcastle, Pa., all of whom had 88s.

Little Louise Suggs, the Lithia Springs, Ga., entry, finished at 90 to show the way to the threesome made of Helen Edgecomb, Philadelphia; Ed Dell Wortz, Fort Smith, Ark., and Mrs. William R. Kirkland, jr., of Bermuda, who were tied with 92.

Other scores included Mrs. Bernice Wall Barbour, Paterson, N. J., 93; Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, Cleveland, 94; Mrs. Donald Weiss, Flint, Mich., 95.

Dedicate New Park In Charlotte, N. C., Today; Harris Hopes To Add a Hurler

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., April 7.—Sun-soaked Washington players, club officials and supernumeraries to the number of 40 shook the sands of Florida from their feet this evening and chugged North on a special train. It was the end of seven weeks in the South.

First stop on the northern journey will be Charlotte, N. C., where Clark Griffith has arranged for the Nats to dedicate the new stadium of their Charlotte, Piedmont League farm. It is set for tomorrow, and the Detroit Tigers will also participate in the dedication. The Tigers will also be trying to bring to an end the five straight victories of the Nats over the Detroit team this spring.

Manager Bucky Harris took his team out of Florida tonight without swinging one of the trades he had in view, but he has left propositions with the Yankees and Tigers that may yet be accepted. In each case thet Nats are seeking pitchers, although there is still a high possibility that the New York team may sell Shortstop Frankie Crosetti to Washington.

To Drop Two Hurlers

The Washington pitching situation will be clarified a bit when the Nats reach Charlotte. Two young men will be dropped from the squad there. Young Joe Beck and big Sam Cunningham, the last relics of the crop of bush league pitchers who came south with the Nats, will leave the team.

Thus the Nats will be left with only nine pitchers. Dutch Leonard, Ken Chase and Sid Hudson are fixtures as starters, and Walter Masterson and Steve Sundra are solidly in the fight for the fourth starting job. Danny MacFayden, Alex Carrasquel, Jim Dean and Arnold Anderson are slated for the relief work.

Harris had hoped to carry ten pitchers, but he doesn't know where another one is coming from unless he is able to grab one of the young men on whom the Yankees and Tigers are forced to ask waivers.

Won 12 Out of 18

There was a lift to the occasion as the Nats boarded the train. The team had done very well in Florida. In 18 exhibition games the club had won 12 for a .667 percentage. Against strictly big league opposition, they were able to show nine victories and six defeats. Most gratifying were their five straight victories over the champion Detroit Tigers.

Except for first base and the open job on the pitching staff, the Nats are a set ball club. But third base also must be held in abeyance for a time until Buddy Lewis' draft status is definite. Rick Ferrell has seemingly beaten back the challenge of young Al Evans for his No. 1 pitching job, and Jimmy Bloodworth has won his battle with the veteran Buddy Myer for second base. In the outfield it will be Cramer, Case and Chapman, just as Bucky Harris had visualized it when he brought the team South.

George Archie has not yet clinched his first base job. After a surge of batting power which offset an early slump, Archie has been weak at bat in recent games. However, Mickey Vernon has been no slugger either, and it is now apparent that Bucky Harris will alternate them at the position.

The most encouraging recent development on the club has been the effective pitching of Masterson, who may yet beat out Sundra for a regular pitching job. Manager Bucky Harris was high in his praise of Masterson's recent performance against the Tigers, declaring, "I'm willing to go along with him if he can pitch like that."

The Nats' itinerary north will include four games. Following the game with the Tigers at Charlotte tomorrow, the team backtracks to Greenville, S. C., to meet the Tigers again. Thence to Goldsboro, N. C., to face the Phillies, and on Friday playing the Phillies again at Martinsville, Va.

Words of Wisdom—by Rick Ferrell

Orlando, Fla., April 7.—Words uttered in some disgust by Catcher Rick Ferrell in the Washington training camp six weeks ago can be recalled at this time. They are steadily proving their wisdom. It was after he had taken his first cynical look at the dozen assorted rookie pitchers in the Nats' camp that the veteran catcher said: "We'd better stop fooling with this trash and hope that we can make a pitcher out of Walter Masterson."

POVICH

Ferrell's ideas about the Washington pitching were plain enough. He regarded Masterson as the only new source of potential pitching help for the club. He was holding out hope for Masterson despite the terrible sort of record of the lad last season when he won only 3 games and lost 13 with the Nats. Certainly that was no recommendation, but Ferrell was not giving up on the fellow.

And today the brightest item in the Washington pitching picture is Masterson. He is not yet the solid performer like Leonard or Hudson or Chase, but he represents a possible new fount of talent where none had been anticipated. He is throwing the fastest pitch of any man on the club and, more importantly, he has seemingly developed, all of a sudden, the control he needed. It was his wildness that had been plaguing him for three seasons.

The other day against the Detroit Tigers, Masterson's fast ball was crackling across the plate and big Hank Greenberg had a special sort of praise for the boy. "Bob Feller is the only man who ever threw me anything faster," said Greenberg. The first time I ever faced Masterson three years ago, I told Bucky Harris that on the day Masterson got his control he'd be a great pitcher. His ball is alive and it does tricks when it gets to the plate."

A's Passed Up a Home Town Product

Masterson's is a strange sort of story. He is wearing a big league uniform for the fifth season, but he is not yet of voting age. The military draft is no threat to his baseball career. He wasn't old enough to register. At 16, he was an accredited member of the Nats.

If Masterson does, indeed, justify his promise and develop into a winner, then it will feather the cap of the much-maligned Joe Cambria, who is responsible for the lad's presence with the Nats. Cambria has herded impossible sandloters into the Washington camp by droves only to see Bucky Harris chase them out again in some disgust, but Masterson was one of Cambria's discoveries who did not get the bum's rush from Harris. The Nats' manager embraced the idea that Masterson would be a big leaguer some day.

Cambria was mooching about the Philadelphia sandlots when he came upon Masterson and signed him to a Washington contract. That was in 1937, and the Philadelphia Athletics had ignored the home town boy. It will be no disgrace to Ira Thomas the old catcher, who is one of Connie Mack's scouts, if Masterson proves a winning pitcher with Washington. Thomas pleaded with Mr. Mack to sign Masterson and give the boy a $2,000 bonus for signing. But Mr. Mack was in one of his rare petulant moods. He said he was tired of giving bonuses to unproved bushers and ordered his scouts to discontinue the practice.

Harris was ecstatic about Masterson's possibilities from the outset. During the last two months of the 1937 season he kept the lad beside him on the Nats' bench. Masterson did not pitch in any game. He did not even throw in batting practice. He merely warmed up daily and accompanied the Nats on all trips, sopping up knowledge about the big leagues.

They let him pitch the following season and he showed his greenness. He did pitch a pair of four-hit games and win them, but he was wild and inconsistent. But Harris did not farm him out. The following year, in 1939, when it appeared that Masterson would be an improved pitcher, Clark Griffith suddenly got scared of a recent ruling by Judge Landis forbidding big league clubs to sign players from the sandlots. Fearful that the ruling might be made retroactive, Griffith farmed Masterson out to his Charlotte farm for one game, and then brought him back to the Nats.

Mystery of Vanished Speed Ball Solved

But during that 1939 season Harris and Griffith felt a severe letdown. Masterson couldn't win and, in fact, his fast ball had mysteriously vanished. The Nats' bosses were perplexed, until suddenly one afternoon Harris gained a clue to the trouble. He ordered Masterson into a game as a pinch-runner. "Go in there for Rick Ferrell," said Harris. Then the Nats' manager was shocked. "What base is Ferrell on?" asked Masterson.

Only then did Harris learn that Masterson was suffering from a vision condition that had lately taken a turn for the worse. He made quick inquiries and learned that the fellow had been ordered to wear glasses but was ashamed to wear them on the field. The Washington club sent him to an eye specialist for new glasses.

Masterson's poor vision had been affecting his pitching, it was discovered. Unable to follow the flight of a batted ball well, he had become timid, fearing that he would be hit by a line drive. He wasn't following through with his pitches, but was letting the ball go quickly and sacrificing his speed to protect himself. The new glasses have remedied that condition. The boy has lost his fear of getting hit and is now going all out with his fast ball. He's very apt to be the Nats' fourth starting pitcher.

Jones Has Lost His Touch For Comeback—Fellow Pros

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 7.—There'll never be another Bobby Jones, say the golf professionals who meet him annually in the Augusta Masters' Tournament—and Jones, the champion, never could come back.

Jones, who retired after his unequalled grand-slam in 1930 when he won the British and United States Open and amateur crowns, wound up his eighth try in the Masters' yesterday with 307. The score, compiled on four rounds of over-par golf, left him fortieth in a field of 47, 27 strokes behind the new champion, Craig Wood. But he preserved his retirement record; he has yet to take more than 79 in competition.

The abdicated king of golfers shoots 66s and 68s on his home course, Atlanta's East Lake Country Club, and played brilliantly at Nassau recently in a Red Cross benefit match with Tommy Armour, Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen. Some speculated he might better his Masters' showing—now his only tournament appearance—and finish in the first ten. But his 1934 mark of thirteenth still stands as his best.

Could Boby come back if he hit the golf trail again? With one exception, the top flight professionals of today think not.

"The field is a lot faster today," says U. S. Open Champion Lawson Little. "Where Jones had 10 competitors in 1930, he'd have 50 today. He's still a great golfer—he could be an even better one if he got tournament tough. But never the Jones of 1930. There'll never be another Jones or another grand slam."

Wood thinks Jones' 39 years and 10-year layoff would be too much to overcome. "He's been out too long," he says. "His swing still is beautiful, but he has trouble on the green."

"They never come back," says Byron Nelson, P. G. A. champion. "It's just like a boxer who retires and tries a comeback—the coordination is gone. Jones always will be a fine golfer; he even would win a good many tournaments if he went after them. But he could never be what he was in 1930."

Lone dissenter is Jimmy Demaret, of Noroton, Conn., 1940 Masters' champion: "Undoubtedly he could come back. He has a great swing. All he needs is to get in shape."

Schwartz Wins In Handball Play

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—An expert field of 59 players began battling today to dethrone Joe Platak, of Chicago, as the National A. A. U. handball champion.

George Brotemarkle, of Hollywood, eighth-seeded, bowed out in the opening round, losing to Jack Schwartz, of Washington, D. C., 21-11, 21-15. Sixth-seeded Angelo Tocchini, of Oakland, Calif., failed to show up, defaulting to Marty Britt, of Chicago.

Lanahan Pounded In 4-Inning Turn; Feller Stops Giants Before 4,208 Fans

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 7.—The Brooklyn Dodgers today had a look at a team that's considered a likely World Series rival for them next fall—the New York Yankees—and beat them, 2 to 1. Whit Wyatt and Tex Carleton held the Yankee luggers, who had been busting down minor league fences through the Southwest, to seven hits, and fanned eight. The Yankees had won seven straight.

The Yanks' only run came in the first inning, when Buddy Blair, Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller touched Wyatt for singles. Brooklyn got a run in the second when Dolph Camilli singled and Alex Kampouris tripled, then scored again in the third on a double by Pee Wee Reese and flies by Joe Vosmik and Joe Medwick. Marius Russo and George Washburn yielded ten hits, but they stopped Medwick's hitting streak after 21 straight games.

Lanahan Pounded

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 7 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates suffered another humiliating defeat today at the hands of Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, who pounded out 18 hits to win their third consecutive victory, 13 to 6.

Dick Lanahan, recently named by Frankie Frisch as one of his five regular starting hurlers, yielded six runs and eight hits in four innings before yielding to Oadis Swigart, who was knocked out by a four-run sixth-inning uprising.

Larry Davis, 20-year-old second baseman, picked up as a free agent last June by Connie Mack, led the A's assault with four safeties while his mates, Frank Hayes and Al Brancato, each got three.

Feller in Form

Johnson City, Tenn., April 7 (AP).—Bobby Feller, tuning up to pitch the season's opener for the Cleveland Indians, stopped the New York Giants for seven innings today and the Tribe won, 7 to 1. A record crowd for the local park, 4,208, saw the exhibition.

Feller gave up a run in the first inning and five hits over the seven frames and struck out seven. Bump Hadley pitched against him on almost even terms until the seventh when the Indians clouted four ground-rule doubles and scored four runs. Cleveland had scored twice in the first on a single and two two-baggers. It was Cleveland's sixth victory in seven exhibition clashes with the Giants.

Sox Beat Reds

Owensboro, Ky., April 7 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox fashioned all of their tallies on home runs by Dom DiMaggio, Jimmy Foxx and Bobby Doerr today while defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 5-2.

Doerr connected against Lefty Bob Logan with none on in the second inning and DiMaggio belted that same southpaw with Frankie Pytlak on base in the third inning. Foxx lashed one of Joe Beggs offerings over the rightfield wall after Stan Spence drew a pass in the sixth.

Cards in Shutout

Shreveport, La., April 7 (AP).—Clyde Shoun hurled a five-hit shutout today as the St. Louis Cardinals won their ninth straight exhibition game, defeating Shreveport of the Texas League, 14 to 0.

On a par with Shoun's fine pitching was the Cards 20-hit attack featuring home runs by Johnny Mize and Ernie Koy and four doubles by Enos Slaughter.

Cubs Win, 7 to 4

El Paso, Tex., April 7 (AP).—Claude Passeau went the distance today as the Chicago Cubs defeated the White Sox, 7 to 4, in their eighth spring series battle.

The Sox went ahead twice, but the Cubs rallied to pull up even on each occasion. The National Leaguers went ahead with one run in the seventh and clinched the decision in the eighth on Rookie Lou Novikoff's two-run homer off Thornton Lee.

The Cubs lead in the series, five to three, having won four of their last five starts.

Bruner Beats Mates

Charleston, S. C., April 7.—Manager Doc Prothro of the Philadelphia Phils lent Charleston of the Sally League the battery of Roy Bruner and Ben Warren today—and it cost him the game, the Class B League Rebels winning, 3 to 2.

Bruner, who pitched for Baltimore last year, let his teammates down with four hits in six innings. Josey Berry, who followed him, was just as tough, retiring the last nine Phillies in order after Stan Benjamin doubled.

Prothro announced that Pitcher Gordon Pixley will be farmed out to the Allentown (Pa.) club of the Inter-State League.

Delaware Star Steals Home While A. U. Pitcher Winds Up

Fred Mitchell, Delaware University shortstop who made three hits in yesterday's game with A. U., is shown crossing the plate on a steal of home in the second. Mitchell made his break while Rudy Zimpel was winding up to pitch to Amos Crowley. Delaware won, 14-4. The Eagles' catcher is "Dutch" Schulze

Eagles' Nine Smashed, 14-4, By Delaware

By Jack Munhall

American University's baseball team made an auspicious debut yesterday—for one inning. At the end of the first the Eagles led, 4-1. But at the end of the game they trailed Delaware University, 14-4, for the Eagles couldn't get close to home plate after the opening frame.

The visitors picked up a questionable run in the first, when the forerunner of many disputed decisions brought Eagle yells of disapproval. But there was nothing illegitimate about the eight tallies Delaware crowded over in the second stanza, or the three they made in the sixth, or yet the finishing pair of markers they counted in the eighth.

It was simply a one-inning contest for the Eagles, who were hardly impressive for a team that had been touted as the school's best in history. The main trouble with the A. U. boys was that their pitchers had great difficulty in getting anybody out.

Zimpel Starts

Rudy Zimpel, a sophomore right-hander from Arlington, Va., started on the mound for the Eagles, and in the first inning he looked alright. He exhibited a sharp-breaking curve and despite allowing two hits he would have been unscored on, save for what appeared a bad decision at first when A. U. Righfielder Hertz tried to toss out Gerry Hillman. The Delaware runner was ruled safe and a run scored on the play.

The short, bespectacled Zimpel got in a little jam in the second. He pitched a walk to Sid Sadowski, a double to Wilmur Apsley, a walk to Tom Skripps, a strikeout to Gerald Doherty, and so on. To make a sad short story Zimpel was the second man out in the inning. He went to the showers and from first base came Bill Garland to take up the pitching burden. Garland finally got the side out after 12 Delaware guys had stomped to the plate to make eight runs on only four hits.

Bogovich Missed

The Eagles, by the way, had made a sad mistake back in the first inning when they knocked Hugh Bogovich, the starting visitor pitcher, from the box. They made a mistake because they had pounded Mr. B. loose from three hits and four runs while he succeeded in getting only one out; and Jack Daly, who relieved him, held them to four hits for the next 7 2-3 innings. Buchanan pitched the ninth for Delaware and he set the Eagles down, one, two, three.

Delaware wound up its scoring orgy with 17 hits. But that's only half the story, for seven of their blows were ringing doubles to the embankment in right and centerfield, and one was a towering home run by Tibbitt, who had previously socked two of the two-baggers.

Bob Lanzillotti, former Central High School star, looked like a comer for A. U. in center field. He handled five putouts in good style and cut loose a perfect peg from deep center to double up a Delaware runner at the plate in the third inning.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Alas! Poor Tony Musto . . .

St. Louis, April 7.—Dear Editors: Here is a handy obituary on Tony Musto, a short, stocky citizen who meets his untimely end, as a fighter, tomorrow night about 10 o'clock in the local arena.

CONSIDINE

Little is known of Musto's early life except that he was born on December 3, 1915, of poor parents, learned to fight in an adjacent gutter, got mixed up with the phony amateur fight crowd, came clean about three years ago and has since piled up an impressive series of defeats as a pro.

He was selected to fight Joseph Barrow Louis for the heavyweight championship of the world by a process of elimination. Any heavyweight who might possibly draw a crowd against Louis in a New York fight was eliminated, so far as serving as Louis' opponent in St. Louis was concerned. Musto thus joined the cherished Bum-of-the-Month Club, on which Louis has been working in recent months, and is thus eligible to enter the biggest-bum-of-all competition, whose winner will be announced at the conclusion of Louis' pushover tour.

Musto is expected to sink into a large lump of protoplasm as a result of his chin coming in violent contact with two blunt objects known as Louis' left hook and short right. He will be dragged away from the scene of the accident by Gabe Genovese, his manager, and as many helpers as are needed to lift the body.

Back in the safe haven of his corner, the little stool off which he sprang so confidently a minute or two before will somehow get tangled up under him and he will nearly fall off, while Genovese is hitting him in the face with the sour sponge and the disconsolate seconds are pouring water over his goose-greased hair or administering the smelling salts.

Joe Goes Light on the Training

In the dressing room later Musto will recover sufficiently to say to reporters, "He hit me with a lucky punch. I'll beat him easy the next time."

Suggested epitaphs:

It Musto been something I et.

(Or) Beat me in St. Looie, Looie.

In the event that there is further curiosity about Musto, it may be said that he is she shortest bum-of-the-month, standing only 5 feet 7½, that he weighs about 198 and that the prefight ballyhoo said that he was destined to give Louis a lot of trouble with his crouching stance and his way of winging his hooks.

Seriously, if Louis doesn't finish Musto in a hurry tomorrow night, it will convince us that his program of fighting once a month has taken much more edge off of his fighting skill than the years which have piled up in neat stacks since Joe first came into prominence in 1934. It is a cinch that Joe doesn't train well for these fights against the Burmans, Dorazios, Simons and Mustos. Joe always had trouble forcing himself to train hard, but with money in the bank and nothing much to fear from these exhibitions, he is probably doing no real training at all.

Washington to Get Title Bout in August

But, by and large, this bum-of-the-month tour has been easy pickings for Joe. The previous three bum wallopings have averaged about $50,000, and tomorrow night's gate will drag down the average very little, if any. Some $30,000 advance money was in the till when Mike Jacobs arrived here today to take charge of the show.

This fight will give Joe about a $200,000 grand "gate" for 1941. If his return match with Simon is put outdoors in New York it might do almost that much by itself, properly steamed up. These are good times in the sports business. Thus it does not seem unreasonable to us to predict that the Louis-Nova and Louis-Conn fights will come close to drawing a million dollars between them. They are scheduled for June and September, or vicious versa.

Mike Jacobs has hopes of showing Joe in Washington against the winner of tomorrow night's Galento-Buddy Baer match there. That would be some time in August, if things go as Mike Jacobs hopes they do. Joe isn't the fighter he was the night he beat Schmeling. But he probably is good enough to go through this busy 1941 schedule without having his crown seriously dislodged.

G. W. Golfers Schedule 9 Matches

Broadening out its golf program, George Washington University announced a nine-match schedule yesterday that includes Georgetown, Navy, Boston College and Virginia among the opposition. All home matches wil be played at Kenwood, at 2 p. m.

The Colonials, temporarily under the guidance of Bill Myers, professor of physical education, will open up Thursday against Western Maryland. They also play Boston College, Washington and Lee and Maryland on local courses, in addition to the Hoyas.

A three-match trip in the Old Dominion will find the Buff linksmen meeting V. M. I., Virginia and Richmond on successive days, May 7, 8 and 9, and their out-of-town engagement will be against Navy, May 17, at Annapolis.

The Colonials will use a six-man line-up against the Terrors, Hoyas, Middies and Terps, and play four against the other teams. A local professional will be named in a day or two to coach the team.

Carl Detsch will captain the team while other mainstays will be Bus Fleming, Frank McGinnis, Jack Kleh and Tom Grady, better known as the Colonial quarterback.

The schedule:

April 10, Western Maryland, six-man, here; 18, Boston College, four-man, here; 23, Georgetown, six-man, here.

May 7, V. M. I., four-man, at Lexington, Va.; 8, Virginia, four-man, at Charlottesville, Va.; 9, University of Richmond, four-man, at Richmond, Va.; 16, Washington and Lee, four-man, here; 17, six-man, at Annapolis, Md.; 31, University of Maryland, four-man, at Beaver Dam, Md.

Pat Comiskey, Savold Score Atlanta K.O.'s

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 7.—Matched against substitute opposition when Patsy Peroni signed today for military service, Lee Savold, of Des Moines, Iowa, stopped Mike Alfino, of New York, tonight in the second heat of a 10-round fight.

Savold, weighing 194½, discolored the New Yorker's left eye near the end of the first round, and finished the job of closing it in the second. Alfino was unable to answer the bell for the third. He weighed 189½.

Comiskey Scores KO

Pat Comiskey, 210-pound heavyweight contender from Paterson, N. J., ripped into Jack Merritt, 192½, of Ponca City, Okla., knocking out the Midwesterner in 55 seconds of the third round with a shower of rights and lefts to the body. Merritt hit the canvas twice in the second, once for the count of eight, under head and body pounding.

Irish Eddie Pierce, 164½, of Johannesburg, South Africa, who caddied for golfer Boby Jones in 1930, when Jones won the British Open at St. Andrews, Scotland, took a 10-round decision from S. W. (Young) Allen, 178½, of Macon, Ga., in a preliminary.

Benny Leonard Clowns

Warren Wilson, 197-pound Clemson College heavyweight, knocked out Jack Stribling, 12, of Birmingham in one minute of the first round in an amateur exhibition.

In a lighter vein, former Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard clowned through a three-round exhibition with Jake Abel, whom he fought here 22 years ago.

Christoforidis KO's Colonello In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 7.—Anton Christoforidis, The N. B. A.'s light heavyweight champion, spotted Italo Colonello, of Italy, 15 pounds tonight and chopped down his heavier opponent in the fifth round of their 10-round fight at the Coliseum.

The Greek fighter, a fast, clever, two-handed boxer, was awarded a technical knockout when he ripped open Colonello's lower lip midway the fifth round. Colonello was taken to a hospital where six stitches were required to close the cut.

Christoforidis, the heavy favorite, was much too fast for the Italian and Colonello showed to advantage in only one round, the fourth, when he landed several hard rights. The N. B. A. champion weighed 176; Colonello, 191.

Johnny Kapovich, 180½, Baltimore, knocked out Jack Matthews, 195, Newark, in the third round of the 8-round semifinal bout. Salvatore Bartola, 129¼, Boston, knocked out John Cockfield, New York, in the fourth round of another 8-rounder.

Maryland Meets Loyola Ten Today

University of Maryland's national championship lacrosse team today will seek its second victory of the season when it meets Loyola of Baltimore at 4 o'clock at College Park in a match rescheduled from Saturday.

The Terps defeated the Baltimore ten, 17-1, last year and it is expected to repeat that victory, though not by quite as large a margin.

16 Softball Fields Now Available; 10 More Working

Sixteen public softball fields are now available here, it was announced last night by Dick Tennyson, assistant director of welfare and recreation. Eight of the fields are located on the Polo Grounds and the others in East Potomac Park near the Lincoln Memorial Reflection Pool. Ten more softball fields will be ready soon on the site reclaimed from the East Potomac golf course, Tennyson said.

Sisto Pilots Long Shot in Second Race

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Bowie, Md., April 7.—With prices ranging from $100.40 down to $3, some 7,000 customers took part in the Monday program here today. The biggest monetary punch of the program was provided by Mrs. E. R. Routt's Brookie Boy, trained by Mr. Routt. The 4-year-old son of Mawlee and Baby Rox, which suffered from a "last in every field" complex last year, found his racing legs today and drove to the wire under the whip of Jockey Ricco Sisto to win the second race by a head margin and give his backers 50 to 1 for their money.

It was an all-Washington victory. The Routts, as well as Jockey Sisto, call the Nation's Capital their home. Brookie Boy ate the oats of Brooke Johns, the former musical comedy star, last year. He is a full brother of Mil'le O, which carried the Johns' colors to victory at a $104 mutuel at Bel Air last summer.

In addition to his box-car individual price, Brookie Boy put the finishing touches on a $157.80 payoff in the daily double. His victory came in a blanket with Mrs. E. N. Cobb's Black Boo, a 73-1 shot, and Mrs. Victor P. Noyes' Match Point.

The double started with the shortest shot of the day on Harry T. Johnson's Five-o-Eight. The son of Discovery, making the second start of his career, won by three lengths. Mrs. J. Globe's Bright finish was second ahead of Mrs. Donald Woodward's Sir Chicle. Bright Finish paid $43.50 to place.

The training honors for the day in numbers went to Hirsch Jacobs, leading conditioner in America until dethroned last year by D. Womeldorf. Jacobs saddled four horses and three of them bounced to the finish line on top of the opposition He began in the fourth race with Uvalde. This $5.80 shot came through the stretch with plenty of punch to defeat, among others, Dizzy B and Bobcap.

In the fifth race, he tightened the tack on Yawl and the 3-year-old gelding withstood a long drive to win the sprint of 6 furlongs by a head margin from H. M. Babylon's Becomly. A nose from the photo money came C. Stern's Poindexter to be third. Yawl paid a $9.10 mutuel.

The Jacobs influence extended right into the day's feature race, the Army Day Handicap, which drew eight better-than-average sprinters. The horse was Air Brigade which lacked drive under Jockey Johnny Gilbert's handling here last week. Today Jockey A. Schmidl was in the saddle and he made no mistakes. Gilbert was second on Gustave Ring's Ringle and he rode as if he were going a mile and 15-16ths, if you know what I mean. Ringle was last at the far turn and closed with a rush. Air Brigade paid $4.50 and was clocked in 1:14 over a slow track.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKIE BOY, $100.40, $24.00, $10.90; BLACK BOO, $43.10, $27.00; MATCH POINT, $5.00.

Daily Double, FIVE-O-EIGHT and BROOKIE BOY, Paid $157.80

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:06½. Winner, S. Brooks' br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRACK FAVOR, $12.40, $8.90, $5.70; HOWMART, $10.10, $6.50; ROUGH BISCUIT, $3.30.

CRACK FAVOR moved up on the outside of the leaders leaving the backstretch, responded when put to pressure and was in the concluding strides. MOWMART, allowed to race on his own courage early, came between horses when placed to a drive and took command in the final sixteenth, but failed to last. ROUGH BISCUIT, rated while in the first flight, took the lead when placed to punishment and stopped suddenly. TALENT closed full of run from a sluggish beginning.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UVALDE, $5.80, $3.90, $3.70; DIZZY B., $6.50, $4.70; MOBCAP, $16.40.

UVALDE, steadied while within striking distance for the half, responded gamely when asked to take command and was kept to a drive to the end. DIZZY B., sluggish in the early stages, gained gradually to midstretch and hung in the final drive. MOBCAP was hard ridden and had no excuses. KNOXVILLE set the early pace and weakened gradually.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. †H. M. Babylon-E. K. Bryson entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YAWL, $9.10, $3.40, $2.40; BECOMLY (entry), $2.40, $2.10; POINDEXTER, $2.40.

YAWL, in close quarters early and taken to the outside, gained sharply when shaken up and was up in the concluding strides. BECOMLY was in the thick of contention from the start, gained a brief lead in midstretch and held on willingly. POINDEXTER was forced to race on the inside in the heaviest going, rallied when clear and faltered under pressure right at the close.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200 added. Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:33½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' dk. br. g. (3), by Crack Brigade—Airy Jane. Trained by H. Jacobs. Net value to winner, $910; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIR BRIGADE, $4.50, $2.90, $2.40; RINGIE, $4.50, $3.40; WOODVALE LASS, $4.90.

AIR BRIGADE, steadied on the outside to the stretch, responded with good energy when placed to a drive and drew clear in the closing stages. RINGIE, taken up going to the first turn and a trailer, came with a bold rush too late to menace the winner. WOODVALE LASS could not keep up early and closed full of run. CLARKSVILLE was hard used racing with CHARLENE and weakened under punishment in the final eighth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. (5), by Don Leon—Betty B. Trained by R. B. Archer. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:58⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON PECOS, $4.20, $2.50, $2.30; MONEY MUDDLE, $3.30, $3.50; CUCKOO, $2.80.

DON PECOS, steadied early, took command after a quarter, drew far out and won well in hand. MONEY MUDDLE lacked early speed, was taken wide for racing room and closed willingly under punishment. CUCKOO was rushed to contention along the backstretch and tired gradually thereafter. PARI CALL closed ground from a sluggish beginning.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:30½. Off at 5:33. Winner, H. T. Johnson's b. h. (6), by Chicle—Robins Egg. Trained by J. P. Smith. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:59⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED BREAST, $10.00, $6.10, $4.80; DARK BEAU, $12.80, $6.50; RHINIZ, $4.70.

RED BREAST, steadied during the opening half, went to the front when asked, drew out and won in hand. DARK BEAU was within striking distance from the beginning and closed willingly, but was no match for the winner. RHINIZ, a distant trailer early, closed much ground. COUNT ELEVEN was hard used racing JEAN C. into submission and faltered.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Although the Millsdale Stable's Doctor Reder ran out at the home-stretch turn and still won the Glymont on Saturday, trainers of several 2-year-olds still eligible for the $2,500 Kindergarten on Wednesday, say the colt won't win the midweek feature. Some of the trainers whose youngsters were beaten by Doctor Reder claim the sloppy track was against them. One of those who looks for his thoroughbred to improve Wednesday is Tom Jolly, who handles Treemontier. Sammy Hicks also looks for Airspring to show better in the Kindergarten. "Buster" Bedwell reports that his father's Rawson, favorite in Saturday's seventh race, cut his head when the stall gate opened slowly, and that is why the public choice raced so poorly. Patrol Judge Willie Doyle, who was ill Saturday, returned to duty yesterday. Charlie Ulbig, employed in the press coop here, as well as at Havre de Grace, Laurel and Delaware Park, is ill at the West Baltimore Hospital with pneumonia. Dabney Harrison, former trainer of the Howe Stable string, is handling Mrs. Edward B. Lee's string, including Green Hickory, a starter in yesterday's first race. Some charts on Saturday's races show that Johnny Gilbert was astride Single in the Glymont. The 2-year-old was ridden by Sterling Young, who is the meeting's leading winning jockey with six victories. Tommy Rodrock, who trains the Haughton P. Metcalf and William F. Hitt horses, is well enough to resume his duties. Rodrock has 11 horses here and will move 14 more today from Virginia to Havre de Grace. Nineteen favorites won in the first 40 races staged here this spring. Last spring's meeting saw 50 per cent of the public choices getting down in front. That average, highest in America last year, may be equaled during the session, which ends Saturday. Horsemen planning on racing at Charles Town, W. Va., should rush their stall applications to Russell F. Oakes, executive assistant to President Al J. Boyle. Greg Johnson, who has been distributing Charles Town stall blanks, says the supply is exhausted and that horsemen should write Oakes immediately. Sammy Hicks states he will send a division of the D. J. Sullivan stable to Charles Town at the conclusion of the Pimlico session. John Bosley, J. Bowen Bond, Vic Noyes and Charlie Beal, are others planning on racing at Charles Town. Robert Conley, a lad who rode well in the West last year, joined the local colony today. He immediately swung into action aboard Mrs. Emil Denemark's Court Dance. BILL.

First race—INTRUDING was shut off leaving the gate last out and showed enough to warrant a top pick in this maiden field. Has the speed and needs only the right ride. SMART showed a race in keeping with his name in his debut here. Promises to be close up. PETES GOLD to take care of the others.

Second race—APPREHEND turned in a fine second under a drive last week. This veteran likes the track and should take a field of this kind into camp. The Hitt-Metcalf entry of RAZACIA and GALA QUEST figures close. Both are fit and ready. MY LAWYER has speed and a bit of class. Will be a keen factor if fit.

Third race—ADOLF has won two in a row and promises to make it three. Might be extended this time, but I believe he can take it. ETHEL BLUME scored in fine fashion when asked and is a dangerous contender at the feather weight. GRAND DUKE'S last was the tip-off that this one is ready for the best.

Fourth race—HAND AND GLOVE is still knocking around in maiden ranks and seems to have found the right spot for graduation purposes in this field. The weight is OK and all we need is intelligent saddle work. FLO BEAU is a good one, but may be overweighted. UNA H. is cheap, but that last was promising. LOOKFORME has been whispered around.

Fifth race — TRAGIC ENDING showed good form in Florida and figures to take top money in the 6-furlong affair. CAVALIER has a class edge on these, but will have to come from behind. HAPPY HUNTING ran some fair races last fall, but may need racing.

Sixth race — The H. G. Bedwell entry of RAWSON and FOGOSO should account for the heat. RAWSON had trouble at the gate in his most recent effort. DOUBLE B was a winner in Florida and is not over-matched. FLAMING HIGH may have needed that last race.

Seventh race—OUR FLORENCE, a member of the Greer entry, closed well in that last effort after having early interference. There should be no mistake today. RELIOUS, a winner at the meeting, should save the place money from PRIORITY.

Eighth race—MEMORY BOOK is as good as those bad legs of his and should win another over this soft track. His recent winning effort was a beaut. JACK STING was a handy winner here and should furnish the contention. BLACK GROUSE, another winner, should get a split of the purse.

Best bet—Adolf.

1—Emanuel entry, Intruding, Ashame.
2—Crius, Gala Guest, My Lawyer.
3—Ethel Blume, Kaptime, Adolf.

Metro Softball Officials Meet Tomorrow

A meeting of softball heads of the Metropolitan leagues will be held Wednesday night at 7 o'clock at Lowe & Campbell sporting goods store, Vermont Avenue and K Street Northwest, President Mike Sklar announced yesterday.

Additional teams are needed to round out both the "A" and "B" leagues of the Metropolitan circuit, and teams interested in joining these leagues are asked to be present.

The teams entered to date include FBI, Manhattan Auto & Radio, Adam Hats, Buckingham, Greenbelt and Civil Service.

Meanwhile, President Sklar announced plans for the big opening of the Merchants Night Softball League Monday night, May 5, at Ballston Stadium are making great strides. Each team in this league claims a city championship, and a red-hot battle is in the offing when the action gets under way.

International Business Machines, last year's champions, will meet Senate in the headline attraction, while Kavakos Grill and Standard Linen will oppose in the opener.

Early Wilson Runs Trip Saints, 8-1

4 Pitchers Help Out in 2d Triumph

St. Albans Beaten By 7-Run Barrage In First 3 Frames; Briscuso, Cave Star

Opening its season on the home field, St. Albans School nine was the second straight victim this year of Woodrow Wilson's clever forces yesterday, losing an 8-1 decision as the result of the Tigers' bunched runs in the first three innings.

With Nino Briscuso, its ace moundsman, doing the hurling, Wilson pushed over single tallies in the first and third innings and a grand total of five in the second for its winning margin. The remainder of the game was exactly even, the winners chalking up another score in the last inning and the Saints hitting the scoring column their only time in the eighth.

Briscuso moved to the outfield after three frames, allowing three Tiger novices a turn on the hill, and with him apparently went Wilson's ability to score. Before he left, however, Briscuso turned in three-innings of one-hit ball. He even picked the only man to get a hit off first. Carl Saine, Ed Dinkens and Bob Cave followed in succession and they allowed the hosts only four more hits. Coming into the game in the eighth with one run over, one out and the bases loaded, Cave prove outstanding of the three. He used a clever knuckle ball to fan the next two players to face him, retiring the side.

The Tigers realized 13 hits off Trimble, who went the route for St. Albans. Five of them came in the second inning, including doubles by Catcher Dick Schwab and Don Hillock. Though St. Alban's had men in scoring position in the second, third, fourth, sixth and ninth innings, its only tally was walked in by Cave in the eighth after a base on balls had opened the frame and two successive Tiger errors had been committed.

Leftfielder Farnham had the best record for the winners at bat, getting three safeties in four official trips, but the Saints' Rightfielder Price got on base more often. He didn't get a hit, but he walked the first three times he was up and reached first on an error the fourth time.

Colgate Football Star to Wrestle Here Thursday

A former All-American football star from Colgate, Len Macaluso, who is fast developing into a second Bronko Nagurski and Gus Sonnenberg, yesterday was placed in his first semiwindup role on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Macaluso, big, powerful 6-footer, will meet Emil Dusek, of the famous Dusek "Riot Squad" on the card which features Ernie Dusek against Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis.

In the last few months Macaluso has been a consistent winner. As a doubles partner of Fred (Legs) Grobmier, the erstwhile grid star, has been outstanding in the two-man battles.

Another bout closed yesterday will bring back Lou Plummer, the Baltimore madman, against Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man. Plummer lost a bruising battle last week to Ernie Dusek in a headliner.

In a special bout The Green Hornet, mysterious wrestler, will engage Grobmier.

C. U. Tennis Team Meets Drew Today

Victor in two of its first three matches, the Catholic University tennis team today meets Drew College at 2:30 at Columbia Country Club.

The Cards have defeated Guilford and Appalachian State Teachers, and lost to Bowdoin College.

Capt. and No. 1 singles player Bill D'Orsavage, who also coaches the C. U. team, will choose his starting line-up from among Hartwell Calcote, Frank Murphy, John Zeender, Schuman Jean Henri Souffront and Joe Joors.

C. U.'s remaining schedule:

April 9, West Chester State Teachers, home; 10, Bridgewater, home; 15, Johns Hopkins, home.

May 9, Georgetown University, away; 15, Western Maryland College, away; 17, West Chester Teachers, away; 18, Villanova University, away; 20, Western Maryland College, home; 22, St. John's University, away; 23, Fordham University, away.

Dodgers Sell Six Players to Montreal

Atlanta, April 7 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers sold six players to their Montreal farm club in the International League today but one of them, Infielder Johnny Hudson, balked at the transfer. Hudson left the club tonight to go to New York.

The others sent to the Royals are Outfielders Joe Gallagher and George Staller, Pitchers Steve Schunok and Max Macon and Catcher Angelo Giuliani.

They Carry D. C. Variety Club's Golf Hopes

Tody Brown's 428 Set Leads Duckpinners

NAVY LEAGUE

Lou William's 160 for Bureau of Engineering, and Walter Burton's 394 for Signal Corps, led the Navy League at Arcadia with the former's count enabling his team to win top set with a 1,679 count, while Hydrographic won the high game after a 603 pinfall. Hydrographic won the odd game from the Pay Masters to remain in first place by pinfall.

ODD FELLOWS

Izzy Katz was the top roller in the Odd Fellows League with a 144 game and 407 set. Art Custer, Golden Rule, also found the Brookland Recreation drives to his liking for he totaled 374 to enable his team to take top set with a 1,723 count. The Columbia No. 1 team was best for game with its 592.

CONVENTION HALL

The Convention Hall League at Hap Burtner's drives was sparked by Hap's son, George, who totaled 145 for high single that enabled his Geo. W. Cochran team to win three straight from Maurice H. Katz. Carl Deavers' 390 big effort was the spark his Tru-Blu team needed to win highs with 620 and 1,794, the latter an all-time league high by 43 sticks. Tru-Blu also won all three from the Extras and now are but three tilts behind C. H. Wolfe. The Cochran team, far behind several months ago, fought to a contending position and now is in third place.

ICE PALACE

The Ice Palace Ladies League was once more dominated by Pauline Ford, who rolled highs of 125-323 and led her Doves team to top single of 515. The Eagles won the set after a count of 1,449. The Woodpeckers are on top of the league with one game margin over the Doves.

KILOWATT

Dave Wockley, Accounting, rolled the high single of 150 in the Kilowatt League at Penn Recreation while Bill Krauss, Engineering, and Joe Overend, Transit, each had 381 to split high set honors. The station Engineers won team highs after pinfalls of 605 and 1,711 and took two from Substation to remain in the top position.

SODALITY

TAKOMA CHURCH

Hoffecker's 146 and Grady's 376 were top scores in the Takoma Church League at Hap Newman's alleys with the Catholic No. 1 boys sweeping team highs after pinfalls of 568 and 1,669. Catholic No. 2 leads with 58-29 while Catholic No. 1 is next with 57-30 with Presbyterian No. 1 next with 41-46.

5 Schoolboy Golf Matches on Today

Ten schoolboy golf teams will see action on five private courses today with Wilson's defending interhigh champions, meeting Tech at Beaver Dam in the feature. All matches start at 3:30 p. m.

Two other interhigh matches are carded, Roosevelt and Anacostia at Army and Navy and Central vs. Western at Capital. In the Metropolitan division Devitt and St. Johns meet at Woodmont and Gonzaga opposes Blair at Columbia.

'Red' Lucas Is Signed To Pilot Grand Rapids

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 7 (AP).—Charles (Red) Lucas, former pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds and the Pittsburgh Pirates, will manage the Grand Rapids Colts in the Michigan State League this season, John Van Splunter, club president, announced today.

3 Local Clubs to Play Round Robin Series

Bannockburn, Beaver Dam, Argyle to Compete In Home and Home Matches Starting June 20

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Three local golf clubs, Bannockburn, Beaver Dam and Argyle, will compete in a round robin, home-and-home series this season with a trophy going to the club scoring the most points. Dates of the six matches were announced yesterday.

Each club will have a first team and a second team and while the star players are visiting one course the higher handicapped members will entertain a second team. Thus the play will not be too heavy over any layout in a Sunday afternoon.

S. E. Mulliken, chairman of the Bannockburn golf committee; Forest Thompson, Beaver Dam's chairman, and Ray Lawrenson, of Argyle, completed arrangements. Whether each club will be represented by 20 or 40 members in each match, and the nature of the trophy, will be decided in a meeting at Lawrenson's home this week.

Exchange Dates

The series will open June 22 with Beaver Dam's first team visiting Argyle and the latter's No. 2 lineup playing over the Landover course. The host teams will be reversed August 3.

Bannockburn and Argyle will exchange dates July 13 and August 17 while Bannockburn and Beaver Dam will not get together until the end of the season, September 28 and October 19.

Based on performances of just the dozen or more best players in the club, Beaver Dam would be a favorite to win the play, but with the second flight golfers having say as to the disposition of the trophy, the strength is divided, and any of the three clubs could win.

Bannockburn's schedule, announced yesterday by Mulliken, also includes a home-and-home series with the Catoctin Club, of Frederick, Md., on the same basis, the first team at home and the second away. The Glen Echo linksmen will play the up-State team May 4 and 25.

Two-Man Teams Play

Outstanding event on the Bannockburn schedule is the second annual two-man team Invitation Tournament, with the dates having been previously announced as June 6-7-8. Although the event attracted only a small field last year, it was so successful that at least 100 tandems are expected for the Friday, June 6, qualifying date of the renewal.

A Calcutta Pool will be held in connection with the club championship this year. Thirty-six hole qualifying rounds will be held the last two weeks in August, followed by the pool drawing, with match play weekends in September.

Bannockburn golf schedule:

April 13, moaners and groaners; 20, Scotch foursome (mixed), selective shots; 27, Bet-a-Million (foursome individual play).

Ringer tournament:

May 4, Catoctin 20-man team (10 away, 10 home); 11, match play against par (handicap 2-3); 18, Scotch foursome (men a. m., ladies p. m.); 25, Catoctin 20-man team (10 away, 10 home); 30, flag tournament (men a. m., ladies p. m.).

June 1, Barry-Pate (all matches must be played on schedule); 6, 7, 8, invitation tournament; 9, Barry-Pate (quarter-finals); 15, Barry-Pate (semifinals); 22, Barry-Pate (finals).

July 4, flag tournament (a. m.), mixed Scotch firecracker tournament; 13, Argyle 20-man team (10 away, 10 home); 20, Tom Moore Cup (two 18-hole medal play each week-end); 20, Pop Piper Cup (one 18-hole medal play each week-end); 27, Tom Moore Cup, Pop Piper Cup.

August 3, father and son (a. m.), Scotch foursome (p. m.); 10, moaners and groaners; 17, Argyle 20-man team (10 away, 10 home); 24, club championship 36-hole medal play, August 23-30 only; 31, all play for medal, first 16 low handicap, first flight. Others play in flights as qualified. End of ringer tournament.

September 1, kicker tournament; 7, club championship play; 14, club championship play; 21, club championship play; 28, Beaver Dam 20-man team (10 away, 10 home).

Table Tennis Play Starts Saturday

The District of Columbia Table Tennis Association is holding its third annual tournament for boys Saturday starting at 6:30 p. m. at the Columbia Courts, 3330 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Any boy or girl 15 years or under is eligible to play in the event. The winner will receive the Claude Houchin Trophy. The runner-up will get a gold medal.

Bobby Bensinger, former national boys' indoor tennis champion, is defending champion. Entries are being taken by Eddie Yap at the Columbia courts until 6 p. m. Friday.

Briarley Tops N. T. S., 12-11, On Big Rally

With an eighth-inning uprising which accounted for six runs and nullified an 11-6 lead held by National Training School, Briarley Military Academy yesterday came through with a 12-11 victory on its home grounds.

The rally was featured by Jack Stitt, regular second baseman, who doubled as a catcher. Stitt slammed out a double to bring in two men and scored a moment later with the winning run when Buddy Meyers singled.

Phil Engberg, Briarley pitcher, knocked a home run with two men on in the first inning, and Winnie Lodge, who relieved Engberg on the mound in the fourth, led the batting attack with four hits out of five times at bat. Briarley, which lost its opener to Herndon, 7-5, will seek its second victory of the season today over Sherwood High at Sherwood.

Former Giant Owner To Be Buried Today

Point Pleasant Beach, N. J., April 7 (AP).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow in New York for Edward Baker Talcott, 83, who owned the controlling interest in the New York Giants Baseball Club before the turn of the century. He died at his home here Saturday night after a long illness.

Wader Catches Perch

Kinston, N. C., April 7 (AP).—Rodney Askew was wading in a Duplin County creek when a 1-pound perch leaped into one of his hip boots. He threw the prize back, however, because, he said, "one is forbidden to take fresh water fish during spawning season. Besides, I had no fishing license."

Naiman Photo Five Reaches Tourney Finals

Naiman Photo five fought its way into the finals of the District of Columbia Recreation basketball tournament last night at Tech gym, leading all the way to barely nose out Old Age Insurance cagers, 36-34. The Photomen will face either Marion A. C. or United Typewriters tomorrow night in the championship game, the opponent depending on tonight's semifinal victor.

Sam Di Blasi, Central High star, led the scoring of the winners by a single point, his total of 11 beating out Charley Quidley and Pat Hurley with 10 each. At the half Naiman held a 21-18 edge.

Galento Meets Baer Tonight In Uline Ring

and I'm on my way toward the title and a shot at Joe Louis now. I never thought I'd get over the shock of Joe Jacobs' death, but that blow has been softened by my connection with Harry Mendel. Harry was Joe's best friend and he's a swell guy to have as a manager. I think we'll go a long way together."

Galento, who stands but 5 feet 8, said he expects to weigh in today at noon at Uline's Arena at around 240 pounds.

"Who has this guy Baer ever beat?" Tony snarled. "I'll wear him out with body punching. He's like his brother Max—when the going gets tough he just can't take it. I like it rough and tough in there, but I'm going to knock this bum with nothing but straight fighting."

Baer, who took it easy all day at the Ambassador under the watchful eye of Manager Ancil Hoffman, still wast quietly confident last night.

"I know I can beat Tony, and I expect to knock him out inside of five rounds," said Buddy, a personable, clean-cut youngster of 26. "Then just give me a shot at Lou Nova and I'll be ready for Louis or anybody else. I've got to keep the name of the old Baer clan up there, you know, and, although Max isn't through just because he lost to Nova, they're saying so. But you can't keep a Baer down."

Baer Kayoed Simon

Tonight's fight—which in past years would never stack up as anything more than a third-rate heavyweight battle—is one of the biggest ventures of Mike Jacobs' current road show.

Out of it must come a new member of the Joe Louis "sock-of-the-month" club. Galento, who floored Louis before being knocked out himself in the fourth round, would be a big drawing card in a return fight. But it's just as probable that the gigantic Baer would be even a larger attraction.

Baer knocked out Abe Simon in 3 rounds, and Simon's the lad who went 13 with Louis recently in Detroit. What's more, Baer's still on the upgrade and has several years of fighting ahead of him, whereas Galento, at 31, is a battle-scarred citizen who bleeds like a stuck pig every time he's hit, and he has little future in the ring.

Strong Supporting Card

Tonight's main event, which will get under way about 10 p. m., has one of the best supporting cards ever arranged for an indoor fight.

Jimmy DeChard, the 22-year-old Southeast boy who is stepping out for his first professional heavyweight fight, tops the undercard in a six-rounder with Joe Linsie, of Trenton, N. J.

In other six-rounders, Lee Q. Murray, colored heavyweight protege of Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle, the radio comedian, fights Young Foster, colored Atlantic City fighter; Herbie Katz fights Felix Del Paoli in a lightweight affair, and Billy Banks takes on Pablo Danno in a featherweight encounter. The four-round curtain raiser at 8:30 brings out Jackie Cranford against Roy Dunne, light-heavyweights.

Leftfielder Ben Chapman, Centerfielder Roger Cramer and Rightfielder George Case are all members of the fraternity. . . . But the Knights of Columbus can claim both of the Nats' first basemen—George Archie and Mickey Vernon. . . . Steve Sundra is scheduled to face the Tigers at Charlotte tomorrow. . . . On Wednesday, at Greenville, Buck Newsom will probably pitch for the Tigers at the request of the native South Carolina fans. . . . Bucky Harris today confirmed the suspicion that Dutch Leonard would be the Nats' opening-game pitcher against the Yankees on April 14. . . . Buddy Lewis this week will visit his North Carolina draft board near Gastonia in an attempt to get a first-hand low-down on his Selective Service status. . . . If Cecil Travis continues to show the terrific power he has been exhibiting in the South he will be moved up to the clean-up job on the Nats. . . . That's a sort of commentary on the punch of the Washington club, the fact that the fourth-place hitter at this time is Buddy Lewis, who never batted in 100 runs a season in his life. . . . President Clark Griffith of the Nats is merely vice president of the club's Charlotte and Greenville farms. . . . Where his adopted son, Calvin, holds the No. 1 office. . . . The Nats are serious about trying a new play this year, with both George Case and Ben Chapman trying to take two bases on a bunt behind them. . . . When he was with the Nats a few years ago, Chapman won a game by going from second to the plate on a bunt of Buddy Lewis. . . . Bucky Harris calls this Washington team the best bunting crew of Nats he has ever handled, with Case, Cramer, Chapman, Lewis and Myer being specially adept. . . . Clark Griffith is snorting his disgust at a recent poll of the American League managers which predicted the Washington club would finish seventh. . . . "They'll be surprised," he says.—POVICH.

Notables Feast Here on Bread Made of New Kind of Flour

Prominent guests munched last night on bread made from a new kind of flour—in which more of the wheat's nutritive value is said to be retained—at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the discoverer of the process, Theodore Earle, Los Angeles mining engineer.

First formal announcement of the new bread, which is called "Staff," was made at the dinner given by M. Lee Marshall, of New York City, president of Continental Baking Co.

How a mining engineer became a pioneer in a new flour-making process was a conversational theme at the table. As a representative of the industry told it, Earle, as a hobby, has been experimenting with the selection of wheat seeds for germination by a flotation process related to the method of separating metals.

Last fall he was working with wheat seeds when a telephone call interrupted him. After some delay he returned to the vat, and found that the harsh fibrous hulls of the seeds were peeling off. Hitherto because of the difficulty of finding a way to remove these hulls, the fragments of the hulls customarily have to be sifted off after grinding. A part of the wheat's nutritive value which would be thus lost, is saved by the Earle process, it was pointed out.

Earle went to New York and reported his discovery to Marshall. With the aid of mining equipment, the company began producinfi flour by the new process at a mill in Kansas City several months ago. Bread made from this flour goes on sale here this week.

Among the guests invited to last night's dinner were Senator and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, jr., Representative and Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General and Mrs Parran, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Earle, Los Angeles; Dr. and Mrs. Paul de Kruif, Holland, Mich.; Dr. and Mrs. Russell M. New Session Of National Police Academy Opens

The seventeenth session of the FBI National Police Academy, called the "West Point of Law Enforcement," opened yesterday, with 38 officials representing law enforcement agencies in 25 States, the District and the Philippine Islands.

The academy, under direction of John Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, trains the selected police officers in the science of law enforcement to enable them to serve as police instructors in their home communities.

Chiefs of police from Dalton, Ga.; Whitemarsh Township, Pa.; Lewiston, Me.; Oneonta, N. Y.; La Mesa, Calif.; Endicott, N. Y., and Pampa, Tex., are attending. One officer is a lieutenant of the Philippine Constabulary, Manila. Closer home, M. H. Raspberry, sergeant, U. S. Park Police, Washington, and Wilbour H. Conroy, detective sergeant, Maryland State Police, Baltimore, are signed up for the course.

Beltsville Airport Work Begins Today

Work on the $568,000 Beltsville Airport near Laurel, Md., to be used by flying units of the District National Guard and Naval Reserves, will begin this morning, according to Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator.

The field is located on land controlled by the National Agricultural Research Center about 3 miles west of Laurel near the Washington-Baltimore Highway.

It also was announced that the President yesterday approved an additional $400,000 in WPA funds for consruction at the National Airport at Gravelly Point.

The extra money will be used "for a variety of work" in finishing up the huge flying field. The President's approval of additional funds brought the WPA total for the Gravelly Point project to approximately $4,000,000, the announcement said.

The Beltsville field is sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, which will contribute $125,000 toward construction. The remaining $443,468, Edwards said, will be WPA money.

Funds from his office, the administrator said, will be used for "clearing, grubbing, grading, draining, construction of runways, seeding and installation of lighting facilities."

Approximately 200 men, all from District WPA rolls, will begin work on the site today, Edwards added.

Work on two hangars will start as soon as the ground is put into shape, it was reported. The hangars will cost $238,878, Edwards said.

Defense Health Training Course To Open Today

Addresses by Surgeon General Thomas Parran and Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of health and welfare in the Federal Security Agency, will open a special six-week training course this morning at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md.

The trainees, composed of physicians, sanitary engineers, nurses and laboratory technicians drawn from civil service lists, will be tutored in public health administration, disease control, industrial hygiene and related subjects.

The course is a phase of the national defense program which is designed to reinforce public health services in Baltimore, Washington and the following Maryland counties: Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Harford, Prince Georges and Howard.

Local health organizations will have their staffs supplemented with U. S. Public Health Service personnel. Successive six-week courses will be given at the Institute until the full number of workers required for the emergency health and sanitation program has been recruited and trained.

Dr. Hudson Wins Milk Study Prize

Dr. Claude S. Hudson, of the National Institute of eHalth, U. S. Public Health Service, received the $1,000 Borden Co. award in chemistry of milk yesterday afternoon at the opening of the American Chemical Society's meeting in St. Louis.

Dr. Hudson "has developed methods for estimating the amount of cane sugar in solution and for concentrating the yeast enzyme invertase which acts on cane sugar to change some of its properties, the society said.

Va. Music Federation To Meet in Richmond

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—More than 400 persons are expected to assemble here next week for the annual four-day convention of the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs.

The sessions will open on April 16 with Mrs. Charles D. Townes, of Waverly, State president, in charge. The principal speaker will be Mrs. Vincent Miller Ober, of Norfolk, president of the Norfolk federation.

SEC Orders Bidding on Utility Issues

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission today issued an order declaring that beginning May 7 all issues of public utility securities amounting to more than $1,000,000 must be floated through competitive bidding.

The new rule, known as "U-50," was adopted by unanimous vote of the commission. It developed in part from the battle between New York and Middle West investment bankers over the right to handle financing involving millions of dollars in fees each year.

The commission accepted almost without change the recommendation for a competitive bidding rule made by its public utilities division staff last December 28 after months of investigation.

Opposed By I. B. A.

This proposal was the subject of a five-day public conference in February at which the Investment Bankers Association and the National Association of Securities Dealers marshaled the opposition of securities dealers from all parts of the country. The staff proposal was supported principally by Otis & Co., of Cleveland, and Halsey, Stuart & Co., of Chicago, two of the largest investment banking houses outside of New York.

The SEC turned down flatly a suggested rule offered by the I. B. A. at private conferences following the public hearing.

Calling attention to its long study of the problem, the commission said in a statement discussing the new rule:

"Our conclusion that competitive bidding is the only satisfactory means of avoiding these evils (the restraint of free and independent competition) has been reached only after the most exhaustive search for a substitute."

Five Possible Exceptions

The rule makes five possible exceptions:

1. Issuance or sale of securities pro rata to existing holders of securities of the company involved.

2. The issuance of bonds, notes or other evidence of a debt of a maturity of ten years or less to a commercial bank, insurance company or similar institution not for resale to the public.

3. The issuance or sale of securities to a registered holding company or subsidiary which has been approved by the commission under another section of the act.

4. Securities having proceeds to the issuer not exceeding $1,000,000.

5. Issuance or sale of securities in situations where the commission finds that competitive bidding appears unnecessary.

The new rule will apply to all public utility holding companies and operating subsidiaries subject to the utility act and regardless of whether the security is a new issue or represents an old issue being offered to the public. It does not require acceptance of the highest bid or prevent the rejection of all bids.

London Stocks

London, April 7 (AP).—Security prices tended lower today, but on the whole the "city" displayed a firm front to news of the German invasion of Yugoslavia.

Turnover, already curbed by the Balkan developments, was further hampered as traders awaited the budget statement of the chancellor of the exchequer.

British government bonds were marked down at the outset, but later developed assistance. In the foreign bond market present demand for Japanese issues dried up and quotations slipped.

Deposits Soar $64,000,000, Set New Washington Record

A $64,000,000 increase brought total deposits of Washington banks to a new record high of $437,110,091 as of April 4, 1941.

The 22 active banks here revealed their deposits yesterday following a call for condition of all national banks issued by Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency. The call was about a week later than expected, last year's call coming on March 26. On the latter date in 1940, deposits in the Capital were $373,066,721 and the comparison with latest figure showed a gain of exactly $64,043,370.

Comparing the April 4 aggregate with that of the year end, the deposit increase for the first three months totaled $17,418,201. On December 31, 1940, deposits were $419,691,889.

Some of the noteworthy gains comparing April 4 deposits with nearest 1940 date, included: Riggs National, up $23,015,444; American Security & Trust Co., up $5,522,765; City Bank, up $2,926,501; Hamilton National, up $5,044,890; Liberty National, up $2,679,196; National Metropolitan, up $2,673,184; Washington Loan & Trust Co., up $4,097,862.

Not a single bank showed a deposit decrease. Comparative deposits on the respective call dates were as follows:

S. S. Kresge Co.

S. S. Kresge Co. reported March sales of $12,256,305, a decline of 4.9 per cent from $12,895,241 in March last year. Sales of $33,089,951 for the first three months of the year were 1.6 per cent ahead of the comparable 1940 period.

Cities Service Units Reported Mapping Refunding Issues

New York, April 7 (AP).—Refunding operations by two intermediate holding companies of Cities Service Co. were reported today to be under consideration.

The companies concerned, controlling utility properties, are Cities Service Power & Light Co. and Federal Light & Traction Co.

In the case of the former, it was said new obligations may be issued to refund about $51,000,000 of 5½ per cent debentures. The Federal Light refunding would provide for payment of $7,936,000 of 5 per cent first lien bonds due March 1, 1942, and redemption of $2,500,000 of 6 per cent dubentures.

The suggested operations were regarded as aimed toward expediting compliance with the public utilities act of 1935.

Steel Firm Removes Royalty Restrictions

Pittsburgh, April 7 (AP).—The Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation reported today it had removed royalty restrictions on the manufacture of tools from its DBL low-tungsten, high-speed tool steel, as a step toward conservation of the Nation's strategically important supply of tungsten.

The company's DBL is a patented molybdenum high-speed steel which the company claims contains less than one-third the amount of tungsten in ordinary high-speed steels.

Granting of royalty-free, nonexclusive licenses for use of DBL is expected, the company said, to reduce the consumption of tungsten by high-speed steel users and free part of the supply for use in other defense industries.

Slab Zinc Supplies Reach 30-Year Low

New York, April 7 (AP).—Stocks of slab zinc in the hands of domestic producers at the end of March totaled 6,969 tons, equal to about three day's needs at the current rate of shipments and the lowest in nearly 30 years, figures released today by the American Zinc Institute disclosed. This compared with the revised total of 7,086 at the end of February.

Stocks declined despite a jump in production to 63,366 tons, highest on record. In the short month of February output totaled 56,334 tons.

Winter Wheat Crop Promises To Set New High Since 1938

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 7.—A new United States winter wheat crop, unfolding like a huge fan, is showing its northward spread of green at the start of the 1941 growing season that promises a bumper harvest within two or three months.

Crop experts who have examined greening wheat fields almost acre by acre after the rigors of winter reported only one sizable trouble zone in the entire belt. This is in an area extending roughly from central Nebraska east into northwestern Missouri, touching portions of Iowa and Nebraska.

Elsewhere, due to the best moisture supply in several years, the picture is about as perfect as grain experts have seen since 1931 when a record crop of 822,000,000 bushels was raised. The 1941 harvest, however, does not promise to be that large, partly because the acreage to be threshed was estimated at around 40,000,000 acres compared with 43,448,000 harvested in 1931.

On the basis of present market prices, the new crop might be worth more than 90 cents a bushel at Chicago, compared with less than 70 cents when harvesting was under way last year. If more than 90 cents is quoted at Chicago when threshers go to work late in May and June, it would be the highest price since 1937. In 1931 the figure was below 60 cents.

Chicago experts who analyzed the crop picture estimated the harvest at between 609,000,000 and 621,000,000 bushels, compared with last year's production of 589,000,000 bushels. Such a crop would be the largest since 1938 and would go far toward meeting domestic requirements of around 700,000,000 bushels for the season beginning July 1. Added to it will be the normal spring wheat crop, planting for which was just begun. This might make more than 800,000,000 bushels, to which will be added a carryover of nearly 380,000,000 bushels, making a domestic supply close to 1,200,000,000 bushels, the largest since 1931.

After the winter crop was seeded last fall, the Department of Agriculture issued a preliminary forecast that production would reach 633,000,000 bushels. Studies by Chicago agronomists the past few weeks indicated acreage abandonment was well below normal. A large part of the loss that occurred in the trouble area was attributed to an unexpected freeze last Armistice Day, some rainfall deficiency and another storm period in mid-March.

Gross Income Of Banks Up $16,330,000

Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, reported yesterday that the country's 5,150 national banks had $864,749,000 gross earnings last year. The figure was $16,330,000 more than was earned by the 5,193 national banks in existence in 1939.

Expenses were slightly higher last year. Dividends to stockholders totaled $145,273,000 last year with $139,487,000 in 1939.

Bank Reports Called

The Comptroller of the Currency yesterday issued a call for a statement of the condition of all national banks at the close of business Friday, April 4.

The Federal Reserve Board issued a similar call to the State banks belonging to its system. Altogether, 6,486 banks were asked to reveal details of their deposits and other liabilities and assets.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which issues such requests only twice a year, did not issue a call.

Bank Clearings Spurt

Easter shopping and other factors swelled check transactions throughout the Nation last week.

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday said that during the week ended April 2, banks in 274 leading cities cashed $11,768,000,000 worth of checks, compared with $9,695,000,000 the preceding week and $10,378,000,000 in the corresponding week last year. First of the month transactions also increased the margin over the preceding week.

The Richmond District, which includes Washington, reported check transactions totaled $408,000,000 in the week ended April 2, against $341,000,000 a year ago.

Four Receive Honor

Edward H. Von Deck, Roger M. Stuart, H. R. Fredenburgh, and Lena Hitchcock, of the Washington agency, have achieved membership in the "Dependables," honor organization of the Connecticut Mutual Life, according to word received here yesterday by John L. McElfresh, general agent.

P.-C. A. Traffic Gains

The Pennsylvania-Central Airlines reported yesterday that its Washington station showed a 17 per cent increase in revenue passenger traffic during March as compared with the same month last year. The entire system showed a 34.5 per cent in March.

For the first quarter of 1941, P.-C. A. reported 45,064 revenue passengers against 31,515 in the same period of 1940, or an increase of 43 per cent.

Scripps-Howard Plan Gets Final Approval

Cincinnati, April 7 (AP).—An agreement for consolidation of seven holding and investment companies of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers into the Scripps-Howard Investment Co. will be filed within a few days, the result of action taken today by stockholders of the Managers' Finance Co., one of the seven.

Shareholders of three units with Ohio charters approved the proposal here last week and on Friday stockholders of three Delaware corporations in Wilmington, Del.

Harold E. Neave, secretary of the Scripps-Howard chain, said the move was designed to effect operation economies and simplify the corporate structure.

United Corp. Passes Preferred Dividend

New York, April 7 (AP).—Directors of the United Corporation, a leading utility investment company, today passed the quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the preferred stock. The previous quarterly payment of 75 cents on the preference shares was voted in January.

Under the Delaware laws to which it is subject, the company cannot pay on the senior stock if the value of its assets is below the stated value of the stock. The stock has a stated value of $50 a share against a liquidating value of $43.49 on the basis of Saturday's final prices.

Gas Firm Revenues Off 1.4% in Month

New York, April 7 (AP).—January revenues of manufactured and natural gas utilities totaled $91,621,500, a decline of 1.4 per cent from January, 1940, when abnormally low temperatures prevailed, the American Gas Association said today.

Manufactured gas sales in January totaled 37,949,600,000 cubic feet, a decrease of .6 of 1 per cent from a year ago. Natural gas sales of 151,963,100,000 cubic feet were 1.4 per cent higher.

Chicago Banks Lead in Week's Credit Upturn

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks had increased for the twenty-seventh consecutive week under stimulus of the defense program.

In 101 leading cities the increase was $45,000,000 for the week ended April 2. Principal gains were $17,000,000 in the Chicago district and $9,000,000 in New York City.

During the 27 weeks, banks in the 101 cities have increased their business loans $830,000,000 to a total of $5,465,000,000. The total was $1,051,000,000 larger than a year ago.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on April 2 together with changes for the week and with the same week last year, in millions of dollars:

Hog Prices Jump In Lively Trading

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Hog prices soared 50 to 75 cents, with an extreme top at $9.10 in active dealings today. Cattle were mixed with steers weak, while yearlings were steady to strong. Sheep were firm.

With salable receipts down substantially from a year ago, buyers paid $9 freely for choice 190 to 230 pound weights. An extreme top of $9.10 was the highest price for hogs since September, 1939.

Strictly good steers closed 10 to 15 cents lower, but all yearling and choice weighty bullocks were steady to strong. Prime steers topped at $15, with the next highest price $13.75.

A top of $11.25 was paid for fed woolen Western lambs to shippers, packers and city butchers.

Balance of Nebraska Utility Bonds Offered

New York, April 7 (AP).—The unsold portion of $22,000,000 Consumers' Public Power District of Nebraska bonds, due 1942 to 1971, was offered publicly today by Blair & Co. and John Nuveen & Co. and associated firms.

The bonds, it was said, were placed on the market informally last week and all but $10,000,000 were sold.

A major part of the proceeds, the announcement said, was for purchase of electric properties of the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co. in Nebraska and the rest for improvements and working capital.

The bonds yield 2½ to 3½ per cent, according to maturity.

Balkan News Chills Stock Buying Interest; Leading Issues Inch Lower in Light Trading

New York, April 7.—Leading stocks inched downward under light selling pressure in today's market. The confusing foreign picture, including the Nazi invasion of the Balkans, received the main blame for the decline. At the same time, a slightly improved labor outlook at home and continued business optimism served to cushion the price fall.

The list was generally in arrears fractions from the start on, although scattered issues managed to contest the trend with modest advances. There were a few wider setbacks in small dealings.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .3 of a point at 41.9. Transfers of 359,770 shares were the lowest for a ful session since March 14. They compared with 704,920 last Friday.

To illustrate the meagerness of most losses, pivotals down ⅛ each were U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, National Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Consolidated Edison, United Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Westinghouse and Air Reduction.

Dropping a point or so were Bethlehem Steel, American Tobacco "B," Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak and J. I. Case.

Minor improvement was retained by Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., American Telephone, Sperry and Atlantic Coast Line.

Allis-Chalmers ended up 1⅛ on settlement of this company's lengthy strike. Oils were aided by further gasoline price boosts. Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting and Phelps Dodge wavered as talk was heard of the defense commission considering a 12-cent ceiling on copper quotations.

Announcement of National Steel that a 10-cent an hour wage increase had been granted workers for this corporation was seen as complicating matters for U. S. Steel. The walk-out scheduled for the latter's plants was postponed today while negotiations were resumed. Financial quarters appeared confident that if "Big Steel" meets the wage lift of National, higher prices of steel products would follow.

On the side of the optimists was the official estimate placing this week's steel mill operations up a shade from the week before, reports of the heaviest pre-Easter shopping in industrial areas since 1929, and early freight loading summaries for last week disclosing more traffic advances.

Bonds were irregularly lower and commodities uneven. Wheat at Chicago was off ½ to 1⅛ cents a bushel and corn was down ⅛ to ⅜. Cotton conceded 30 to 50 cents a bale.

Curb backsliders of fractions to a point or so were Bell Aircraft, American Cyanamid "B," Gulf Oil, Electric Bond & Share, Creole Petroleum and Brewster Aero. Gains were held by Montgomery Ward "A," Lake Shore and Glen Alden Coal. Volume here was around 57,000 shares against 110,000 in the preceding five-hour session.

Bonds' Listed Value Increases 2 Billion

New York, April 7 (AP).—Bonds listed on the Stock Exchange increased approximately $2,000,000,000 in quoted values during March, figures made public by the exchange today showed.

On March 31 the $55,746,347,782 face value of bonds had a market value of $52,252,053,607, or 93.73 per cent of face value.

At the end of February market value was $50,277,456,796, or 92.72 per cent of face value.

Wheat Slump Follows New Nazi Thrust

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Wheat prices dropped a cent or more today in an erratic trade that reflected nervousness and caution of dealers who once more were preoccupied with news of a new German thrust in Europe.

Although the market effect of hostilities in the Balkans, Europe's breadbasket, remained uncertain, many traders took their cue for action from easiness of securities. A certain amount of profit taking and hedging associated with increased movement of grain also was in evidence, with many of the transactions regarded as evening-up accounts for any eventuality.

Wheat rose ½ cent in early dealings but later showed extreme net losses of as much as 1⅝ cents. The close was ½-1¼ lower than Saturday; May, 91¾-91⅝; July, 90⅛-90¼. Corn closed ⅛-⅜ off; May, 67-66⅞; July, 67⅝. Oats ¼ off to ⅜ up. Soybeans ½-1⅜ lower. Rye 1¼-2⅛ higher, and lard unchanged to 5 lower.

Some of the early strength in wheat was associated with sharp gains in the rye market, where prices were up more than 3 cents at one stage to the best levels since November.

Chevy Chase Group Urges O'Conor Veto Jai Alai Measure

The Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, Section 4, last night adopted strongly worded resolutions asking Gov. O'Conor to veto the jai alai referendum bill and the bill authorizing a county liquor dispensary system in Montgomery County.

Clarence E. Dawson was elected president of the organization to succeed Elmer M. Pusey. Edgar B. Young was chosen vice president, and Mrs. Robert N. Denham was reelected secretary treasurer. Young, H. T. Wnesel and Wilton Eyer will serve as delegates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Carolina Train Wreck Kills Two

Andrews, N. C., April 7 (AP).—A Southern Railway passenger train left the tracks and crashed down a 60-foot embankment into Valley River, seven miles east of here at 2:40 p. m. today, killing Engineer Fred Bourne, 45, and Fireman J. O. M. Zimmerman, 45, both of Asheville.

The sole passenger car swung back against the mountainside on the other side of the tracks. None of the 15 passengers was injured.

U. S. to Send Over Men If Needed, Rizley Says

Woodward, Okla., April 7 (U.P.)—Representative Ross Rizley (Republican), Oklahoma, said today it was the "concensus of Congressional leaders" that America will send an expeditionary force to Europe "if Britain cannot handle Germany."

In a speech before the Woodward Chamber of Commerce, Rizley also predicted that the United States will send convoys to Europe "if that is what it takes to get materials over to the Allies."

"This is not my opinion, but it is the concensus of Congressional leaders," Rizley said.

3 U. S. Officers Reach Cairo as Observers

Cairo, Egypt, April 7 (AP).—Three more United States Army officers, experts on mechanized forces, reached Cairo today to join an already sizable staff of American official observers in the Mideast war theater. They are to report on British requirements in this area.

The latest arrivals are Maj. George W. Read, jr., formerly of Fort Knox, Ky.; Lieut. Col. Edwin W. Piburn, formerly of Fort Benning, Ga., and Maj. Francis P. Tomkins, cavalry officer formerly stationed at Washington, D. C.

IN MEMORIAM.

HANDLEY, LEO EDWARD—In sacred memory of our beloved son and brother, LEO EDWARD HANDLEY, who departed this life one year ago, April 7, 1940.

Son, if we had seen you at the last,
And held your loving hands,
Or heard the last sigh from your heart,
We would not feel so bad.

We do not know what you bore,
We did not see you die;
We only know you went away
And did not say good-bye.

Amen.

THE LONESOME FAMILY.

THERE IS NO RECORD OF ANY MONEY—
NO STOCKS—NO BONDS—ONLY A VERY MODEST BANK ACCOUNT—
YOUR UNCLE WAS VERY ECCENTRIC—HE THOUGHT THE WORLD WAS GOING TO THE DOGS SO HE CONVERTED HIS FORTUNE INTO CASH FIVE YEARS AGO—SOLD EVERYTHING HE HAD—EXCEPT THIS HOUSE—
BUT THE MONEY—AFTER ALL, IT COULDN'T VANISH INTO THIN AIR!
THERE IS NO RECORD OF IT—HE MUST HAVE SPENT IT—
AND I THOUGHT I'D LOST OUT ON A FORTUNE—CONGRATULATIONS, MY DEAR COUSIN—ALL YOU'VE GOT IS THIS TUMBLE DOWN RUIN OF A HOUSE—AND YOU'VE GOT TO LIVE IN IT!

Hardly a week goes by, it seems, that Hollywood doesn't discover some pretty fine talent at Washington's radio station WJSV.

A couple of weeks ago it was Alice Winstead, WJSV vocalist, who was invited out to make a guest appearance on Al Pearce's C. B. S. network show from there.

Now this week it has beckoned the photogenic and knowledgable young Mr. Eric Sevareid, who's C. B. S.'s Washington correspondent presently detailed at the radio station.

Eric, who was C. B. S's Paris correspondent up to the time of France's fall and who subsequently was stationed in London for several months, is to take part in a new Warner Brothers film, called "Underground." Hazarding a fine, brave guess, it's our surmise that it has something to do with life in bomb shelters.

He expects to spend about a week in the film capital and while he's gone from Washington his daily network news show from WJSV will be taken over by the versatile John Charles Daly.

Eric's film debut brings to four the number of C. B. S.'s correspondents being seen as well as heard. William Shirer, C. B. S. Berlin correspondent, and Linton Wells are in the current short, "International Forum," and Ed Murrow, C. B. S.'s London man, does the commentary for the new English feature called "This Is England," in which he appears.

The Post Radio Highlights

8:30, WRC—Last Thursday when Horace Heidt's Pot o' Gold called, a Washingtonian was the lucky man. Heidt's Treasure Chest is on tonight and Horace and his Knights are bound for an F Street engagement opening Thursday. What was that, Horace, a plug?

9:30, WOL—Morton Gould, Mutual's pride and joy in the conductor-composer field, does his part for the Good Neighbor spirit. He's composed a "Latin American Symphonette" in four movements—Rhumba, Tango, Guaracho and Conga. It will be short-waved to Central and South America.

9:30, WJSV—No sooner do we tell you all about Invitation to Learning's tricky rebroadcast transcriptions for Washington, than zoom—now we hear the lit'rary show while the rest of the country gets it. Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" is the subject tonight for Huntington Cairns, Mark Van Doren and Allen Tate.

10:30, WMAL—Joe Louis defends his title against Tony Musto, of St. Louis, in a 15-round battle.

Trade Board Opposes Annex Street Closing

The proposed closing of Virginia Avenue at Nineteenth Street Northwest to make way for a planned annex t. the Pan American Union Building was opposed unanimously yesterday by the Board of Trade traffic committee.

The group, meeting at luncheon in O'Donnell's Restaurant, 1221 E Street Northwest, recommended that further studies be made before permission is granted for the structure.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, told the committee that plans were being considered to situate the building in such a manner that Virginia Avenue traffic would not be hampered. He declined to amplify his statement, explaining "we've just begun to talk it over."

It was estimated by John Victory, committee member, that District taxpayers would be forced to pay approximately $150,000 if the street is closed and traffic along Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets is rerouted. This, he said, would include necessary changes in streetcar tracks and street repavings.

"Erection of the structure on the present proposed site," said Victory, "would 'hamstring' traffic in the vicinity."

The committee also voted to approve the installation of additional parking meters in the downtown area, stipulating that receipts go into the highway fund. Opposition to the proposed closing of Van Ness Street Northwest to protect Bureau of Standards property also was registered.

Bureau officials have urged the Commissioners to close Van Ness Street from Connecticut Avenue to Reno Road so a fence may be erected around the property.

Paper Bag Bandit Pleads Guilty To 8 Indictments

Washington's "paper bag bandit," Charles R. Vanderhuff, 26, pleaded guilty yesterday to eight indictments charging robbery and two cases of assault with intent to commit robbery, before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in Criminal Court No. 1 of District Court.

Vanderhuff was named the "paper bag bandit" by police because he entered stores with a pistol in a paper bag on which was written "This is a holdup." He was arrested February 27.

Before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in Criminal Court No. 3 of District Court, Vanderhuff previously had pleaded guilty and then changed his plea to innocent because his lawyer was absent. Justice Goldsborough is expected to impose sentence later this week.

"I can't afford to stop work"

—if this fits your case, then, here is an easy way to protect your strength... to generate new power

how you may be able to overcome that tired, run-down feeling sluggish digestion

poor appetite

THOUSANDS and thousands of men and women have testified to the benefits S.S.S. has brought them.

The facts are simple, though a low red blood condition is often most deceptive.

Wear and strain of worry, overwork, colds, and sickness often reduce one's blood strength.

Now you may rebuild this strength by restoring your red blood to normal, in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection, with the famous S.S.S. Tonic.

S.S.S. acts two ways

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways . . . first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

If you can't afford to stop work . . . if there are loved ones dependent on you for support . . . you owe it to them and to yourself to start now on a course of S.S.S. Tonic.

enjoy better health

S.S.S. may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again . . . it helps build sturdy health . . . that's why so many say it "makes you feel like yourself again."
